Dr. McPherson presented a report in regard to the cutting of ice, a question that was left with him and Dr. Young for investigation. "For the reason that notice had not been given sufficiently early, it was suggested to Mr. Allin that two qualities of ice be cut, one for cooling purposes and the other for domestic use. Butchers, storekeepers, hotels and others are to be supplied with ice for cooling purposes only. A notice shall be attached on refrigerators to indicate to icemen that they are for ice for cooling purposes only, and to warn those who might take ice out of them that it is not for domestic use. If any one takes ice out of such refrigerators for domestic purposes the responsibility rests with them. Mr. Allin was to be allowed to cut all the ice he wished from the Little Lake under this restriction, and it was decided to work out a plan by which the public will be protected. This was satisfactory to Mr. Allin. The ice for domestic purposes will be delivered from separate wagons."

Moved by Mr. Neill, seconded by Mr. Kernaghan, that this matter be left with Dr. McPherson and Dr. Young to see that the provisions are carried out along the lines indicated to protect the public of Peterborough. Carried.

GASWORKS REPORT.

Dr. McPherson also presented the following report regarding the Gasworks:

At your last meeting I was asked to report on the condition at the Gas works in view of a complaint that came in from those living in the neighbourhood. The chief complaints were against the smoke, the odors of gas, the dangers from explosions and fires.

Through the kindness of Mr. Munro, the general manager of the Power Company, I was shown over the premises. The smoke nuisance is due to the use of soft coal which is used in the furnace. This can be remedied somewhat by proper stoking and by making some repairs to the furnace. This Mr. Munro assured me would be done.

The odor of gas seems to be due to refuse oil that has been thrown out on the surface of the ground, until the ground has been saturated. In the cold weather this is scarcely perceptible. As soon as possible in the spring this waste of the refuse oil will be remedied, and possibly the odor almost eliminated. Mr. Munro says that there is absolutely no escape of gas from the large containers, and very little from any other part. It is to their advantage to prevent any leakage or waste in the manufacturing of the gas.

The explosions complained of result in the manufacturing of the gas, and occur about every twelve minutes. They report that very seldom are the explosions loud enough to disturb, and there is no danger resulting from them. While examining the premises the "explosion" occurred, but no noise resulted.

The danger from fires has been eliminated; the wooden structure has been replaced by a fireproof building.

There are a number of houses on Queen st., from Simcoe st. to Hunter st., and on Hunter st. to the Quaker Oats siding, that are affected by the gas plant on account of their proximity. That the gas plant is objectionable to these people is undoubted. To what extent it is a menace to health would be difficult to estimate. The noise and danger from the explosions and fires can be left out of consideration. The odor from gas and oil is not so noticeable in the winter on account of the cold weather and snow, and because of the fact that less gas is produced in the winter time. The amount of annoyance will vary with the wind. The oppressive summer weather would also tend to increase the nuisance by keeping any surface gases or odors close to the ground.

The smoke nuisance is one that will have to be dealt with all over the city wherever soft coal is used. All cities have the same trouble. Possibly a smoke by-law could be framed similar to what is found in other cities that would reduce this to a minimum.

Mr. Munro assured me that he would be very willing to co-operate with the Board of Health in the matter of removing any nuisance that could be eliminated from the plant.

It was decided not to do anything with this report, as Mr. Munro had promised to do whatever he could, and

LAWRENCE STRIKE IS OVER

HOT FIGHTING IN TRIPOLI

Both Turks and Italians Claim Victory and it is Impossible to Get Authentic News—Hundreds Were Wounded on Both Sides.

Special to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, ONT., MARCH 13.—Sir William Ralph Meredith this morning commenced investigating into the Farmers Bank. The evidence dealt chiefly with the organization of the Bank, and the granting of its certificate. Several members of Parliament told of their connection with the development and operation of this institution.

FIERCE FIGHTING.

BENGHAZI, TRIPOLI, MARCH 13—Fierce fighting is reported to-day, some miles from here, in which all the arms of service, including the deadly airships, were engaged. Both sides claim a victory, and it is impossible to get authentic news from independent sources. Hundreds of wounded on both sides, have been brought in here and orders given to prepare for a thousand more. The wounded state hundreds of their comrades were killed. Shells from airships wrecked fearful havoc among the troops.

STRIKE OVER.

LAWRENCE, MASS., MARCH 13.—The great textile strike practically came to an end at 11.30 to-day, when a sub-committee of strikers accepted a schedule increase of wages offered by Wm. M. Wood, president of the American Woollen Co. The strikers announced that they had gained virtually every concession asked when the strike was declared nine weeks ago.

CHINESE SITUATION.

PEKIN, MARCH 13. — General Sheng Yun, who, under the Empire, held the post of Governor of the Province of Shen Si, is marching at the head of ten thousand troops from the Provinces of Kansu to Pekin, in order to restore the Emperor to the throne. President Yuan Shi Kai has sent envoys to meet him and explain the present situation.

THE BUGLE BAND MINSTRELS SCORE ANOTHER SUCCESS

Bobby Beach's Bugle Band Boys repeated their minstrel performance at the Grand Opera House last night and won favour with a fairly large audience. The entertainment was bright and snappy all through, with a first part marked by catchy music, capably handled by the soloists and chorus alike, six end men that were really funny and whose "stuff" was localized and therefore most striking, and a second part that contained a number of novelties exceedingly well presented. The boys of the Bugle Band and their energetic director, Mr. Beach, deserve great credit for the successful performance. With a few exceptions the cast was chosen from the buglers and drummers, and their work was thoroughly meritorious.

The end men whose funny work kept the audience convulsed with laughter, were Messrs. Al. Spenceley, Mat Drysdale, Walter Fitzgerald, Will Sharpe, Percy Stock and W. Spenceley. Their end songs were splendidly rendered and they had a lot of bright dialogue which they got over in finished fashion with the assistance of Mr. Beach as interlocutor. Here are some of the "daffydills":

"If the town clock was to strike in Hamilton, would Owen Sound? No, but Collingwood."

"If a diamond will cut glass, will Spenceley's Fish Market?"

All of them made a hit with their songs.

A feature of the first part was the singing of the Art Quartette composed of Messrs. Cunningham, Walton, Zepp and Miller, whose offering was enthusiastically encored.

Space will not permit of an individual reference to each of the soloists. It is sufficient to say that their efforts were thoroughly enjoyed and that in every case an encore was demanded. Following was the programme for the first part:

"I'd Love to Live a Loveland"—W. Allen.

"Just an Old Friend of the Family"—A. Spenceley.

"When Cupid Comes a'Tapping"—P. Neill.

"Alexander's Rag Time Band"—W. Fitzgerald.

"If I'm Going to Die, I'm Going to Have Some Fun"—M. Drysdale.

"I Want a Girl"—T. Sarginson.

"My Name is Morgan"—W. Sharpe.

"All Alone"—E. LeBar.

"The Mysterious Rag"—P. Stock.

"Steam Boat Bill"—S. Gibbs.

"Silver Threads Among the Gold"—W. Edwards.

Ark Quartette — Messrs. Cunningham, Walton, Zepp and Miller.

"Honey I Will Long For You"—G. Raley.

"The Colville Coon Cadets" — W. Spenceley.

The second part was opened by a very enjoyable musical turn by Otto and Paul Gliddon, the little sons of Mr. Rupert Gliddon of the Conservatory. The little musicians contributed a cornet and clarionet duet in splendid manner and also gave solos on their respective instruments.

Frank Clarke's offering was a banjo solo, played in his best style and he added enjoyment to his act by the singing of an old time darkey song.

Walter Fitzgerald and Al Spenceley got away with some great stories in their dialogue.

Mat. Drysdale gave a clever exhibition of baton swinging, using one and two clubs, and his work was warmly applauded.

A rube song by Walter Fitzgerald with a number of local references interpolated made a hit with the audience, as did Al Spenceley in his song "Let Me Down Easy," which was rendered in classy style.

Tom Sarginson's sketch was very amusing and his parodies were well handled.

A rube dance by four of the company was one of the most amusing items on the programme and brought a thoroughly delightful entertainment to a close.

Hands Were Badly Frozen

Man Arrested in the West End in a Terrible Condition

A middle aged man, bearing all evidences of being slightly demented, was arrested a few hours ago, in the West end of the city. A cursory examination of the man revealed the fact that his hands had been badly frostbitten and he was otherwise in a bad condition, physically. He gave his name as Archie Melvin, and appeared to have undergone severe hardship, which is thought to have been responsible for his defective mental condition.

One hand was tied up in a bandage and appeared to be badly swollen. The other was exposed and the darkened hue of the fingers only too well denoted the severity of the frostbite. Dr. McPherson was summoned and his injuries were attended to. In the meantime he will remain in the custody of the police until a further investigation has been made.

BILL WAS PASSED

After a Whole Day of Ceaseless Fighting Manitoba Boundary Measure Gets Third Reading at 4 a.m. To-day

NATIONALISTS STICK

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, MARCH 13.—At five minutes after four this morning, amid a roar of Government cheers, the Manitoba Boundary Bill got its third reading after a whole day of ceaseless fighting.

The last division bells rang at ten minutes to four, and when the amendment, moved by Hon. H. S. Beland, calling for a conference between the Government of Manitoba and the Dominion was put to a vote, it was voted down by 107 to 59, or a Government majority of fifty-five, every Nationalist sticking to the Government on this. As each Nationalist rose to side with the Conservatives, he was received with Liberal jeers and much comment. The temper of the Liberals had been somewhat severely tried by the previous amendments, moved by Nationalist Mondou, for which many of them voted, but when the final show-down came on the main question of the day, the Nationalists lined up to a man with the Conservative Government.

GRIP TAKEN FROM STATION

Quantity of Razor Strops and Other Articles Were Stolen —Were Hidden But Someone Else Discovered the Cache and Removed the Haul.

A traveller's grip having been placed for a few moments on the platform of the G.T.R. station this morning, just prior to the arrival of the noon train, was confiscated by two boys, whose youth occasions the withholding of their names.

The bag contained travellers samples in the way of knives, razors and like articles, which were valued at fifty dollars. The youths, it is said, hid some of the articles in Wolstenholme's wood shed and others in the Grand Union yard, but when a search was made no trace of the stolen goods could be found. The lads are also understood to have sold a razor strop to one man for fifteen cents and another to a second man for twenty-five cents. Their escapade was suddenly cut short by the appearance of Detective Newhall.

Schedule Arranged For Junior Cup Games—Finals On March 21st

Arrangements have been made for the games for the Clarke-Graham Cup, between the Northern Lights, Thistles and Midgets of Peterborough and the St. John's Club of Lakefield. The semi-final games will be played at Brock Street Rink on Tuesday night next, March 19th, with Fred Kelly as referee. The schedule for the night will be as follows:

8 to 9 o'clock—Midgets vs. Northern Lights.

9 to 10 o'clock—Thistles vs. Lakefield.

The finals will be played on Thursday night, March 21st.

The Twentieth Century Train Is Wrecked

Special Wire to the Examiner.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N.Y., MARCH 13.—The second section of the twentieth century limited, New York Central train, Chicago to New York, was wrecked near here this morning. Four cars were tipped over and slid into the ice on the river, but only four persons were slightly hurt and all went on to New York. The train was going at sixty miles an hour.

ALBERT JARVIS TO BE DEPORTED

Deportation Officer Develin Departed With His Man This Morning

Deportation Officer Develin arrived in the city this morning, and will take back to Montreal with him Albert Jarvis. The latter is being deported at the instance of the Department of Immigration, it being alleged that Jarvis has failed to live up to the agreement governing his immigration to this country. In the terms of the contract, which is issued by the Government, and is intended to assist those desiring to emigrate, who are unable to pay their own passage, Jarvis agreed to confine his labours to farm work. But, on arriving here, his friends dissuaded him from the course prescribed by the terms of the agreement, with the result that he will be deported. He has been here for about a year, and during that time has been employed at the C. G. E.

THE LAST ROLL CALL

This Annual Event Will be Held in the Old Murray St. Baptist Church For the Last Time

The annual roll call of Murray St. Baptist church will be held this evening, when the membership of the entire church will assemble. This event will be of more than passing interest, inasmuch as it will be the last roll call of the church membership that will be held in the old building. It is only a matter of weeks now until the handsome new structure will be completed and the passing from the old to the new will not occasion many regrets. For years the present edifice has been the scene of the activities of the enterprising congregation of Murray street, whose work has outgrown the usefulness of the present structure.

And Found a Couple of Fish, Which He Did Not Seize.

Captain Carson, Fisheries Inspector, held up the Chemong stage this morning and made an examination with a view to ascertaining as to whether there were any fish aboard. A systematic search revealed two fish contained in a basket and in the custody of one of the lady passengers. The explanation given by the owner was to the effect that she was bringing them in to a sick friend in the city. The Inspector took the explanation offered and allowed the custodian of the fish to depart in peace.

ALBERTANS EXHIBIT WESTERN FARM PRODUCE

A party of business men from Camrose, Alta., arrived in the city this morning, in a G.T.R. publicity car, in which were exhibited specimens of the fruits of Albertan soil. The party is headed by Mr. G. P. Smith, M.P.P., editor of the Camrose Canadian, and accompanying him are Messrs. Harris, president Board of Trade; Frank L. Farley, member of Camrose Council; Frank P. Layton, Mayor of Camrose; Dennis Twomeely, ex-mayor; J. Watson Youngs; M. A. Maxwell, Town Engineer; Camille David and J. Sharman Fox, merchants.

We have nothing to sell, said Mr. Smith. Our sole aim is to give publicity to the advantages offered by the town of Camrose and the surrounding district. We have railroads in eight directions and two others anticipated. Seven coal mines are now in operation (two inside of the town limits) and coal may be obtained for $3.50 per ton in cellars. The town is only six years old, but has all modern conveniences—electric lights, waterworks, and sewers, hospital, Canadian Club, etc., and it is a splendid mixed-farming country.

The car, which is run by the Camrose Board of Trade, will leave for Lindsay at 5.35 this evening.

Charged With Non-Support

"Not guilty," pleaded Harry McDonald when confronted with a charge of non-support in the police court this morning.

Mr. G. N. Gordon, who appeared for the defendant asked for a remand in order that he might secure further evidence for the defence.

"Wouldn't it be a great deal better to settle these differences out of court?" inquired the magistrate.

"Yes," asserted the counsel for the defence. "There is a suggestion of differences that would be good for the defence if they were proven," added Mr. Gordon.

"Sending him to gaol won't supply bread for those dependent upon him," said his Worship.

With that he remanded the case for further hearing until Friday, March 15th.

Sleighing Party In Dummer

A very pleasant evening was spent on Tuesday evening the 5th, by a sleigh load of young people who journeyed to Spindrift Peak, the winter residence of J. F. Jory and Co. The night was an ideal one and the trip was a pleasant one. After spending some hours in games and tripping the light fantastic they returned home in the wee sma hours, but notwithstanding the lateness, some of the ladies and gentlemen took the opportunity of having a partners foot race on the roads. Among the party were ladies from Hastings, Whitby and Bridgetown, and also Mr. E. Bichell of Cobourg, who acted in a very efficient manner as floor manager.—Com.

PUMPING UNIT REJECTED BY COMMISSIONERS

Mr. Wm. Kennedy's Report to Water Commissioners Acted Upon —Pump Too Noisy Was Opinion of Members

OVER YEAR UNDER ERECTION

A meeting of the Water Commissioners was held on Tuesday afternoon, with Mr. T. F. Matthews presiding, and Mr. W. H. Hill and Mr. W. H. Moore present.

Mr. Matthews stated that he had received another communication from Mr. Lester of the John McDougall Caledonian Iron Works Company, Montreal, asking for a definite decision in regard to the pumping unit the company had installed at the Peterborough pumping station.

This pump has recently been completed and Mr. Wm. Kennedy's report as engineer did not satisfy the Board of Commissioners that the pump was what they wanted.

Mr. Lester a few weeks ago suggested that the city take over the pumping unit for a year and that the city then have permission to refuse it. He also suggested that a partial payment be made in the meantime. The Commissioners expressed themselves as dissatisfied with the pump, principally on account of the noise made by the helical gear which was used in the unit and which Mr. Lester practically admitted to the Commissioners was then a new idea they were using. The present pump has been quie a time under construction and while its good points were appreciated, the Commissioners decided to follow Mr. Kennedy's report on it.

Moved by Mr. Moore, seconded by Mr. Hill, that the John McDougall Caledonian Iron Works Co. Ltd., be notified that the Water Commissioners have decided to stand by the report of their engineer for the removal of the turbine pumping unit and request the McDougall Co. to comply therewith.—Carried.

A report was read from the Acting Superintendent on a petition for a main on Wolfe street, from Stewart to Bethune street, giving the estimated cost at $427.50; estimated revenue from services $21.50 and from frontages $6.60. Total $28.60.

Moved by Mr. Moore and Mr. Hill that the petitions for mains be given out from and received at the office of the Superintendent and given to the Commissioners with the Superintendent's report on them.—Carried.

A letter was read from G. W. Maley, asking for an increase in salary.

Moved by Mr. Hill, seconded by Mr. Moore, that Mr. Maley be paid at the rat eof $66.66 a month from March 1st, 1912.—Carried.

THE GRAIN BILL TROUBLE.

The new Grain Act of the Borden Government is not satisfactory to the western farmers, or anybody else except themselves. The lowering of the standard of No. 3 Manitoba barley would make the grade unmerchantable as malting barley. The terminal elevators are allowed to charge one-thirtieth of a cent per day on all kinds of grain until loaded on boats or cars, thereby placing a heavy burden on the shippers, and all the oats wheat and barley described as sound is not required to be free from frost. Messrs. Sharpe of Lisgar, and Chaffner of Souris, Conservatives, voted against their party on the third reading of the bill. The gain men complain that the Minister of Trade and Commerce has failed to grasp the situation, and that Mr. Borden has failed to keep his promises. Taking everything into consideration, the present Administration are making something of a mess of affairs, and seem better adapted to sowing the dragon's teeth of sectional, racial and religious discord than dealing equitably and satisfactorily with the grain interests of the west.

THE OLIVER CHARGES.

Previous to the general elections and during their progress, a great outcry was raised regarding some charges or insinuations against Hon. Frank Oliver, Minister of the Interior. It appears that somebody discovered that Mr. Oliver had something like $60,000 to his credit in the bank. The ingenious insinuation was made that he was improperly possessed of this money—that a Minister of the Crown had no right to have so much money—that he could not have got it honestly—it must have been the proceeds of the sale of official influence, etc. So much fuss was made of the matter that it was submitted to investigation, and the Laurier government was denounced because the investigation did not proceed more rapidly. Parliament was dissolved before the investigation was concluded and an outcry was made that dissolution was one of the means employed to stifle investigation and cover a great scandal. Contrary to expectations, the Conservative government came into power, and then we were assured that justice would be done; that Hon. Mr. Oliver's wrong-doings would be exposed. The action of the Borden government in this matter has not been of the most generous kind. Instead of at once making investigations, the accused minister was allowed to rest under the odium of the charges made, and it was announced in the House a day or two ago that there would be no further investigation. At least this is the inference. A member has had a question on the order paper for months, asking whether the charges against Mr. Oliver were to be proceeded with. Time after time when the question came up, it was allowed to "stand," and when it came up again on Monday, it was "dropped" by the government. This is a rather sneaky way of disposing of a charge against the honour of a former minister. The charges should have either been formally withdrawn, with the understanding that there was no foundation for them, or have been given full investigation. But the Borden government is kept too busy defending itself and trying to square itself with its pre-election pledges, that it has not time or inclination to pursue a charge against a political enemy, but abandons it in a way to show that even Mr. Oliver's enemies had no belief that there was any foundation for the abandoned charges, and still leave the possibility of asserting that Hon. Frank Oliver was the subject of serious charges that never have been disproved or cleared up.

The grain bill of the Borden government must be pretty bad when the grain section of the Toronto Board of Trade severely condemns it. Toronto sends a solid contingent of supporters to the government, yet even the faithful can't swallow the bungle of the grain bill.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

One of the big, progressive planks of the Borden government platform was government ownership or control of terminal grain elevators. Yet the government has passed a grain bill longer than the British North American Act, and there was not found room to squeeze in a clause providing for government control of terminal elevators.

A series of seven mass meetings will be held in Toronto to listen to addresses entitled "Protestant, Educational Course," the foundation principle of Protestantism. These good people are beginning rather late in the day. People who have been ostensibly practising, and possibly living the doctrines of Protestantism all their lives, should not now need instruction upon what has been the supposed basis of their religious life. Addresses to teach adults the principles of their religion is a good deal like lectures to college graduates on the principles of the three Rs, or the simple rules of arithmetic. The cradle is the place to begin religious instruction.

STAY IN ONTARIO.

(London Advertiser)

There are just now particular reasons against the Ontario man's going west to farm. It becomes month by month more glaringly apparent that the defeat of reciprocity is a heavy setback to the prairie country. It means depression of prices for western produce so long as the American market is closed. Opportunity came, and she is held behind. The West is tied down to a European market and a narrow outlet through Eastern Canada.

Of course the prairie region will go on growing through its own momentum from vast productivity. Good crops will still be profitable, even if the price of wheat remains from 10 to 15 cents a bushel lower than in the United States. The profit will be due in part to the cheapness of the land; the land will have to be cheaper as an inducement. To Europeans and Americans needing land the west will still be a magnet. But it does not seem probable that the west can go on increasing at the expense of the older provinces which are so much nearer to the great markets and have an urban population of their own consuming to some extent their produce.

Some day the Hudson Bay route will help the west, the Pacific may be another highway bearing grain to markets of the future in Asia, but just now the eastern farmer may well keep hold of the bird in the hand. "Stay in Ontario" is the best advice to a young farmer to-day. The west is for the present bottled up.

WHOSE OX IS GORED NOW?

(London Advertiser)

Mr. Bourassa harangued a great crowd at Montreal Saturday night in his characteristic vein. It was a frank appeal to racial and religious feeling, directed chiefly against the Borden Government, with side thrusts at Sir Wilfrid Laurier as the author of the "outrage" to be perpetuated in New Manitoba by his successors.

Mr. C. H. Cahan, K.C., the former Conservative leader in the Nova Scotia Legislature, who seems to constitute in his own person the English wing of the Nationalist party, put upon Sir Wilfrid Laurier the chief responsibility for the oppression of the French-Canadian race. Laurier, he said, betrayed his compatriots in 1896, and they had themselves to blame, because they continued to give him magnificent majorities.

Bourassa, Cahan, and Lavergne were the chief assets of the Conservative party in Quebec in the federal election. Without their aid the Borden Government to-day would not have a comfortable working majority Their friendship was courted by the Conservative leaders. They were the heroes of the Ontario Conservative press. Every Quebec supporter of Borden in the House of Commons, excepting the few English Conservative members from that province, asked and received the support of Bourassa and Lavergne, and won his election on a race and creed cry. When Bourassa and Lavergne thundered against Laurier as a traitor to French-Canadian rights, they spread delight and joy through the ranks of his enemies in the English provinces. When they denounced the Laurier naval law as the wedge of conscription, and terrified the simple habitant by the picture of his sons being torn from to be disembowelled on British ships by German shot and shell, the professional flag-flappers in this province clapped their hands in glee.

To-day the Borden Government's chickens are coming home to roost with a vengeance. Bourassa and Lavergne are turning on the Government with the weapons they used against Laurier. The English Conservatives who cheered them on in September are now reviling them as mischief-making agitators. They were statesmen and patriots so long as they were making mischief for Laurier. The boot is on the other foot to-day.

Mr. Borden is himself largely to blame for the troubles now besetting him. He has encouraged and fostered the disintegrating cult of Nationalism from the time it took concrete form. When Nationalism first took shape, in the Drummond-Arthabaska bye-election, when the head of Sir Wilfrid Laurier on a charger was the Nationalist demand when Mr. Borden gave the Nationalist cause his moral support. He knew that Nationalism was, in its tendencies, hostile to Canadian national unity, British connection and imperial unity. The time for Mr. Borden to have combatted and destroyed Nationalism, at least in its organized form, was when it first raised its head in the Drummond-Arthabaska election. But he did not condemn it—he fostered it. It was a grand thing to use the Nationalist interest to lame Laurier—anything to beat Laurier. So Mr. Borden welcomed and embraced Nationalism, at least negatively. He permitted the whip of the Conservative party to send a message of congratulation to Mr. Gilbert, the first Nationalist elect. Thus encouraged, Nationalism ranged itself on the side of Mr. Borden. It helped him to the bulk of his support in the Province of Quebec, and even got him some support in "Protestant" Ontario. Mr. Bourassa was welcomed at Sudbury, and introduced by the president of the Conservative Association as "one of our leaders," and made an address in Mr. Borden's interests. If Mr. Borden is now meeting with trouble from his Nationalist support; if the viper he warmed in his bosom is showing signs of striking, even if not really meaning to strike, he has only himself to blame.

THE RIGHT WAY OF DEALING WITH JUVENILE CRIME

(Toronto Star)

Recently two gentlemen who have had large experience in dealing with the waifs of humanity spoke in Toronto—Mr. J. J. Kelso, Superintendent of Neglected Children for Ontario and Dr. Gilmour, Warden of the Central Prison for Ontario. Both emphasized the importance of the training of children. Both declared that homes were better for children than institutions. Dr. Gilmour said that most people, when they thought of reforming boys, thought of bricks and mortar. Mr. Kelso threw on a screen a picture of the old reformatory for boys at Penetang—a frowning castle of stone, with heavily-barred windows, built as if to resist the march of an invading army. This illustrated the wrong way. He showed numerous pictures of children rescued from an environment of crime or neglect, ad restored to physical and moral health by the environment of a good home. The right way. Let it be remembered that Mr. Kelso and Dr. Gilmour are not sentimentalists, or theorists, but practical men, experts in the business of caring for those who have fallen by the way.

We are thus thrown back to a truth which seems to be self-evident—that the home is the chief thing in the state—the prime nursery of good citizenship. The ideal home has in it all and more than all, that any other institution can supply. Under our present conditions there are defective homes. There are slums in the city, wretched hovels in the country—the latter, perhaps, owing to their isolation, worse even than city slums. The city, however, has its own problems, one of which is the need of playgrounds. It is impossible to provide every city house with its own space for play; hence the need for numerous public playgrounds, supervised by trained men and women; for, strange as it may appear, children need to be taught to play.

With all the care that can be exercised, there will be some homes that are not homes—where children are neglected, abused, brought up in ignorance and vice. For these children Mr. Kelso recommends, not institutions, but other homes—homes of childless people who yet love children and would be glad to care for them—homes in which for one reason or another there is room for a child. To change the environment of the child in this way is a work requiring the utmost delicacy and the utmost watchfulness, but it is a work well worth doing.

Institutions are needed for certain classes of children—for instance, for the feeble-minded, to whose case Dr. Helen MacMurchy has frequently drawn attention. These require to be isolated, for their own sake and for the sake of the community. Wandering about the community uncared for, they add enormously to the evil of illegitimacy; and this means that the defect is multiplied and passed on from generation to generation. At school feeble-minded children are often teased and persecuted by others. They need special treatment, and for many of them institutional care is the proper care.

If the child problem were thoroughly studied and worked out the problem of crime would be solved in great part. The breeding-grounds of crime and imbecility would be greatly diminished in area. Not many are really or hopelessly criminal. Many who begin with some trifling fault, perhaps the result of ignorance or bad training, drift into the ranks of crime. The barred and locked cell, the whip and the starvation diet, are largely the signs of the failure of society to deal intelligently with social problems.

AS MILLIONAIRES ARE MADE.

A Chicago Bank President Tells How to Become One.

Mr. John J. Mitchell, President of the Illinois Trust and Savings Bank, in the Chicago Tribune, tells of how one can become a millionaire:

"The question of success in life is one that interests every young man, and as he looks about him he often wonders how it is done. He sees men without the benefits of a college education, without the assistance of influential friends, reach success, while other men who have had the benefits of education, travel and help from friends have made a failure. He makes up his mind that it must be a question of luck. While there may be some element of luck in every successful man's career, it simply means that he had the ability to take advantage of an opportunity that offers in almost every man's lifetime.

"I remember a story told by one of our most prominent men. He and a young school friend, both just ready to launch out in the world, were sitting together wondering what they could do, and both agreed that the prospects for a young fellow were not what they had been, and the future looked dark. Twenty years later they met as successful men in different lines of business, and in reminiscing they found within that twenty years Lincoln, who was an obscure lawyer in Illinois, had made for himself a world-wide reputation; that Grant, unknown, had gained for himself a lasting place as one of the great generals of the world; Thomas Edison, an obscure electrician, had become world famous as an inventor; Huntington of the Union Pacific Railroad, who had been a mining prospector, had reached the head of one of the largest railway systems of the country; Rockefeller had risen from a bookkeeper to the head of the Standard Oil; and other notable cases could be mentioned, all within the time that these young fellows felt there were no opportunities.

The Opportunities in Banking.

"The banking world offers a splendid field for the ambitious young man. It may be interesting to relate briefly the story of a young man who left his farm home, arriving in one of our great cities with $25 in his pocket, all he had in the world. After a long search for work he was given a position as messenger in one of the city's smaller banks. Being endowed by nature with a good constitution and a determination to make good, he seen attracted the attention of his employers, and was given his first promotion, followed in due time by other advancements to positions of trust. At the end of a few years he had shown such marked ability that the directors, in looking around for a man to place at the head of the bank to succeed the president, who had died, concluded that he was a man brainy enough for the place and at the age of thirty-five he was made president.

"Under his wise and conservative administration the bank now occupies a place in the foremost ranks of the great financial institutions of the country.

"How did he do it?

"He has character, the kind which means the most valuable asset any man can be blessed with. Early in life he began to seek the companionship and society of the kind of men who would do him the most good—morally and financially—making friends and endeavouring to keep them.

Some Rules to Follow.

"He lived within his income and during his clerkship, at each advance in salary, did not immediately increase his living expenses nor move into a more expensive home, but abided the time when he knew that his savings and results of judicious investments would warrant him in assuming the position in society to which he had looked forward for so many years.

"This young man was a conservative optimist with confidence in himself and the future. He experienced many setbacks and hard jolts in his fight for recognition, as all successful men do, but unlike so many who try to dream themselves into wealth and position, he hammered and forged his way. His shoulders were not burdened with the proverbial chip, inviting somebody to knock it off.

"I have heard him repeat some of the rules which he endeavoured to follow through life:

"Loyalty to employers.

"A cheerful compliance with the rules laid down for the conduct of the firm's business, for, as he would say, by so doing more happiness and substantial gain will come my way than will be the lot of the clerk who succeeds only in antagonizing by his pessimistic attitude. Blunders and absurdities will creep in in every man's life; forget them as soon as you can and resolve to do better—and do it."

HON. G. P. GRAHAM TAKES HIS SEAT

OTTAWA, MARCH 12. — Amid scenes of infectious Liberal enthusiasm Hon. George P. Graham, the victor of South Renfrew, took his seat in the Commons this afternoon. It was a gala day for the Liberals. The galleries were thronged and the Opposition benches were gaily decorated. Mr. Graham's desk was adorned with a huge basket of American Beauty roses while the adjoining desk of "the Chief" was garlanded with flowers. Le Rouge predominated in decorative effect through all the benches to the left of the Speaker, and every Liberal member found a deep red rose resting upon his ink well.

Mr. Graham was escorted into the Chamber by Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Mr. Duncan C. Ross of West Middlesex. Liberalism has not forgotten how to cheer. Desks were thumped, hands clapped and voices joined in the acclaim, continuing moment after moment while the trio stood facing the mace. Finally Sir Wilfrid had to raise his hand to get his enthusiastic followers to desist from their cheering. He then formally introduced the member-elect to Mr. Speaker, who extended the customary handshake and invited the hon. member to take his seat.

The Government benches throughout the ceremony preserved an uncomfortable silence. Messrs. Monk, and Foster anceeeded in smiling, but Premier Borden's face was a picture of gloom, while Hon. Dr. Reid, with his hat tilted down over his eyes, stared moodily at his desk.

Then came an amusing counter-demonstration, engineered by the Minister of Customs. Mr. Webster, the member for Brockville, who had been standing at the back of the House during the preliminaries, went out into the corridor and around to the main entrance of the Chamber. As soon as Mr. Graham had taken his seat the doors again swung open to admit the member for Brockville, who walked down the centre of the bowed grandiloquently to the now-bowed grandiloquently to the new-cheering Conservatives, but his glory was short-lived.

"There is no circus without a clown," commented Dr. Michael Clark, and the Liberal benches roared with derisive and ironical laughter, during which the Brockville man rather precipitately hurried to his seat on the very back row.

The House then settled down to business.

THE LIFE OF FANNY CROSBY

(By Roy Gilray)

As long as the Christian civilization lasts, as long as hymns are sung, so long will Fanny Crosby's lyrics continue to sing themselves into the hearts and souls of the people. Thousands of hymns have sprung from her heaven-born inspiration. Blind almost from birth, she has been a shining example of patience, of sweetness of thought and life.

The privilege of meeting her is an inspiration in itself. While residing in New York a number of years ago I attended a Sunday afternoon service in the 23rd Street Branch of the Young Men's Christian Association, which was addressed by Mrs. Van Alstyne. (Fanny Crosby was her name before marriage).

Words can scarcely describe the feeling that came over me as I saw her being led into the room and up onto the platform by her faithful niece. There she stood, a little, stooped figure, dressed in sombre black, spectacled with dark square glasses, edged with heavy gold bands. In her hands she held a little book, which she fingered nervously all the time she was addressing the audience. She feels happier, she says, and more at ease, if she holds this little book in her hands, a habit learned earlier in life while teaching in the Smithsonian Institute for the Blind, in New York City.

While relating to us some incidents of her life, and the stories of the origin of a few of her hymns, she, as it were unconsciously, uttered several thoughts in beautiful rhythmic language, which her niece, ever alert for a new verse, hastily jotted down. Near the close of her remarks she explained that this was the manner in which she often received the inspiration for a new hymn.

The gathering of young men was thoroughly cosmopolitan in character, and in order to impress this on Mrs. Van Alstyne, the Secretary asked the young men to stand and announce the city and country of their birth. When it came to my turn I announced, "Peterborough, Canada, near Toronto" (In New York the average person thinks that Montreal, Toronto and Niagara Falls constitute nearly the whole of Canada).

After the meeting was over, as we sought to touch the hand of this most wonderful woman, she told me that her visit to Toronto during the great Christian Endeavour Convention was one of the happiest memories of her life. Grasping my hand, she said, "Oh, if New York were only like Toronto the Good!"

If spared till the 24th of March she will celebrate her 92nd birthday. Notwithstanding her great age she enjoys the best of health and expects to live to be 103. She says her mother lived to be 102 and she expects to improve on that record.

At birth, in 1820, her eyes were as good as any person ever had, but through the bungling of the family physician, who attempted to treat a slight inflammation, when she was six weeks old, she lost her sight altogether. In early life she many times bemoaned her fate that she could not satisfy the hunger of her soul after knowledge, but in later life she realized that it was God's purpose that she should live in physical darkness that she might be brought into closer touch with the Spirit World. While she has missed viewing the many beautiful things of this world, she has been spared the sight of many unpleasant scenes.

She was early taught the Bible. When ten years old she could recite the first four books of the Old and the first four books of the New Testament without a mistake, and secular poems without number. Hearing or reciting poetry made her write some, and at eight years she composed the following little poem:

"Oh, what a happy child I am,
Although I cannot see!
I am resolved that in this world
Contented I will be.

"How many blessings I enjoy
That other people don't!
So weep or sigh because I'm blind,
I cannot, nor I won't!"

This little effusion from her young heart clearly indicates the spirit in which she entered on her great career.

During the opening years of her girlhood she hungered for knowledge. She felt there were a million things she ought to know and had no means of knowing. If she ever lamented she was blind it was during this period—and that for only one cause: the fact that it debarred her from reading for herself. "Dear God, please give me light," was her prayer day by day.

When fifteen years old she received the joyful news that arrangements had been made for her to attend the school for the blind in New York. What a flood of joy shone in on the sad little soul that had so long pined for knowledge!

At length the great day arrived, and on March 3rd, 1835, she sorrowfully said farewell to the dear ones at home, as she turned her face towards the great metropolis from whence would come her mental light.

Her school days were one continual succession of revelations; the only thing that caused her any trouble was the Science of Numbers. In writing home she gave free rein to her poetic powers by composing:

"I loathe, abhor, it makes me sick
To hear the word Arithmetic!"

All the other subjects, however, she was passionately fond of, and filled with a resolve to help her dear mother, who was sacrificing so much for her that she might have an education, she determined to be a teacher.

Her study of biography interested her greatly, particularly the lives of those who had achieved fame and fortune, in spite of blindness. Such examples as Milton, who gave to the world "Paradise Lost," Ossian the Celtic king, and Homer, the greatest poet of antiquity, all spurred her on to greater enthusiasm.

Being blessed with good health she toiled on, day and night, in search of "light". So great was her progress that at the age of twenty-two she received an appointment on the staff of instructors to teach Grammar, Rhetoric, Ancient and Modern History.

All the while the sprite "Poetry" kept haunting her soul, but her Superintendent was fearful lest the notoriety which her poems brought her should make her vain and eventually spoil her, and tried to discourage her attempts at writing verse. She was not long under the ban, however, for Dr. Combe, a noted Phrenologist happened to visit the Institute shortly after and exclaimed as he touched Miss Crosby's head: "Why! here is a poet! Give her every advantage that she can have; let her hear the best books and converse with the best writers; and she will make her mark in the world." It remained for the famous Scotch Phrenologist to set her, so to speak, on her poetical feet. She soon became recognized as the "poet Laureate" of the Institution though there were some "wise ones" among her teachers and associates, who "knew that they had known the fact from the first."

Some of the best musicians in the world come from among the blind: an augmented delicacy of hearing and touch generally compensates for the loss of sight. They often had "Musical Evenings" at the Institute to which they invited their friends in the city. One evening they were electrified by the intelligence that the great William Cullen Bryant was coming as one of their guests. Bryant was at that time one of the best known American poets. Longfellow had not then written the books which made him famous. No wonder Miss Crosby was elated when he grasped her by the hand and congratulated here sincerely for her poetical efforts, and encouragingly advised her to go on bravely with her work.

One of the most enjoyable trips she ever took in connection with the Institution for the Blind was—not in a Pullman car—not in a floating palace ocean greyhound—nor yet in a motor car—but, strange to say, upon a canal boat.

In the early part of the last century railroads were not very plentiful; consequently water routes formed the main arteries of travel. New York State was one of the first to take advantage of her immense natural highway of commerce, and under the leadership of Governor Clinton, they linked up the mighty Albany and Mohawk valleys with Lake Erie by an artificial channel, or ditch, forming an unbroken highway of waves from Chicago to New York, an achievement which was heralded far and wide as one of the greatest engineering feats of the world. When the Erie Canal was opened Governor Clinton, who had dug the first spadeful of earth from the giant ditch, was greeted, on his first trip, all along the line, with ranging of bells, and the firing of cannon, and speeches wherever he chanced to stop.

The chief of the Chef clan, consisting of captain, driver and maid, not the "blind" party rather coldly, for, as the Captain afterwards acknowledged, they thought it was going to be a "funeral procession" the whole length of the big ditch, but, instead, it turned out to be a "circus" all the way, and a good one.

They were all over the boat in a jiffy and knew every nook and corner of it before the expedition started. The Captain afterwards confided to Fanny: "Well, you're a rum lot, Miss Crosby, and the jolliest crew I ever shipped."

They stopped at all towns of any size on the way, such as Schenectady, Rome, Utica, Syracuse and Rochester, and gave entertainments which netted the Institution a tidy little sum, besides a rousing public interest in the educational work, which was the main object of the undertaking.

Buffalo was finally reached and an excursion was arranged on the side-to "see" the great Niagara Falls.

This Niagara Falls trip proved an epoch day in the life of Fanny Crosby. As she listened to the faithful description given by the "seeing" teacher of the many wonders, Fanny, aided by her realistic poetic imagination could hear, above the mighty roar of the gigantic falls, the trumpet voice of this king of cataracts proclaiming the power of the Almighty hand. Indeed it may be that blind people can see more than their friends who have the power of vision; for they get descriptions from various points of view, that it is not considered necessary to give to those who can look for themselves.

Among the other things told them by the "oldest inhabitants" was the way Goat Island happened to be named. It was after a poor old animal that belonged to a Mr. John Stedman, as long ago as 1779. He placed the poor old fellow there in the summer of that year, intending to row over before the "snow flew" and take him off, (there was no bridge then). But, alas, for the poor goat!—winter set in rather early, and the animal died of starvation and exposure, bequeathing the name of his species as the distinguishing feature of this world-renowned island.

In January, 1844, a party from the Institution went to Washington to awaken public attention in favour of the blind. They appeared before a joint session of the Senate and the House of Representatives, and here, in a poetical address, Miss Crosby had one of the most distinguished audiences of her life. She was the first and only poet ever invited to recite his or her own productions before the Great National Assembly of the United States.

In the same year she was induced by a number of her admiring friends to publish her poems in book form. The result was a little volume entitled "The Blind Girl and Other Poems" by Frances Jane Crosby, a pupil at the New York Institution for the Blind. (Frances Jane were afterwards modified into the shorter form, "Fanny.") Her first sacred song, entitled "An Evening Hymn" was published in this book, the closing stanza of which breathes her implicit trust in God:

"Shepherd of Israel, deign to keep
And guard my soul from every ill;
Thus will I lay me down and sleep,
For Thou in safety mak'st me dwell."

Another volume was published in 1851, entitled, "Monterey and Other Poems." It was about this time that a feeling of sadness and depression came over her, and influenced her to such an extent that she frequently made reference to her "declining years." Happily, however, she was given power to shake it off and commence life with a new zest and courage. Is it not a strange thing that it is 61 years since she wrote of those "declining years" and is still spared to an appreciative world?

When they were at Oswego, on the canal-trip, a lady came to them bringing her son, a blind boy just entering the years of manhood. His name was Alexander Van Alstyne. The mother appealed to Miss Crosby in particular, as she was one of the teachers, to take her "boy" under her personal charge and see that no harm came to him. She consented, rather thoughtlessly, but the responsibility was fated to have more important results. His father was a civil engineer by profession and here a prominent part in the construction of the Welland Canal.

He entered the Institution in 1844 and graduated four years later, going to Union College, Schenectady, where he studied Greek, Latin and Theology. Here he distinguished himself by obtaining a scholarship, but his natural profession was music, and he became a most accomplished performer, teacher and composer. In 1855 he returned to the Institute as a teacher, and three years later he and Fanny were married.

They found in each other not only perfect congeniality but sympathy in their pursuits. Neither interfered with the other's professional career. He set several of her hymns to music and insisted that she should retain "Fanny Crosby" when writing, notwithstanding the fact that her name was now Mrs. Van Alstyne. Mr. Van Alstyne occupied the position as organist in one of the city churches of New York.

In June 1902 he was "numbered" among those who have washed their robes, and his body lies buried in Brooklyn, not far from where they first established their little home soon after marriage.

How Mr. Dawson Met His Death

One Out of Three Who Were Injured in Runaway—Death Resulted Later

The following is an extract from the Vancouver World respecting the accident which resulted in the death of the late Mr. Dawson, a former resident of this city:

Vancouver, March 14.—One white man, Alexander Dawson, aged 62, and two Chinamen now lie in the General Hospital from a probable concussion, the former unconscious and the others with severe fractures, as the result of a runaway accident which occurred at 12.45 to-day, when a team and heavily laden coal wagon belonging to the Vancouver Coal Company dashed down Pender street from opposite the new World building to Chinatown, a few blocks away, and wrecked a Chinese store in their wild career.

The white man was apparently on the sidewalk in front of the store, just past the railroad crossing, when the madly plunging horses swerved from the roadway and charged with a sickening crash into the store.

Mr. Dawson's injuries consist of severe scalp wounds and probable concussion of the brain as he was still unconscious when this was written. On account of his advanced years, it is thought that he may not recover.

Long Wing, of the Chinamen, had both his legs broken, and Mah Long, the other Celestial, was badly bruised by the impact when the team struck the store.

Jack Robertson was driving the wagon when the horses ran away, but he has not been seen since the accident.

FROM THE NORTH COUNTRY

Where the Winters are Cold and the Snows Deep.

Writing from the vicinity David Harum made famous, a man says that he was an habitual coffee drinker, and, although he knew it was doing him harm, (Tea is equally harmful, because it contains caffeine—the same drug found in coffee) was too obstinate to give it up, till all at once he went to pieces with nervousness and insomnia, loss of appetite, weakness, and a generally used-up feeling, which practically unfitted him for his arduous occupation, and kept him on a couch at home when his duty did not call him out.

"While in this condition Grape-Nuts food was suggested to me and I began to use it. Although it was in the middle of winter and the thermometer was often below zero, almost my entire living for about six weeks of severe exposure was on Grape-Nuts food with a little bread and butter and a cup of hot water, till I was wise enough to make Postum my table beverage.

"After the first two weeks I began to feel better and during the whole winter I never lost a trip on my mail route, frequently being on the road 7 or 8 hours at a time.

"The constant marvel to me was how a person could do the amount of work and endure the fatigue and hardship as I did, on so small an amount of food. But I found my new rations so perfectly satisfactory that I have continued them—using both Postum and Grape-Nuts at every meal, and often they comprise my entire meal.

"All my nervousness, irritability, and insomnia have disappeared and healthy, natural sleep has come back to me. But what has been perhaps the greatest surprise to me is the fact that with the benefit to my general health has come a remarkable improvement in my eye-sight.

"If a good appetite, good digestion, good eye-sight, strong nerves and an active brain are to be desired, I can say from my own experience, use Grape-Nuts and Postum. Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont.

NA-DRU-CO Tasteless Cod Liver Oil Compound
There is no question as to the very high value of Cod Liver Oil, properly prepared and made digestible, as a "builder-up" for convalescents or those who are run-down.
Na-Dru-Co Tasteless Compound contains the valuable properties of the Cod Liver Oil without the objectionable flavor. In fact, this preparation is decidedly pleasant to the taste. With Extract of Malt, Extract of Wild Cherry, and Hypophosphites of Lime, Soda, Potassium, Manganese and Iron added, it makes a combination that puts an edge on the appetite—aids digestion—invigorates the nerves—nourishes and helps to cure affections of the throat and lungs—and generally builds up strength and restores health.
For pump, delicate children there is probably no better "builder-up" than Na-Dru-Co Tasteless Cod Liver Oil Compound, 50c

In Favour Of Church Union

St. Andrew's Church Gives a Majority of 199 in Favor of Measure—Dissenters Number 141

The result of the voting upon church union at St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, on Sunday, was as follows:

For church union, three hundred; against church union, one hundred and forty-one. Majority in favour of the proposed measure, one hundred and fifty-nine.

Three separate votes were recorded—one for the general union, as a general question, and the other for the proposed basis of church union. Three ballots were used in each case. The individual balloting resulted as follows:

Presbytery Meets.

The regular quarterly meeting of the Presbytery was held yesterday, and took the form of an all-day session. In addition to the reading of the reports dealing with the work of the Presbytery, a number of important matters were disposed of. This, with the general business which was brought up, rounded out a busy day for those who had occasion to be in attendance.

SALT RHEUM FOR 6 YEARS

Zam-Buk Has Cured Him.

For over six years Mr. William H. Birt, of Pisquid, P.E.I., suffered from salt rheum. He says: "The disease attacked my arms and hands, and the fore-finger of my right hand was the worst.

"I was engaged as a blacksmith by the Bruce Stewart Co., of Charlottetown, and sometimes every stroke of the hammer would cause the finger to bleed freely. I tried various ointments and salves, and then went to several doctors in and around Charlottetown.

"One medical man, after treating me for some time said he did not think I could ever be cured. Another put my finger into some fluid, which seemed to burn it terribly, and then put 'a straight jacket'—as I called it—on the finger for two days. Trying one thing and another I spent over $50.00; and all in vain.

"I saw an account of some of the great cures which Zam-Buk has worked and decided to try it. The first box did me a lot of good, and the finger showed traces of healing, so I kept up the Zam-Buk treatment and a few boxes worked a cure. There has been no return of any trace of the disease, so I know the cure is permanent, and I am so thankful for my cure that you are at liberty to use these facts as you like."

Reader, if you have any skin disease, cut, burn, cold sore or skin injury, try Zam-Buk. It is absolutely unique as a healer. Druggists and stores everywhere at 50c. box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price.

Old Peterboro Boy Makes Good In West

"Sailor Bill" Eyres Reaps a Large Fortune in Saskatoon

With bank drafts worth $78,000, in his grip, W. I. Eyres, of Spokane, sea captain and financier, climbed aboard the G.T.P. train the other night, bearing with him his reward of ten years of patient waiting for Saskatoon to develop. The returns from an investment made here ten years ago have netted him a good sized fortune, and it was with a broad smile of contentment that he settled back into an upholstered chair in the Pullman and watched the twinkling lights of Saskatoon fade into the distance.

Captain Eyres' experience with Saskatoon real estate is a marvellous one. Ten years ago he came to this place, which was but a tiny hamlet, stretching itself beside the river. He purchased a farm containing one hundred and sixty acres about three miles from the town and paid $10 per acre for it. He got his title and faded away again. Two years ago he came back and was better satisfied than ever with the prospects here and went away again. He returned here on Monday morning, and by noon the following day transferred his property for $52,000 cold cash. He also held some lots here and he disposed of some of these, receiving $26,000 in return for them. He paid $250 for the lots. He still holds two more lots, and says he is going to hang on to them for a while. The purchasers of the farm were the Gratias Land Company of Saskatoon. Capt. Eyres purchased the property from the Temperance Colonization Co. It is the north-west quarter of seven, thirty-seven, west of the third.

"I knew ten years ago that Saskatoon was going to be a good city, that it was going to be a big city," said Captain Eyres to the Phoenix. "It will snow Winnipeg under some day. I have travelled over this whole country in a buckboard, and I know something about it."

Captain Eyres has a right to be well satisfied with the west. He has six more quarter sections which he has been holding for the past ten years. One of these is situated near Wilkie, another near Tessier, and the remainder lies along the C.N.R. lines in different parts of the province.—Saskatoon Daily Phoenix, February 28th.

Mr. Eyres formerly resided in Peterborough, and was a visitor to the city several weeks ago on the occasion of the death of his uncle, Mr. William Eyres. While in the east, he made his home with Mr. Westley Walsh, Millbrook.

MONEY'S PART IN MARRIAGE.

Scores of persons lose their chances of being happily married through making an unnecessary obstacle of money. The importance of it is often exaggerated. Many a man hesitates to propose to a girl because of his small income. Very often much misery, misunderstanding and tangled lives result from the silence. More unfortunate love affairs are the result of what has not been said than of spoken words.

When a man has a small sure income, and a prospect of increase, there is no legitimate reason for his not speaking of his love; no reason, for that matter, to prevent marriage. People are so desperately afraid, though, of beginning married life in a small way. They fear the sacrifices which they will be called upon to make—of the criticism to which they will be subjected. Many years of happiness are lost in this way. It is such a mistake for young people to want to start marriage in the state that their parents are ending it.

To delay marriage until a "comfortable" income is available is to prove something lacking in love.

MISS BARBARA FOSTER AT THE CONSERVATORY MUSIC HALL

Splendid Concert Given Last Evening Under the Auspices of Springville Presbyterian Church Choir

A GREAT SUCCESS

The choir of Springville church are to be commended for bringing together such a splendid organization as that which delighted the very large audience that assembled in the Conservatory Hall last evening.

Miss Barbara Foster proved her worth in every detail. She possesses a powerful contralto voice, rich in tone and extensive in compass. Nor is her repertoire limited, as she rendered songs of various descriptions from sympathetic to florid, and with either she displayed equal ability. The Scottish favourite, "My Ain Folk" was rendered with great tenderness of expression. For this she was enthusiastically recalled, and, responding, she sung in a very attractive manner an Irish ditty entitled, "The Kerry Dancers." Another beautiful selection of hers was Sullivan's "The Lost Chord."

Miss Mae Teskey is an elocutionist of considerable distinction and, judging from her performance last evening her notability is justifiable. There was no necessity of craning one's neck to catch the gist of the story as her articulation was at all times crisp and even. Her deportment and mannerisms also lend colour to her elocutionary powers. Her first contribution was a dramatic episode in the American war, entitled, "A Leap For Life," and upon being recalled she rendered a humorous recitation in which she gave as an excuse for a young man, who was editor, placing his arm round a young lady's waist, his association with the "press" and for the fair one's reason, the text, "And he maketh the waste places glad" —she was a clergyman's daughter. The dialect poems, Tit-For-Tat (Irish), 'Saith Scotch' and Hush-a-Bye Baby (Dutch) were also items of considerable amusement.

The numbers were interspersed with selections by the Conservatory orchestra under the leadership of Mr. Rupert Gliddon. To hear this delightful combination render a carefully rehearsed classic is indeed a musical treat. The opening selection "White Squadron" was especially attractive in the second movement where syncopation gives place to a sympathetic melody in the trio. In the old favourite, "American Patrol" the orchestra showed remarkable balance, playing as one instrument.

Another item which found favour with the audience was "A Day in the Highlands," in which several of Scotland's national songs appear.

There was a large complement of visitors from Springville and the concert was a success in every way.

WHITE WILL PREDOMINATE IN THE NEW SEASON'S FASHIONS

It is intimated that husbands are being overwhelmed with little acts of kindness these days and the near approach of the "spring suit and Easter hat" season suggests the reason for the same.

Among the colours that will be popular during the season are Paris and leather tans and champagnes and blues in all shades, but those who have followed the trend of the fashions, stated that he season will develop into one in which white will predominate. Colours will be used as trimmings, and black with white will be a favourite. Wide lapels are to be features of the new suits, which will show a high waist line.

The millinery for the coming season is adapted from three periods, Francis I, Louis XVI and the Directoire. This permits considerable latitude and no particular style will stand out above others. It is stated that the season as far as hats are concerned, is going to be a white one, or white and black—not black and white, emphasis being laid on the white. For the early season everything is to be very simple and strictly tailored. Mannish sailors are to be popular and heavy lace is a feature. As for the colours it is stated that deep, pansy purple and violet and blues from the French to the deep blues, and combinations of French blue with old gold will be what milady will wear when she turns from the white and black—emphasis on the 'white.'

There is no doubt, however, that hats will be just as expensive as usual, the lack of expensive trimming being made up by the quality of the straw. The flat headgear of Francis I suggests the familiar Tam-o-Shanter and the jaunty hat of Louis XVI, with the brim turned up at the back will be seen, as also the bonnet effect of the Directoire.

A novelty introduced from New York is the Durbar hat in all shades. Something very new are the mannish sailors, the Derby crown and the Quaker hat, which is really a shepherdess. The hats shown include some absolutely plain black satin beavers resembling men's.

In the new styles in parasols one of the most striking as well as the most absolutely new idea are the parasols in cordelier effect, made with a long cord so the owner can carry it either over the shoulder or suspended from the arm. Little knots of cord or ribbon are fastened on some which do not have the cord, through which the hand may be slipped.

The spring openings begin this week and the usual interest will no doubt be manifested. The young maids and their younger sisters will have the pleasure of feasting their eyes on the new styles and of regarding themselves in a Louis XVI design hat—but never mind the price. Dame Fashion like her sex, is fickle, but must be served and while from time to time some of the ideas may appear doubtful to men observers, the present displays offer many pretty combinations, and the plain white effects, permitting variations, should make milady charming to look upon this summer.

CONSTIPATION, BILIOUS HEADACHE AND SOUR STOMACH MEAN CASCARETS TO-NIGHT SURE

The last of the series of "Twilight Musicales" under the auspices of the "Woman's Art" will be given in the Conservatory of Music on Saturday afternoon next, at 4 o'clock, when an excellent Irish programme will be presented, appropriate to the season. Owing to the large attendance at the last "Twilight," additional seating will be provided. There will be no invitations issued. All music-lovers are cordially invited. Silver Collection. 3d-62

ROSELLE KNOTT GETS DIVORCE

Played Here in "When Knighthood Was In Flower"

NEW YORK, MARCH 13. — The suit of Roselle Knott, an actress in leading roles, against Ernest M. Shipman, for an absolute divorce, was undefended on the final trial of the case, and Justice Paige in the supreme court issued an order directing the submission of the proposed findings by counsel in the form of an interlocutory judgment together with a transcript of the stenographic minutes.

Roselle Knott, as she is known on the stage, is very well known in this city and her action against her husband, which was begun some time ago, has been watched with considerable interest here. She was born in Dundas and first came to this city to engage in amateur theatricals at the old Mechanics' hall, and appeared under her maiden name, Miss Agnes Roselle. Edwin Knott was also a member of the company and they were married while members of it. Later they joined a travelling company and Mrs. Knott soon established an enviable reputation in the theatrical world, in which she was known as Roselle Knott, which name she has retained. After the death of her first husband she married Ernest M. Shipman, from whom she will shortly secure a divorce.

CAREFUL MAN'S OPINION

Business men are careful about what they say—it is part of their training. Therefore, when Mr. J. G. Clarke, a business man of Westchester, N.Y., answered a question about his greatly improved health his opinion may be considered correct.

He said "Having been troubled with a bad cough and bronchitis for nearly a year, I decided to take Vinol a short time ago. The cough has now disappeared and my health is very much improved.

"I certainly consider Vinol a valuable remedy and should be kept in every home—until people try it they don't know its value."

Thousands of other intelligent people praise Vinol simply because they have found it just what they needed to drive away lingering coughs and build up their health and strength.

Vinol is a delicious cod liver and iron preparation without oil, and is the greatest strength renewer for all who are weak and run down. We guarantee it to give perfect satisfaction. CHEAP POWER

A report has just been filed at Victoria, B.C., on the water power of the Willow River, about 17 miles east of Fort George. At this canyon it is proposed by the Fort George Power Company Ltd.—a company which has undertaken the work of development there — to develop cheap power for manufacturing and other purposes. In the development scheme a dam is planned to create a service reservoir which will be the means of maintaining a constant head of water on a turbine to be installed in a power house situated on the lower face of the dam. In addition, a smaller reservoir will create a local storage reservoir. According to the report 40,000 or 50,000 horse power might be obtained with sufficient storage. Such an asset should prove an important factor in the industrial growth of this Grand Trunk Pacific townsite, closely situated as it is to the sources of supply for raw material.

We Invite You To View Our Formal Exhibition of Spring Fashions
Opening Days---Thursday and Friday, March 14 and 15

OUR formal exhibition of Spring Fashions is more than a mere style show—it is an event brimful of information regarding the authoritative modes for the coming season, which should be viewed by all who are interested in the wearing of attractive and becoming apparel.

Here are assembled the most gorgeous, most comprehensive array of the authentic style creations that have ever been gathered within our store—an assemblage which embodies the very latest dictates of fashion and a showing of which we are justly proud.

All departments throughout the store are in gala attire and present a most inviting appearance. In virtue of the season, however, interest centres principally around the sections featuring Millinery, Ready-to-wear Garments and Dress Fabrics.

Our window displays are representative of the high order of our showing, but a correct idea of the real charm and beauty of this Formal Exhibition can be gained only by a visit to the store on Thursday (to-morrow) and following days. All are most cordially invited.

Grand Exhibition of Authentic Millinery Creations

In Styles To Suit Every Woman.

BECOMINGNESS is the keynote of our magnificent array of exquisite Millinery creations. Here are mirrored the newest style tendencies of Paris and New York.

The leading modes of the present season being copied from three different periods, afford the Millinery artist unlimited opportunities to vary the styles to suit the individual preferences of the prospective wearer.

The flat headgear of Francis I. that suggests the familiar lines of the Tam-O'-Shanter; the jaunty hat of Louis XVI. style; and the bonnet of the Directoire period are all a source of inspiration to the fashionable milliner and produce a style to suit the beauty of each particular face.

One of the first and most exclusive novelties is the draped hat of Taffeta, which is wonderfully becoming and will find instant favor with all smart dressers.

Another particularly pleasing creation is an East Indian Turban. Changeable silk of plain Taffeta, called Radium, is employed in its production.

Radium or changeable effects are being much exploited in Straws, Ribbons, Flowers and Silks. The colourings this season are in three tones instead of two as formerly.

Paris, New York and our own Millinery workrooms supply us with these exquisite productions of feminine headgear. The showing is so varied and the productions so decidedly novel that all who accept our invitation and visit our Millinery Salon will be amply repaid.

Superb Showing of Gowns, Suits, Coats, etc.

In the Formal Exhibition

EXCLUSIVENESS is the dominant feature in our showing of Ready-to-Wear garments. The fundamental principle underlying the phenomenal growth of our Ready-to-Wear business has been that of always having the newest and best. It is a policy of which we are truly proud—a principle from which we never deviate. And this principle of newness and exclusiveness is conspicuously evident in the new fashions of Women's Ready-to-Wear Garments.

The authentic styles are here assembled and are waiting to be exploited to our friends and customers. Any attempt to describe the alluring beauty of these new garments would be fruitless—they speak for themselves far more eloquently, far more forcibly than we can write.

Our showing will represent the highest degree of the designer's efficiency and will further demonstrate the superiority of the garments found in the "Cressman Ready-to-Wear Department."

We cordially request your attendance and ask you to judge by this beautiful Formal Exhibition how well we are prepared to supply your every requirement in these lines. And, remember, beauty and exclusiveness are not the only charm—you will find just as great an attraction in their very moderate pricing.

Men's Wear

In the Formal Style Exhibition

Men's Clothing Men's Furnishings Men's Shoes

THIS year our Fashion Event is given a new impetus by the introduction of Men's Wear in the Formal Exhibition. Particular attention is directed to our showing of "Semi-Ready Tailor-made Clothing" that has a distinctive, snappy style which appeals to men who are particular about their personal appearance We will be pleased to have you inspect our displays. They afford an accurate knowledge of what the good dressers will wear during 1912.

Men's Wear Department through the Arch. See the Show Windows.

On the Main Floor—Dress Goods, Silks, Wash Goods, Embroideries and Trimmings make a strong appeal for attention and present an assemblage well worth viewing.

A Wonderful Exposition of

New Dress Goods and Silks

ASSORTMENTS such as are found in our Dress Goods Department make the "Cressman Store" "Peterborough's Favourite Shopping Place."

Truly the foremost manufacturers of dress materials have done themselves credit in their productions of the present season. Not only are the weaves decidedly novel and the finish beautiful, but the shadings are rich and elegant beyond anything produced in previous seasons. And not an important weave or new shading is excluded from this great exposition. Too many to describe and all are worthy of more than passing comment, but when you visit this department on your tour of inspection you will be more than favourably impressed with this magnificent assemblage.

The New Silks are here also in the changeable, shot effects designed by fashion to lead for this season. Their commendable features are:—exclusiveness, richness of colour and moderate price.

Our showing of New Dress Trimmings is the most ambitious we have yet attempted. New effects that give just the final touch of expression to the new Gown, Suit, Coat, etc., will be found here in such a choice as to simplify selection.

Exquisite New Embroideries

TRULY EXQUISITE is the expression usually heard at the Embroidery counters, where are displayed the new creations for 1912. Qualities and designs that will be enthusiastically received and given a warm place in the feminine wardrobe. Promiscently exploited you will find Skirting Embroideries in rich, exclusive designs with insertions in various widths to match—Embroidered Marquisette Skirtings, Galons Bandings and Insertions, Baby Irish Insertions and Baby Irish Medallions and exclusive Costume lengths of embroidered Marquisette that are beautiful beyond description.

All are displayed for easy seeing on the Main Floor.

Charming Wash Fabrics

THE NEWNESS and NOVELTY of our Wash Goods displays add very materially to the success of this Spring Fashion Exhibition. Captivating productions that mirror the beauty and daintiness of the spring and summer foliage are here in almost every imaginable design in colours true to nature. No more lovely or charming Wash Fabrics have ever been produced than those chosen by fashion for the coming season.

Sturdy Dress Ginghams for Children's and Women's Wash Dresses—fancy Foulards—cotton Marquisettes—French Voiles, etc., are all represented in our showing in dainty colourings and a variety of novelty designs that are particularly attractive.

As the season advances White Goods will be featured to a very marked degree and our presentation of White Goods embraces all that can be desired in snowy white for dainty summer apparel.

Of course you will require Laces to trim your summer frocks. Across the aisle from the Wash Goods counters will be found a comprehensive array that will make selection comparatively easy.

The New Styles in Shoes

WHILE on the second floor viewing the pretty hats and dresses do not fail to see what 1912 has produced in dainty feminine Footwear. We specialise on J. and K. and Pingree American Shoes for Women, and are prepared with complete assortments to supply your every demand. Button boots are the leaders for Spring street wear, and our showing embraces the newest, neatest and smartest lasts procurable in all the very best leathers.

Facts About Indigestion and Its Relief that Should Interest You.

Although Indigestion and Dyspepsia are so prevalent, most people do not thoroughly understand their cause and cure. There is no reason why most people should not eat anything they desire—if they will only chew it carefully and thoroughly. Many actually starve themselves into sickness through fear of eating every good-looking, good-smelling, and good-tasting food, because it does not agree with them.

We believe we can relieve Dyspepsia. We are so confident of this fact that we guarantee and promise to supply the medicine free of cost to every one who will use it, who is not perfectly satisfied with the results which it produces. We assert no privilege, and put no one under any obligation whatever. We are located right here and our reputation should be sufficient assurance of the genuineness of our offer.

We want every one troubled with Indigestion or Dyspepsia in any form to come to our store and buy a box of Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets. Take them home and give them a reasonable trial, according to directions. Then, if not satisfied, come to us and get your money back. They are very pleasant to take; they aid to soothe the irritable stomach, to strengthen and invigorate the digestive organs, and to promote a healthy and natural bowel action, thus leading to perfect, and healthy digestion and assimilation.

A 25c. package of Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets furnishes 15 days' treatment. In ordinary cases, this is sufficient to produce a cure. In more chronic cases, a longer treatment, of course, is necessary, and depends upon the severity of the trouble. For such cases, we have two larger sizes which sell for 50c and $1.00. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in this community only at our store—The Rexall Store.—McDermid and Jury.

OMEMEE NEWS

Examiner Special:

OMEMEE, MARCH 13.—Mr. T. W. McLean, principal of the public school, was in Oshawa last week, attending the Ontario Library Association held in that town. During his absence Mrs. White took charge of the entrance class.

Mr. Fred Johnson spent several days in Toronto last week.

The concert given in the Coronation Hall on Friday evening, March 1st, under the auspices of the Public Library was much appreciated by those present. Professor Gliddon's orchestra, of Peterborough, furnished the programme, which consisted of vocal and instrumental music. Perhaps the most enjoyable numbers on the programme were the duets and solos by Masters Otto and Paul Gliddon, who early show a decided musical talent. Miss Julia Choate, the talented violinist, and Mr. Dean, 'cellist, were heard to good advantage in a couple of Nevin's charming pastoral numbers. Miss Chalmers' numbers were greatly enjoyed, especially the trio of Irish songs which she sang in a sweet and unaffected manner. The various other pieces on the programme were all heartily applauded, and the Library Board are to be congratulated upon the high-class programme presented to the public.

Mrs. Jos. Harrison and children have moved into town, where they will reside for the present while Mr. Harrison is in the West.

A case of considerable interest was decided last week by Police Magistrate Moore, of Lindsay. The charge preferred against the McGill Bros. by Fishing Inspector Toole was that of delaying and obstructing an officer in his duty. The case was decided in favour of the plaintiff, a fine of $10 and costs ($13.80) being imposed. The charge against Inspector Toole by McGill Bros. for assault was dismissed with costs. G. H. Hopkins, K.C., of Lindsay, had charge of the case for Mr. Toole.

A quiet wedding took place on Wednesday evening, March 8th, at the home of Mr. Robt. W. Wilson, Emily Township, when his brother-in-law, Mr. Geo. Boyce Moore, of Bobcaygeon, was united in marriage to Miss Clarabel McDougal, daughter of Mr. Hugh N. McDougal, of Verulam. The ceremony was performed by Rev. R. Burns in the presence of only the immediate relatives. Miss Mabel Wilson made a charming little flower girl. After the ceremony, a dainty de'jeuner was served, and the couple received the congratulations of those present. Mr. and Mrs. Moore will reside in Bobcaygeon.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Earle were in Lindsay on Saturday.

Mrs. Blasdell, of Toronto, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. (Dr.) Sutton.

Miss Amy Parsons returned last week after spending several weeks with relatives in Toronto.

Miss Minnie Beatty and Miss Edith Nugent returned last week from Toronto, where they had been attending the millinery openings.

Miss Millie and Miss Parrott have returned to Mr. Chas. Ivorys to take charge of the millinery and dressmaking departments of the store.

At the March meeting of the W. M. S. of the Methodist Church, Mrs. H. Shield was elected as delegate to attend the branch meeting held in Belleville.

An Irish concert will be given in the Coronation Hall on Monday evening, March 18th, under the auspices of the Epworth League. An excellent programme has been prepared, consisting of music, recitations, drills, tableaux, etc. Admission: Balcony, 20c; ground floor, 25c; children, 15c; first two rows on ground floor reserved for children.

The stork called at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bernie Rohill on Saturday and left a fine baby boy.

Mrs. Geo. Balfour, of Lindsay, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Rohill.

Shiloh's Cure

THE BURGLARY AT THE COLONEL'S

A Short Story.

(By A. G. Greenwood)

Police Constable Harry Long trudged down Wyck's lane. The night was dark and blusterous, with fitful rain storms. On his left the wind soughed in Wyck's wood. On his right the roam of Wyckham hall, the residence of Colonel Neverton, V.C., chief constable for the county, loomed up against the sky.

Suddenly tossed to his ear came a scream. It was followed by silence. The policeman jumped on to the bank, gearing across the meadow to the lawn. Colonel Neverton was away. His wife and daughter were alone. Long paused, wondering if the cry had been the scream of a peacock or that of a hare seized by a stoat. Then it came again, pulsing through the night air. A light leaped into a ground floor window of the hall. A door opened showing an illuminated hall and a figure swaying in the aperture.

P. C. Long began to run. He plunged into the long grass, scaling the railings of the sunk fence, stumbling up the bank of the lawn. "Help! Help! Burglars—!"

The figure at the door had seen him, had seen his gleaming cape and his helmet. It was Mrs. Kent, the housekeeper, who ran out to him. "He's in the cellar, I heard him," she screamed, clutching Long's arm. "Mr. Bund, the butler, you know, is at Broncheater. There isn't a man in the house. The mistress has fainted—" Harry nodded. The details did not interest him. He found Clagice, the colonel's daughter, very white, standing beside her mother, who lay unconscious on the sofa.

"A policeman! Thank heaven!" she cried. "We're alone, officer. Mrs. Kent heard him first and came to our rooms. The plate chest is in the cellar—"

"Very good, miss," said Harry. "You stay here. I'll find him." Though naturally his heart beat more swiftly, he rejoiced. A burglary at the chief constable's. Capture of the miscreant by P. C. Long. What a stroke of luck it was. As Mrs. Kent, most unwillingly, crept with him through a baize door and pointed with trembling finger at the door which barred the cellar steps, Harry's mind was furiously working. To-night's work should mean promotion, promotion meant that Farmer Gyles would probably, almost certainly, withdraw opposition to his marriage with his daughter. He rubbed his hands together, drawing his truncheon and flicking the beam of his lantern down the passage. Mrs. Kent hoarsely whispered, "Thamp!" and fled back to her mistress in the hall.

Harry crept on to the door, opened it noiselessly, and listened. The stairs descended abruptly. No ray of light lightened the recesses below. No sound betrayed the presence of the marauder. He stepped on to the top step, keeping the dark slide before the lantern's ray and drawing the door to behind him. Dead silence, pitch darkness surrounded him. Suddenly he switched on the light, flinging the ray this way and that. It lit up the steps, a few barrels, the glint of many bottles on a rack, but nothing and no one else.

Cautiously he descended, he searched a long vista of bottles with the lantern, discovering nothing, beginning to fear that his informants were mistaken and that the thief might already have made his escape. He determined to make sure. He crept on a few steps. Then his heart seemed to stand still. "Hands up," whispered a voice. Harry spun round on his heel. Behind a rampart of barrels, barrels which he had already passed and which lay between him and the staircase, he saw the dim outline of a head and shoulders, of a hand, of a crooked finger, of the gleaming barrel of a revolver. "Hands up," said the man again very low but threateningly.

"Come out of that," growled Harry in his most official tones. He flashed the lantern into the man's face. A noise burst from his lips, a sound of horror and amazement, and appalled wonder. "Jim!" he stuttered.

"Who're you?" muttered the other, but the revolver point was lowered.

"Jim—you!"

"Is it Harry?" The burglar asked the question in queer, stifled tones.

"Aye," said Harry, "that's me. Come to arrest you—my brother!"

"I was clearing out of England—going to Canada. I only wanted a little. I'm no use here. I was to emigrate—"

The man stopped, breathing heavily in the darkness—panting. And Harry stood stock still, neither moving nor speaking. "Go up!" growled his brother. "Say you can't find me. I'll slip out at the back!"

"I can't!" gasped Harry.

"Can't? Why?"

"I'm a policeman, Jim. I can't let burglars go. I'm a policeman. You being my brother don't prevent that. I've sworn to do my duty—"

"It ain't your duty to arrest your brother, to take away his last chance, to push him down to hell!" retorted the other fiercely. "Don't be a fool, Harry."

"A policeman ain't got no brothers," said Harry, the sweat standing on his forehead. "Before God, I'd rather be dead, alive, have to lay hands on you!"

"Are you—is—is that?"

"Aye!"

"I'll shoot. I've a duty, too—a duty to myself. If gallowses haven't no brothers nor no burglars. I'm warning you, Harry. I'm in earnest."

"I ain't let you go!" said Harry. "How could I look my superior in the face? How could I dare face the chief constable? It's not honourable, it isn't playing the game."

"It'll mean promotion for you," said Jim suddenly.

"I leave the force to-morrow. I'll not gain by it—but I must do my duty."

"You'll leave the force?"

"Ay, if I arrest you."

"If, you say," said Jim slowly.

"You're armed," Harry reminded him. "I'm not. There's a way out for both of us. I give you warning I'm going to attempt an arrest; you've given me warning that you'll shoot."

"I—you—joking, 'Harry," muttered Jim.

"Still you were right!" Harry spoke and drew a deep breath. There fell a long silence. "Jim!"

"Yes?"

"I'd rather you shot. I don't want to arrest you. I'm fond of you. But you must shoot to disable. I've my truncheon. I'll use it. I swear I'll use it if you give me the chance. I'd rather you shot!"

Again silence fell except for the laboured breathing of the two men.

"Jim," said Harry, "I'm going to count three. At the last word I fling my lantern away and then we both do our best. Jim did not answer. But he raised the revolver, pointing it at the gleaming buttons on Harry's tunic. "One—two——"

"Drop the revolver," came in sharp command from the top of the steps. "I'm armed. Escape impossible. Drop it, I say!" Jim obeyed.

"Pick it up, officer."

Harry staggered forward, his jaw fallen, his face haggard. He stooped and picked up the weapon. They heard the scratch of a match, its tiny flame flickered, a candle was lit, struggled, and burned up. A tall, erect man came slowly down the stairs, candlestick in one hand, a revolver in the other. Harry went stiffly to the salute.

"I came by the midnight train, and I seem to have stumbled on a surprising state of affairs."

"You heard, sir?"

"I did." The colonel glanced at Harry and then set his stern eyes on him. "I was in a fix, sir," said Harry. "I tried to figure out my duty."

The colonel nodded. Then he called curt curtly: "Come out!" Jim climbed over the barrels, scowling with a defiant light in his eyes. "I know you," said the colonel. "You're a slugyard, a loafer; you haven't done an honest day's work for the last eighteen months. I don't think Canada will have much use for you." The chief constable rubbed his chin, setting the candle down on a barrel. "But you've got a good brother," he added, making Harry thrill. "I don't think I realised that such honourable men were made nowadays. I don't think a more honourable decision than his could have been come to. It was easy to be sentimental, to be kind at my expense, and to let you go. He chose the harder and the better way, Jim Long."

"Yes, sir." Jim pulled himself together. The colonel's eyes were very stern and yet very kindly.

"Supposing your brother here and I enter into a conspiracy to defeat the ends of justice," he began; "supposing I say, 'Take this money, live like a man, work like a man, make Canada proud of you,' I wonder if he and I would live to regret it?" There came a throttled click from Jim's throat. But he straightened his shoulders, stood suddenly erect.

"My word ain't much," he said, "but I give it, sir."

"Jim'll keep it. I go bail for that," cried Harry. The colonel picked up the candlestick and led the way upstairs, through the cellar door, through a long passage, to a side entrance. Then he counted out some money into Jim's trembling hand. "A false start doesn't always lose one a race," he said gravely, "and, remember, you've your brother here to thank." Jim saluted, muttering his gratitude, then he wrung Harry's hand. They watched him go.

"You'll have nothing to report about to-night," said the colonel, turning to Harry, and putting his hand on his shoulder. "But if ever the chief constable wants an honest, honourable fellow, an assistant on whom he can rely, a brave man to face, perhaps, death in the execution of his duty—and such an occasion is not infrequent—he will send for P. C. Long." He shook his head, holding up his hand at Harry's stammered thanks.

"You've your own honest, kind heart to thank," he said with a smile. "Now we must reassure the ladies about this"—he paused, smiled at the constable, and finished on cyphd—"this false alarm."

To get results the following general directions must be followed:

Always use soft water, if possible. If hard water must be used, dissolve one-half ounce of castile soap in two gallons of water, and boil, skimming off the scum of lime and soap which will rise to the top.

Always use an agate, granite, or porcelain lined vessel.

Always have the materials perfectly clean and free from all spots of grease, paint, tar or stain.

The dye bath should be kept lukewarm for twenty minutes while the goods are thoroughly wet with the dye.

Always take out any old colour which will conflict with the colour desired. This can be done by boiling the goods in soap and water and rinse well. Red and brown should always be removed before application of black dye.

Always give the goods to be coloured a long warm exposure to the dye instead of a short hot one.

Always moisten the dye in a little hot water and work into a paste; add a little hot water at a time, then boil in a small dish and strain into the dye bath. The neglect of this one caution causes a large part of the failures in dyeing.

Always have the goods moist when put in the dye bath.

Always have the vessel large enough to allow the free turning and stirring of the goods to be coloured.

Always use less rather than more of the dye than directed. It is a simple matter to add more dye to the bath, if the colour is too light.

Always keep the goods in motion while in the dye bath. Do not allow them to become twisted or knotted.—Woman's World.

In Dread Of Croup

The inexperienced mother is always in dread of croup. There is seldom any warning until the child awakens at midnight with the hard, metallic cough and gasps frantically for breath.

There is no time to send for a doctor, no time to go to the drug store, even; relief must be obtained at once. If you are not so fortunate as to have Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine in the house, cause the child to vomit with a spoonful of warm lard or by tickling the throat with the finger.

Then get Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine so as to prevent the more serious attack which usually comes the second night. This treatment is wonderfully effective for croup, bronchitis and colds in the throat or chest. Mothers who make a practice of always keeping it in the house find that they can depend on it in case of emergency.

MIGHT CAUSE HEART FAILURE

"Here's the rope of pearls you lost, ma'am; no, I don't want any reward."

"You didn't need to send for me, Mrs. Gwilliams. The baby's broken out with the heat; that's all."

"Doctor Fourthly, the church board has decided to raise your salary $500 and give you a three months' vacation next summer."

"I see your seat is directly behind a pillar, madam; I'll change with you. I've seen this play several times before."

"Throggins, old man, you want that office and I don't. I'm going to withdraw my name."

"I notice you've advertised for a cook, mum; s'pose you try me for a week without any pay."

SAVED

(From the Chicago Record-Herald)

"Dearest," she asked, taking advantage of the fact that it was leap year, "will you be mine?"

For a moment the young man feared that he was up against it. Then, struck by a happy thought, he replied:

"You will have to ask mother."

Spanish Poached Eggs.

Heat a flat saucepan slowly and melt in it a tablespoonful of butter. Add a teaspoonful of salt, a small quantity of pepper; a small finely minced onion, some parsley and sweet herbs. Drop in the eggs, one at a time; do not stir, but let them brown.

NURSERY IDEAS.

There are mothers who make themselves doormats in the service of daughters who would be greatly benefited by being taught consideration instead of helplessness.

"Mother, do you know where my hat is?" is a question upon which much in life depends, although few mothers realize it.

The wise mother of a healthy, normal child when she does not know where the hat has been mislaid by the little one will say, "No, dear, I do not know. Can you not remember where you put it?"

If after a moment's serious consideration the child still does not remember she may offer a suggestion which may occur to her, then tell the youngster to hunt for it. The foolish mother, however, says: "Have you lost it? Well, wait a minute and I'll hunt for it." From that day her life is one continuous hunt for all the things for which the child should be responsible.

Satisfied Policy-Holder

[COPY] Toronto, March 1st, 1912.

W. H. HILL, Esq.,
Manager,
Sun Life Assurance Co.,
Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Sir,—I wish to thank the Sun Life Assurance Company, through you, for the prompt and very satisfactory settlement of my 15 year Endowment Policy, No. 64345, which matured and was paid me to-day.

I have also a 15 year Endowment maturing to-day in another leading ——— Company.

The contrast, in the results, in favour of your Company is so marked that I want you to know it, but I am at a loss to know how such a difference could honestly occur. When I tell you that the profits in your Company are three and one-third times the profits in the other Company referred to, and this too notwithstanding I paid the other Company $1.15 per year more per $1000 than I paid you, you will realize my inability to comprehend the cause.

This is surely a tribute to the management of the Sun Life, and I am so well pleased I have applied for further insurance with you.

Incidentally, I would like to say a word for your loan privilege. As you are aware, I borrowed some money on my policy, a little over a year ago, which enabled me to obtain a substantial interest in a town site in the Northwest, and you will be pleased to learn that it has already yielded substantial gain and gives promise to pay hundreds per cent., so that it is impossible to fully realize the value of that Policy to me.

I thought as an old Peterborough boy you would be pleased to know I am delighted with the result.

Yours truly,
(Signed) ROBERT E. DOLAN.

BROWNIES WIN FIRST GAME IN BASKETBALL LEAGUE

The City Basketball League was opened for the season last night when the Brownies and Hustlers met and put up a first class exhibition of basketball. Both teams were very evenly matched, though neither team were strong in shooting ability, while the close checking did not help any. The Brownies started off with a rush, and when half time was called, had the score of their opponents doubled. After the rest period a shift was made by the Hustlers which enabled them to outscore the Brownies in the second half. When time was called the Brownies were leading 28 points to the Hustlers 21. Teams:

Hustlers— S. Hall and Ellis forwards; Wallis, centre; Flowers and Loomis, defence.

Referee—J. J. Thompson.

The next game will be played on Friday evening at 9.00 p.m. when the fast Collegiate team and the Eko Club last year's champions, will meet.

Friday evening will be junior athletic contest night at the local Association, commencing at 7.30 sharp. The first event will be called in the 'Laing Trophy' contest for the all-round athletic championship of the Boys Department. The events will be the 60 yard potato race, 220 yard potato race, running high jump, standing broad jump, 8 lb. shot put, fence vault. Points will be given in every event and the boy with the highest score will the champion indoor athlete of the Boys Department. Geo. Reid was the winner of the contest last year, and also holds the record for the number of points scored. The senior contest for 1912 will be held on Wednesday, March 20th.

Salary Limit Not Likely To Be Increased In The Canadian League

LONDON, MARCH 12.—It is altogether probable that the attempt to raise the salary limit of the Canadian League will meet with a great deal of opposition when it is brought up at the meeting to be held in Hamilton on Wednesday. The smaller cities on the circuit are all against the move, while Hamilton, London and Ottawa are in favour of the raise.

However, it is not likely that anything will be done in the matter this year, and the $1,200 limit will be adhered to for the present season.

Whether it would be an advisable move or not is a matter hard to decide. Many of the managers are of the opinion that just as good players can be signed up under the lower limit than under a larger one, and then it is pointed out that the smaller cities would suffer if the limit was shifted.

Last season not one of the clubs made an effort to keep under the limit, and the result was that Hamilton and London were about the only cities that were able to keep the pace.

There is no doubt that the splendid support given the local team was the means of helping many of the other teams out of the hole. In August the Berlin team played something like twelve games in London, while Guelph and Brantford were also frequent visitors.

This season, with all the clubs remaining within the salary limit, there should be no necessity for the smaller clubs having to play a large number of games into the one city in order to bring them out even on the financial end.

Warm Praise For Templin

Berlin People Are Delighted With His Appointment

BERLIN, ONT., MARCH 12.—Berlin fans are delighted with the appointment of "Old Folks" Templin as manager of the Peterborough Canadian League team. He was a strong factor in winning the championship for Berlin last year. He commenced the season as left fielder but was pulled into the infield about the middle of the season and held down second base in clever style. At bat he was a towel of strength. His strong point is the development of young players and his executive ability will enable him to provide a strong team for the Electric City fans.

CY YOUNG PREDICTS SUCCESSFUL YEAR

PEOPLI, ORIO, MARCH 12.—This little Buckeye hamlet, lost behind the Tuscarawas hills, is best identified as the home of Denton Tecumseh "Cy" Young, ball player, farmer, author and sportsman. Peoli doesn't occupy a place on the ordinary map, but the grand old veteran of twenty-two major league summers has winter mail addressed there, and he isn't ashamed of it either.

It will be Young's twenty-third year in the major leagues, but the great pitcher who, with Bill Dineen, snatched a world's championship away from Pittsburg in 1903, can't see anything significant in that. He looks hale and hearty, and there isn't a trace of soreness in the great right arm that has been the object of his tenderest care for these many years.

It seems a pity to bore Cy with baseball talk at a time when he was busy in the barnyard with his sheep.

"I am not worrying about my future in baseball," laughed Cy, as he opened the barn door in order that three hundred of his wooly pets could scurry into the sheep pens.

"You see," he added, "I'm just like any ordinary pitcher. There are days when I may not be just right. I have had such days thru my whole career. But when I am right, I am as good as ever. My arm isn't sore, and I am as good constitutionally as ever.

"I have been blessed with a pretty good right arm, and I have tried to take the best of care of it. My system of conservation has been based on nothing more than common sense. I haven't had it worn out thru useless massaging and rubbing after games. Some day it may go back on me, but that time has not come yet."

"Mathewson says he hopes to beat your record of 500 odd games won," ventured a visitor.

"More power to Matty," laughed Young. "But he must not take it for granted that I am done yet. I expect to win many more games."

"I love the old game," concluded Cy, "and I don't mind talking about it, altho, like all other players, I must shy away from arguments and discussions during the season. When a ball player's love for the game ceases, then he ceases to be a ball player. I feel the thrills of every game at this late day just as I felt them as a kid on the lot over yonder."

HOCKEY HAPPENINGS

Following is the line-up of the Eagle Band for their game at Brock street between 9 and 10 o'clock tonight: Rae, Butcher, Weatherstone, Anderson, Mills, Russell and Lebar.

The "Hungry Seven" and the "We Never Sleep" bunch played a tie game at Brock street rink last night, the score being seven all at the finish. Following were the teams:

Referee—"Ab" Allen.

The tie is to be played off on Thursday, March 14, from 9 to 10.

STANLEY CUP RECORD.

The Stanley Cup, emblematic of the professional hockey championship of the world, was donated to the Amateur Hockey Association of Canada in 1893 by the late Lord Stanley of Preston then Governor-General of Canada, as a challenge trophy to be competed for and held by champions of recognized senior leagues at that time, one match only being necessary to decide the winners.

The first holders of the cup were the Montreal Amateur Athletic Association team, as champions of the A. H. A. of Canada, 1893.

1894—Osgoode Hall Hockey Club (champions O. H. A.) challenged, but match declared off on account of lack of ice.

1895—M.A.A.A. defeated Queen's University (O.H.A.), March, 5 to 1; one game, Montreal Victorias as champions A.H.A. of Canada take the cup. (Manitoba League.)

Quebec beat Moncton by 9 to 3 in first game.

HOW TERM "BONEHEAD" GOT INTO BASEBALL

Eddie Ashenback, the well known minor league manager, who died recently, was the inventor of the expression "bonehead," which, with "concrete dome," "cement skull," "solid ivory," has become a byword in baseball. When Ashenback was managing the Shreveport team of the Southern League several years ago, he had a good catcher, who could also hit some, but he had the very serious weakness of not being able to gauge a foul fly, no matter how easy it was.

One day a batter raised a high foul, directly over the plate, and the catcher, misjudging it, was hit squarely on top of the head by the descending sphere, which knocked off his mask and bounded away about thirty feet. That night Ashenback finished his supper early and was passing out of the dining-room when he happened to walk behind this catcher, who was devouring his evening meal with gusto and enthusiasm. Stopping at the table, Ed passed his hands over the lackstop's head, feeling for the bump which he thought would surely be there on account of the contact with the ball that afternoon. But there was no lump to be felt. "No wonder," said Ash. "How could there be a bump? Your head is solid bone."

BASEBALL

Peterborough chose an able baseball leader when they appointed Old Folks Templin manager of the club. Templin has had wide experience in the game and should be able to give the Lift Lock city a fast aggregation of scrappy players.— Hamilton Spectator.

OTTAWA, MARCH 12.— Manager Frank Shaughnessy, of the Ottawa Baseball League, received a letter yesterday from President Varnell, of the Fort Wayne club, of which Shaughnessy was appointed manager last fall. Shaughnessy had applied to Varnell for his release and a well-known Ottawa sportsman had generously offered to purchase it for him, but Varnell refused the request, and sent Shaughnessy a hot letter, in which he accused the Ottawa officer of tampering wih a player belonging to another club. He also threatened to report the matter to the National commission. Naturally, Varnell's reply came as a shock to the Ottawa promoters, but he is mistaken in accusing them of "tampering" with Shaughnessy, for Frank had not yet signed and understands that he could not do so without permission of the Fort Wayne management. The Ottawas intend to make another big effort to get Shaughnessy, and though the outlook is blue they have not abandoned hope. They have already written to the National commission explaining their position. In the event of Shaughnessy not being able to act here it is certain that the Ottawas will proceed with their plans. Louis Cooke, of the university of Illinois, has been recommended to the Ottawa club by Shaughnessy.

COSTLY WIT.

John Hanscom, formerly a gateman at the North Station, is always willing to give reminiscences of the life which he led for 17 years, and many are the valuable hints which he gives to young men just taking up the work.

"Be jovial, but not too witty," is one of the maxims, and the other night he told a little story to illustrate it.

"'Will I have time to say good-bye to my friends?'

PAID UP.

Lord Guilford tells a story of a young lady's resources at a bazaar. Business was in full swing, when a young man strolled around the various stalls with no intention of purchasing anything. As he passed a large, beautifully decorated stall the young lady seller detained him. "Won't you buy a cigarette holder, sir?" she asked. "No, thank you; I don't smoke," was the curt reply. "Or a pennipaper, worked with my own hands?" "I don't write." "Then do have this nice box of chocolates." "I don't eat sweets." The young lady's patience was exhausted. "Sir," she said, grimly, "will you buy this box of soap?" The young man paid up.—Ideas.

CHRISTMAS PUNCH.

The late Ida Lewis, keeper of the Newport lighthouse, saved many sailors from drowning, and saved many, too, from drunkenness.

Ida Lewis once rebuked a half dozen sailors who were preparing to brew a Christmas punch.

"It will get you into trouble," she said. "Those strong Christmas punches always do. A fine young sailor—but he's filling a drunkard's grave today—once offered me a glass of Christmas punch, saying:

"'Drink it, ma'am. It's food and drink in one.'

"'Yes,' said I, 'and a night's lodging as well if you take enough of it.'"—Washington Star.

The State of South Carolina produced last year 2,000 pounds of tea, some of which has sold for as much as 41 cents a pound. The production seems likely to increase until tea becomes an important product of the state.

RULES OF THE AIR.

Under the caption of aviation notes Judge makes some additions to an international code of regulations for the control of aviators and air lines. The following are taken from the list and changed to meet local conditions:

1. Aviators must not refill Theromos bottles from the Milky Way. Rainwater, for public use, may usually be found in the Dipper.

2. An aeroplane falling must keep clear of all others in flight.

3. When two aeroplanes meet in a narrow street lined with skyscrapers, the one in the greater hurry shall fall first. Passers-by are permitted to collect the pieces.

4. In falling from altitudes of less than 5,000 feet, the aviator shall not land upon any person or object likely to be damaged by the impact. He must, if he has time (and breath), utter a distress signal, consisting of several loud yells.

5. When an aeroplane collapses at a high altitude, the airman in command must at once hitch on to the nearest auntay and hoist distress signals.

"Drop me a line-" yelled the sailor, who had fallen overboard.

A Hindu baker's assistant in Bombay, on setting up in business for himself, bethought him of catering for the English community, as well as for the native one. With this end in view, accordingly, he had the following notification painted over his door way: "Ram Bux solicits respectful patronage. He is a first-class British loafer."—Tit-Bits.

CARING FOR UNCLE HORACE

(Short Story).

Uncle Horace was over 60 and discouragingly rich.

There is a point where one's income becomes so great that people pass from common, ordinarily covetous envy to a resignedly helpless state of mind. They write down the figures of that income, stare at them, and then say, "Oh, shucks! There ain't no such income!" That was the delightful kind of income Uncle Horace had.

Mrs. Stebbins and Mrs. Cromp, his two nieces, were so devoted to him and said they counted it such a joy to have the dear old man's presence glorify their homes that they lost good sleep planning how to entice him away from each other.

Moreover, each was firmly convinced that the other was a designing person and that the way she fawned upon Uncle Horace with an eye to the future was simply shocking. Both of them were exceedingly thankful that they were not that kind.

Since he had come to stay with Mrs. Stebbins for a few months she had felt that something was wrong with Uncle Horace. If it had not been for his income. Uncle Horace would have been a small, insignificant individual with pale eyes and an unpleasant habit of wanting the best chair, and of sitting in the next room and coughing when his niece had callers. Under the circumstances he was a reserved, original man with ideas of his own, which his relatives delighted to humour.

What worried Mrs. Stebbins especially was Uncle Horace's air of abstraction and his unwonted helpfulness. Usually he was under feet, investigating everything that went on and getting in the way tremendously. On these occasions Mrs. Stebbins was wont to say, through her teeth, that it was perfectly wonderful the way Uncle Horace kept up his youthful interest in things.

This time he paid no attention to what was going on in the house, but would sit down in meditation or stare out of the window. Mrs. Stebbins' first fear was that he was losing his mind.

She said she would feel perfectly terrible if anything like that happened to the dear old man while he was under her care. She said she never would be able to forgive herself, never!

"Mebbe it's rheumatism," Stebbins suggested, hopefully. "That is liable to make a man do almost anything."

"Don't you want some more blankets on your bed, Uncle Horace?" his niece asked him after this suggestion. "Are you perfectly comfortable?"

"Thank you, Tilda, I'm perfectly comfortable," Uncle Horace had responded. "I guess I'll go after the mail!"

This was really a double blow, for Uncle Horace normally was not polite, and he always wanted anything that was offered him, no matter what it was, and also it was a long walk to the post office.

Mrs. Stebbins had begged him to let little Johnny go and save his own strength, but Uncle Horace had persisted. He said he felt that he ought to do something instead of sitting around and letting the family wear themselves out waiting on him, and that he was glad to be of service.

"Not in this rain, Uncle Horace-" or "Surely not when the wind is blowing so, Uncle Horace!" or "Don't worry me by going out in this snowstorm, Uncle Horace!" had not the remotest effect upon him when he started to climb into his galoshes and wrappings to go after the mail.

Mrs. Stebbins said to her husband, dolefully, that she feared it was the beginning of the end.

The week that Uncle Horace took to starting at a sound and to flushing at a word or unexpected look, filled Mrs. Stebbins with alarm. That something awful was the matter with Uncle Horace she was convinced and she besought him to see a doctor. She made him jelly and fed him beef tea despite his protests and tried in vain to get some intelligible conversation out of him.

Then one day he went after the mail and did not come back.

Mrs. Stebbins had the whole town out searching for him. She wept as she looked on closet shelves and up trees and in other impossible places, and said that nobody could know how her heart bled at the idea that darling old Uncle Horace might be in terrible danger that very moment.

The Stebbins family and most of the town stayed up all night searching. Then the next morning a note that explained everything came from Uncle Horace.

"I went away to get married," he wrote in his crouched hand. "I have been corresponding some time with a most estimable widow of 46, who wants to make a home for me in my old age. She has four children, and we will all come to visit you soon, for I know you will be as fond of Sally and the children as you are of me."

They revived Mrs. Stebbins three times before she quit fainting. Then she remembered that Mrs. Cromp was hit just as hard as she was and that made her feel better.

"It serves that designing, self-seeking woman exactly right!" she told the neighbours. "Pretending to care about the doddering, foolish, tiresome old man! As for me, I told him in because I felt it was my duty!"—Chicago News.

THE APPROPRIATE HYMN

At a Baptist convention in La Grange some years ago the preacher who delivered the convention sermon read from manuscript. He used small sheets of paper, and as he read one he laid it aside on the pulpit. As the sermon was long (and many leaves) the minister in concluding, said: "We will close the service by the choir selecting some appropriate hymn." And that choir, by association of ideas perhaps, unconsciously sang, "Leaves, Nothing but Leaves."—Macon Telegraph.

Seat Sale Opens Saturday Morning

Mr. and Mrs. S. Matchett of Otonabee, announce the engagement of their daughter, Olive, to Hugh J. Hall of Edmonton, son of Mr. W. A. Hall of Peterborough. The wedding will be quietly celebrated on Wednesday, March 27th.

Mr. Louis Wainwright, whose nom de plume stands high in the literary world, as a writer and critic, spent last Friday as the guest of Miss Revell, Rogers street. Mr. Wainwright is on his way home from an interesting trip to the far East. He brought back many lovely souvenirs and had many queer and interesting experiences among the Orientals, whose lives and habits he was studying.

Lost Control Of His Temper

Once there was a man whose liver was not working right. When dressing in the morning he had trouble with his collar. Then he lost the collar button. Then he said something.

By the time he got to breakfast he was so irritated that he had no appetite and quarrelled with his wife. He went to the office with a headache and when he had some important business to transact he bungled it.

When you find yourself easily irritated and lose control of yourself and your temper, look to the condition of the liver, and take one of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills at bedtime.

The dark-brown taste will not bother you in the mornings, the tongue will clear up, digestion will improve and you will not have the tired, worn-out feelings which accompany a sluggish condition of the liver.

CHARITY WORK EASING UP.

The Situation is Beginning to Assume Normal Conditions.

There has been a decided falling off in the number of cases seeking relief from the Charity Department. It is but natural that such should be the case, as with the advent of fine weather and a quickening movement in industrial circles, the conditions responsible for the existence of needy cases are gradually being ameliorated. Mr. Miller, the local relief officer, still has a few charitable cases on his hands, but he reports a very gratifying falling off in the number of appeals for charity.

THE SALE OF LIQUOR.

Sir,—Perhaps alcoholic drink is altogether bad, but there are worse evils. Disraeli said: "I would rather have a drunken nation than one without liberty." I say, abolish the fines and drunkenness would cease. It should be remembered there is vested interest in vice; a story I over heard may enlighten. A delivery rig stopped at the dwelling of the Inspector who said: "take it away, my cellar is full for ten years give it to some charitable institution."

KNOWING ONE ANOTHER.

I have a friend who says:

"When I first saw the Oriental rugs of the professor of our new red brick high school building's wife, hangin' on the line, I says to myself: 'No. Not that woman. I won't never vote for her for president of the Ladies' Aid. She ain't one of us.' And while they was votin' that day I set over in one corner feelin' mean, and thinkin': 'No. You don't get no ballot out of me. You ain't folks.' And then the next mornin', while I was gettin' breakfast, she come walkin' across the yard between our two houses, and she says: 'Oh, Mis' Arthur, I'm makin' Johnny Cake, and I can't tell whether you put in soda or bakin' powder. Which do you?' And when I'd told her how, and she'd started back, I stood inside the screen door just lookin' after her. And I thought: 'Why, my land. Underneath your Oriental rugs you was like that all the time. Why, you're folks.'

The thing is as simple as the light. Getting to know one another is the [illegible] Social [illegible] to work it [illegible]

BUT HE DIDN'T PROVE IT

"I went away without paying the other day," said a clerk in a downtown business house to the manager of a restaurant where guests wait on themselves and tell the cashier when leaving how much they have to pay. The clerk then handed the manager twenty-five cents and said: "I didn't mean to 'do you' for the amount; only wanted to prove to my friend that it could be done." "Thank you," said the manager, "but you proved nothing," and he took the young man to the desk, where he showed him this memorandum: "Look out for young fellow, light hair, glasses, low necktie—looks fresh." The young man's smile faded when he was told: "That's you."

A train in Arizona was boarded by robbers, who went through the pockets of the luckless passengers. One of them happened to be a travelling salesman from New York, who, when his turn came, fished out $300, but rapidly took $4 from the pile and placed it in his vest pocket. "What do you mean by that?" asked the robber, as he toyed with his revolver. Hurriedly came the answer: "Mine front, you surely vould not refuse me $2 per cent. discount on a strictly cash transaction like dis?"

To preserve a child's first set of teeth from decay wash them in lukewarm water containing a little borax, and brush with a soft brush directly after meals. It is most important to preserve the first teeth from decay, for if they are not retained up to the proper period, the second set is apt to be defective.

Perfect cleanliness should invariably be observed regarding the nursery brushes and sponges. The latter, when greasy and impregnated with soap, may be cleaned by soaking them for 24 hours in a quart of water in which two ounces of soda have been dissolved, the sponge being afterward well rinsed in vinegar and water.

To freshen the air of a sick-room, ground coffee should be sprinkled on a shovel of coal scoop previously heated in the fire. A match should then be held to a small piece of camphor gum, and when this is lighted should be placed on centre of shovel.

Hon. W. T. White Brought Down First Budget of New Government

NO TARIFF CHANGE

Ottawa, March 14.—Hon. W. T. White yesterday brought down the first budget of the new Conservative regime. The budget speech showed that Canada had never been more prosperous than to-day, a state of affairs for which the Finance Minister modestly declined to take more than a portion of the credit, which he thought might be shared between the present and the late Government. There was enough to go round.

As to the fiscal year 1911-12, up to the end of February last, the revenue received was $130,645,816. Adding to this the estimated revenues for the present month and payments made after March 31 he placed the revenue for the entire fiscal year at $136,000,000. To the end of February the expenditure was $77,145,344. He estimated the total expenditure for the fiscal year at about $97,000,000. This would give a surplus as regards consolidated revenue and expenditure of $39,000,000.

"I am sure I can congratulate the House and the country upon what is undoubtedly a record year for the Dominion," declared Mr. White.

Capital and special expenditures on the N.T.R. and other public works would amount to about $30,400,000. To this he added the $5,000,000 paid to implement the guarantee of the G.T.P. bonds, bringing the capital expenses of the year up to $39,000,000.

"Out of the revenues," he said, "we shall thus be provided for the current expenditures, for the capital outlays and for reduction in the public debt."

When the country was prosperous he thought was the time when Canada should have such revenues in excess of current expenditure as would meet in a large measure the capital expenditure necessary in a constructive period. Otherwise the credit of the country might be impaired at the very time Canada needed the money by the large increase of the public debt."

For 1912-13, Mr. White expressed the hope of a considerable advance in prosperity. The main estimates totaling $148,789,677 had been brought down and there might be further supplementary estimates. He believed that the end of the next fiscal year it would be found that the revenue was sufficient to meet not only the current but part of the capital and special expenditures.

The Government was committed to the building of the Hudson Bay Railway, the G.T.P. was pushing on to Prince Rupert, and the C.N.R. was extending its line to Vancouver. Soon the Panama Canal would be completed and it would be necessary to provide for the carriage of grain to the Pacific coast.

The gross public debt on March 31, 1911, he said, was $474,491,487. Deducting from this the assets, the net debt would amount to $360,012,059. The country was now passing through a time when loans were maturing and provision had to be made to meet them.

In view of the creation of the tariff commission, with the object of obtaining data, Mr. White announced that there would be no tariff changes at present. There had, of course, been many requests for changes, but he did not think any of the cases were of such a nature that any great harm would be done by a slight delay.

Mr. MacDonald (Pictou)—"Do I understand that my hon. friend will not propose any resolution with respect to bounties?"

"My hon. friend understands correctly," replied the Finance Minister. "It is not my intention to introduce any resolution with regard to the tariff or bounties."

A. K. MacLean (Halifax) declared that the task of the Minister of Finance in presenting the budget had been comparatively easy. He had been largely distributing the harvest that others planted. Mr. MacLean thought the abounding prosperity set forth showed that Canada probably had reached a point when there might be some diminution in taxation.

He warned the Finance Minister that some of his colleagues were very expensive gentlemen. They might have come in by the front door, like the Finance Minister, but they came in with requests in their hands.

Mr. MacLean estimated the customs "taxation" of the people during the present year at $100,000,000, and he would not be surprised if it reached $120,000,000. And still, he commented, hon. gentlemen opposite seemed to accept the situation with equanimity. The late Government had gone down to defeat fighting for a reduction in this taxation. He reminded the Minister that reciprocity was still a living issue in Canada.

W. F. Maclean (South York) declared that while he agreed in all the Finance Minister had said about the prosperity of Canada, he was disappointed at the absence of any reference in the budget speech to Imperial defence and what the attitude of Canada was to be towards Imperial defence. This was a question which stood out far above all others.

Mr. Verville (Maisonneuve) moved the adjournment of the debate, which will be concluded on Thursday.

Big Cannery at Fenthill.

St. Catharines, March 14.—The Dominion Canners' Co. are arranging to open one of the largest canning factories in this district at Fonthill. The plans are already in the contractors' hands and work will be begun as soon as the weather will permit. The factory will be in operation this year.

Pitney to Supreme Court Bench.

Washington, March 14. Mahlon Pitney, chancellor of the State of New Jersey, President Taft's nominee to succeed the late Justice Harlan on the Supreme Court bench, was finally confirmed yesterday by the Senate by a vote of 50 to 26. Justice Pitney will come to Washington on Monday.

Five Republican Senators who voted against Mr. Pitney's confirmation were Bourne, Bristow, Kenyon, Cummins and Poindexter.

Two Big Deficits.

Winnipeg, March 14.—In the Legislature yesterday it was announced that the cost of operating the Government elevators in Manitoba during the past year was $183,900 and the revenue produced was $99,755. The deficit on the Government telephone system was $140,000.

This Dynamite Was Harmless.

Kingston, March 14.—While men were engaged in thawing out five boxes of frozen dynamite in the office of Guay and Bergeron, Perth road, it caught fire and destroyed the offices and stores completely. Luckily the dynamite did not explode. No lives were lost.

Would Go Slow on Church Union.

Kingston, March 14.—At a meeting of the Kingston presbytery it was reported that church union would be carried in this presbytery by a vote of two to one. The presbytery urges the general assembly not to move too quickly in consummating the proposed union.

Orange Grand Master Wishes Success to Ulster in Fight Against Home Rule

London, March 14.—The 56th annual meeting of the Grand Orange Lodge of Ontario West is in session here in the Y.M.C.A. Auditorium. Of the 600 delegates present at the opening meeting, a considerable number have been here since Tuesday, attending the Grand Black Chapter, which elected their officers yesterday morning. It is sixteen years since this Grand Lodge met here, the membership in the County of Middlesex having grown in that time from six to nineteen lodges.

Worshipful Brother Harry Lovelock of Toronto read his annual address to the lodge, referring to the bilingual question and the home rule problem, but intimated that the legislation committee report that will be presented by Bro. Wm. Banks at to-day's session will deal fully with both questions.

The committees that prepare the work for to-day's reunion were named, and are as follows: Credentials, J. J. Hunter, Kincardine; chairman correspondence, A. W. Wright, Toronto; finance, James Mayor, Toronto; supervisor and expulsions, Paul Gallagher, Centre Simcoe; petitions and appeals, Marshall Thompson, Essex; returns, W. J. Douglass, North Toronto, and a special committee headed by the G. M. of B. A., Col. J. H. Scott of Kincardine to deal with the report of the executive.

There is a well-defined rumor that the present Grand Master, Harry Lovelock, will retire, and in that case Fred. Dane will succeed him, his place being taken by Dr. J. J. Williams of Woodstock.

There will be keen competition for the vacant treasurership, formerly occupied by the late John Hewitt of Toronto, whose daughter, Miss L. Hewitt, under the supervision of the grand master and secretary, prepared the annual report. The names mentioned are W. Cooke, Meaford, the present assistant secretary, and James Mayor of Toronto; Joseph Thompson is also being urged to run. Hon. Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, wired that he could not come, but Hon. Dr. Pyne will attend. Col. J. H. Scott, Kincardine, the grand master of British America, together with J. Parkhill, P.G.M., of Midland, are here.

In his opening address as grand master, Harry Lovelock, said: "One school, one flag, and one language—this is what the Dominion wants to make it the brightest gem in the British Empire."

"As your grand master, I feel that I voice the sentiments of this grand lodge when I say that our brethren in the old land have our undying sympathy in their efforts to prevent the passage of a home rule bill for Ireland, and that our hopes and our prayers are being exercised on their behalf, and if need be our personal and financial assistance."

William M. Fitzgerald of Toronto reported that 15 primary lodges, three new district lodges and one county lodge had been established during the year.

Avalanche Kills Four.

St. John's, Nfld., March 14.—A terrible tragedy occurred at Tilt cover, Notre Dame Bay, which resulted in the death of four people, and the injury of several others.

Tiltcover is situated in a valley, with hills of great height surrounding it. Tuesday night an avalanche came down from one of the hills and demolished the dwellings of Mr. Williams, manager of the Tiltcover copper mine, and Wm. Cunningham, customs officer, burying the inmates and killing Williams, his son and two servants. His wife and two daughters were severely injured.

Cunningham and his family had a miraculous escape, the house being buried, and the family had to be dug out. Although they sustained injuries, none of them were serious.

Killed Two Train Robbers.

San Antonio, Tex., March 14.—An express messenger named Truesdale balked the robbery of a Southern Pacific train near Sanderson early yesterday, when he trapped two highwaymen who had held up the train, and killed them.

CONTAGION OF STRIKES

Situation in U.S. Coal Industry is Now Very Ominous

GERMAN STRIKE SPREADS

New York, March 14.—The anthracite coal operators and the United Mine Workers of America alike profess unyielding adherence to their attitudes concerning the miners' demands. "The situation looks very blue and the indications point to a strike," declared President John P. White of the miners. The operators say positively that they will make no concessions.

With the formal rejection of the miners' demands and the counter proposition that the present agreements, which expires March 31, be continued for three years, the operators' committee of ten adjourned yesterday afternoon until to-morrow morning. Adjournment was taken upon the request of the miners' officials, who will meet in the meantime to consider the operators' reply and plan their procedure. This, it is expected, will be announced at the joint meeting of miners and the operators' committee to-morrow.

"I can say this much," said President White yesterday afternoon: "We will not make any modification of our demands. Beyond that I cannot tell."

The operators' reply, made public yesterday afternoon, is a document of approximately 2,500 words. It deals with the demands seriatim and in detail.

"It is out of the question to advance wages," reads the reply, "unless we can, in some manner, realise from the sale of coal produced a sum equal to the increase in wages." This increase, it is stated, would aggregate $26,600,000 a year, and the whole advance which would average about 67 cents a ton, would be borne by the domestic sizes of coal. The increase in the cost of producing anthracite coal in recent years has reduced the margin of profit to a point beyond which further reduction is impossible," the reply declares.

No Change in England.

London, March 14.—The thirteenth day of the coal strike ended without a settlement having been reached. The joint conference of the representatives of the miners and mine owners and members of the Cabinet adjourned last evening until this afternoon, "in order to consider certain proposals by the Prime Minister," as the announcement put it.

Concerning the nature of the proposals and the results achieved at the conference, which lasted five and a half hours, the Government is persisting in its policy of rigid secrecy, but there are indications that some progress in the direction of peace has been made and that the miners have receded from the position they have heretofore maintained that the only basis of a settlement would be the owners' acceptance of the federation's schedule of minimum wages.

Prior to the opening of the conference the National Miners' Federation held a meeting and adopted a resolution which gives the various districts authority to renew negotiations with the mine owners on the question of rates, varying them as they may deem proper, but stipulating that all amended schedules must be endorsed by the national conference, and that the settlement of the strike must be national in its scope.

German Strike Spreads.

Berlin, March 14.—The coal miners' strike in the great German coal fields of Westphalia continues to spread. There are over 200,000 men now on strike and the situation is becoming worse everywhere. It has taken a most serious turn in several districts and has resulted already in a fatal conflict between the police and the striking miners in district of Herne. The feeling among the men is increasing in intensity owing to the rigid repressive measures of the authorities and at any moment troops may be called out to quell the disturbances.

It is officially stated here that the provisional authorities have been instructed to call out the troops if the police prove inadequate to deal with the situation.

Imperial Co-operation Urged.

London, March 14.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—In the Associated Chambers of Commerce yesterday Sir A. Spicer moved that, having regard to the American control of cables touching British territory, the Government be urged of the necessity, on national Imperial grounds, of co-operation with the Governments of the dominions, especially Canada, in establishing an independent, strictly all-British cable, in line with the Imperial Pacific cable.

This resolution was opposed by Sir J. Barron, Parliamentary Secretary to the Postmaster-General, who said that such developments were occurring in telegraphy that he asked the association not to pledge themselves to this resolution yet awhile. Spicer thereupon withdrew his resolution.

Car Plunged Into Hudson.

Hyde Park, N.Y., March 14.—The second section of the Twentieth Century, Limited, on the New York Central, from Chicago for New York, was wrecked near here yesterday morning at nine o'clock.

Four passenger coaches were thrown into the Hudson River and partially submerged, but no one was killed, and only four passengers were slightly injured.

The train was running at a high rate of speed.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

It is claimed that the Kingston Penitentiary is five guards short on the staff, and in view of the attempt at escape of four desperate prisoners at Toronto, there is an agitation to have the vacancies filled at once.

Mother Ignatia, who had been for 58 years connected with the order of Loretto and until two years ago mother superior, died Tuesday morning in Loretto Abbey, Toronto, after a long illness. She was 80 years of age.

John Hannon, a veteran of that memorable march made by Gen. Sherman during the American Civil War, historically known as "Sherman's March Through Georgia," died in St. Michael's Hospital, Toronto, yesterday, from paralysis.

Drove Into Unused Quarry.

Belleville, March 14.—A middle-aged man, George Swenor, a livery man at Point Anne, Tuesday night while driving from Shannonville to his home, owing to the darkness of the night drove into an unused quarry sustaining painful injuries.

Three ribs were broken, his collar bone broken, and he was severely cut about the face and head. He was brought to the hospital here for treatment.

Follow Canada, Says Greenwood.

London, March 14.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—At a meeting of the Associated Chambers of Commerce, Hamar Greenwood, M.P., moved that the Canadian conciliation and labor and industrial disputes investigation acts should be adopted here, which would do something to make sudden strikes impossible, but the motion was lost.

Another Lesson
From
J. W. BROWETT Optometrist

YOU are a parent. Your child is in school a certain number of hours each day, using the eyes constantly. Each year the lessons become harder, books are taken home, studies are continued in the evening, the eyes are being overtaxed, the delicate muscles are strained; yet perhaps no thought is given to helping the eyes. We know that injury results from this neglect. We must realize that, if there is a cause for eye strain, there must be a remedy; the remedy most naturally would be rest for the eyes; this rest can be obtained by wearing resting Glasses. Come and let me explain to you scientifically why resting Glasses should be worn.

We believe that parents are wise in caring for their Children's eyes, the remedy is simple and the cost is slight.

Farmer Bested and Robbed.

Niagara Falls, Ont., March 14.—Horatio Wilcox, a prominent St. David farmer, reported to the provincial police yesterday that he had been beaten up and robbed by David Goodes, recently liberated from jail after six months' imprisonment. The alleged robbing is said to have been committed Monday night while the pair were walking towards Wilcox's home. Goodes is still free.

Dynamite Trial in October.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 14.—All the defendants indicted for violation of federal statutes governing transportation of explosives must go to trial in one cause on Oct. 1, according to the final ruling of Judge Anderson yesterday, after he had heard argument of attorneys for the defence on a motion for separate trials.

Chased Seers From Kingston.

Kingston, March 14.—A number of Bulgarian men and women telling fortunes in a house on Sydenham street, and reaping a big harvest, were ordered out of the city by Mayor Hoag. They are some of the same gang which operated in Belleville and were chased out.

A Talk On Bifocal Lenses

I used to shy at bifocals. My patients usually came back and made such a fuss that I had often to keep the peace, to take back the glasses and give two pairs instead, one for near and the other for distance. But I have learned by experience and study of the subject, and I never hesitate any more, for it is all a matter of the adjustment. Even with the adjustment just right, there are a few who come back but never despair. I just take another glance, or a few glances, at the glasses, and usually I find it is the adjustment after all. It takes time for many people to get used to looking through segments, but possible people are willing to allow for this, but what they are afraid of is the danger of an accident in going up and down stairs. To remedy this the segments must be got low, so low that the edges, when looking down slightly, are below the bottom edge of the pupils of the eye. Of course, this means that in reading the eyes must be dropped quite low, which is a habit to be learned, but once learned there is no more trouble in using bifocals.

We carry all the different kinds of bifocal lenses, including the Ehrgood, Invisible, Kryptok. Ask for booklet explaining them.

OWES HER HEALTH

To Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Scottville, Mich.—"I want to tell you how much good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash have done me. I live on a farm and have worked very hard. I am forty-five years old, and am the mother of thirteen children. Many people think it strange that I am not broken down with hard work and the care of my family, but I tell them of my good friend, your Vegetable Compound, and that there will be no backache and bearing down pains for them if they will take it as I have. I am scarcely ever without it in the house.

"I will say also that I think there is no better medicine to be found for young girls to build them up and make them strong and well. My eldest daughter has taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for painful periods and irregularity, and it has always helped her.

"I am always ready and willing to speak a good word for the Lydia E. Pinkham's Remedies. I tell every one I meet that I owe my health and happiness to these wonderful medicines."—Mrs. J. G. JOHNSON, Scottville, Mich., R.F.D. 8.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotics or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record for the largest number of actual cures of female diseases.

"INITIALS ONLY"

BY ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

"The same. The Department may have forgotten it, but I haven't. Mr. Gryce, there's a startling similarity in the two cases if you study the essential features only. Startling, I assure you."

"Yes, you are right there. But what if there is? We were no more successful in solving that case than we have been in solving this. Yet you look and act like a hound which has struck a hot scent."

"I shall never learn," said he, "not to give tongue till the hunt is fairly started. If you will excuse me, we'll first make sure of the similarity I have mentioned. Then I'll explain myself. I have some notes here, made at the time it was decided to drop the Hicks Street case as a wholly inexplicable one. As you know, I never can bear to say 'die,' and I sometimes keep such notes as a possible help in case any such unfinished matter should come up again. Shall I read them?"

"Do. Twenty years ago it would not have been necessary. I should have remembered every detail of an affair so puzzling. But my memory is no longer entirely reliable. So fire away, my boy, though I hardly see your purpose or what real bearing the fair in Hicks Street ha supon the wealthy Miss Challoner! True, they were not unlike in their end."

"The connection will come later," smiled the young detective, with that strange softening of his features which made one at times forget his extreme plainness. "I'm sure you will not consider the time lost if I ask you to consider the comparison I am about to make, if only as a curiosity in criminal annals."

And he read:

"'On the afternoon of December Fourth, 1910, the strong and persistent screaming of a young child in one of the rooms of a rear tenement in Hicks Street, Brooklyn, drew the attention of some of the inmates and led them, after several ineffectual efforts to gain an entrance, to the breaking in of the door which had been fastened on the inside by an old-fashioned door-button.

"'The tenant whom all knew for an honest, hard-working woman, had not infrequently fastened her door in this manner, in order to safeguard her child who was abnormally active and had a way of rattling the door open when it was not thus secured. But she had never refused to open before, and the child's cries were pitiful.

"'This was no longer a matter of wonder, when, the door having been wrenched from its hinges, they all rushed in. Across a tub of steaming clothes lifted upon a bench in the open window, they saw the body of this good woman, lying inert and seemingly dead; the frightened child tugging at her skirts. She was of a robust make, fleshy and fair, and had always been considered a model of health and energy, but at the sight of her helpless figure, thus stricken while at work, the one cry was 'A stroke!' till she had been lifted off and laid upon the floor. Then some discolouration in the water at the bottom of the tub led to a closer examination of her body, and the discovery of a bullet-hole in her breast directly over the heart.

"'As she had been standing with face towards the window, all crowded that way to see where the shot had come from. As they were on the fourth storey it could not have come from the court upon which the room looked. It could only have come from the front tenement, towering up before them some twenty feet away. A single window of the innumerable ones

"Mr. Gryce" (here Sweetwater laid by his notes that he might address the old gentleman more directly), "I was with the boys when they made their first official investigation. This is why you can rely upon facts as here given. I followed the investigation closely and missed nothing which could in any way throw light on the case. It was a mysterious one from the first, and lost nothing by further inquiry into the details.

"The first fact to startle us as we made our way up through the crowd which blocked halls and staircases was this: A doctor had been found, and, though he had been forbidden to make more than a cursory examination of the body till the coroner came, he had not hesitated to declare after his first look, that the wound had not been made by a bullet but by some sharp and slender weapon thrust home by a powerful hand. (You mark that, Mr. Gryce.) As this seemed impossible in face of the fact that the door had been found buttoned on the inside, we did not give much credit to his opinion and began our work under the obvious theory of an accidental discharge of some gun from one of the windows across the court. But the doctor was nearer right than we supposed. When the coroner came to look into the matter, he discovered that the wound was not only too small to have been made by the ordinary bullet to be found in the woman's body or anywhere else. Her heart had been reached by a thrust and not by a shot from a gun. Mr. Gryce, have you not heard a startling repetition of this report in a case nearer at hand?

"But to go back. This discovery, so important, if true, was as yet—that is, at the time of our entering the room—limited to the off-hand declaration of an irresponsible physician, but the possibility it involved was of so astonishing a nature that it influenced us unconsciously in our investigation and led us almost immediately into a consideration of the difficulties attending an entrance into, as well as an escape from, a room situated as this was.

"Up three flights from the court, with no communication with the adjoining rooms save through a door guarded on both sides by heavy pieces of furniture no one person could handle, the hall door buttoned on the inside, and the fire-escape some fifteen feet to the left, this room of death appeared to be as removed from the approach of a murderous outsider as the spot in the writing-room of the Clermont where Miss Challoner fell.

"Otherwise, the place presented the greatest contrast possible to that scene of splendour and comfort. I had not entered the Clermont at that time, and no such comparison could have struck my mind. But I have thought of it since, and you, with your experience, will not find it difficult to picture the room where this poor woman lived and worked. Bare walls, with just a newspaper illustration pinned up here and there, a bed—tragically occupied at this moment—a kitchen stove on which a boiler, half-filled with steaming clothes still bubbled and foamed—an old bureau a large pine wardrobe against an inner door which we later found to have been locked for months, and the key lost—some chairs—and most pronounced of all, because of its position directly before the window, a pine bench supporting a wash-tub of the old sort.

"As it was here the woman fell, this tub naturally received the closest examination." A board projected from its further side, whither it had evidently been pushed by the weight of her falling body; and from its top hung a wet cloth, marking with its lugubrious drip on the boards beneath the first heavy moments of silence which is the natural accompaniment of so serious a survey. On the floor to the right lay a half-used cake of soap just as it had slipped from her hand. The window was closed for the temperature was at the freezing-point, but it had been found up, and it was put up now to show the height at which it had then stood. As we all took our look at the house wall opposite, a sound of shouting came up from below. A dozen children were sliding on barrel staves down a slope of heaped-up snow. They had been engaged in this sport all the afternoon and were our witnesses later that no one had made a hazardous escape by means of the ladder of the fire-escape, running, as I have said, at an almost unattainable distance towards the left.

"Of her own child, whose cries had roused the neighbours, nothing was to be seen. The woman in the extreme rear had carried it off to her room; but when we came to see it later, no doubt was felt by any of us that this child was too young to talk connectedly, nor did I ever hear that it ever said anything which could in any way guide investigation.

"And that is as far as we ever got. The coroner's jury brought in a verdict of death by means of a stab from some unknown weapon in the hand of a person also unknown but no weapon was ever found, nor was it ever settled how the attack could have been made or the murderer escape under the conditions described. The woman was poor, her friends few, and the case seemingly inexplicable. So after creating some excitement by its peculiarities, it fell of its own weight. But I remembered it, and in many a spare hour have tried to see my way through the no-thoroughfare it presented. But quite in vain. To-day, the road is as blind as ever, but—" here Sweetwater's face sharpened and his eyes burned as he leaned closer and closer to the older detective—"but this second case, so unlike the first in non-essentials but so exactly like it in just those points which make the mystery, has dropped a thread from its tangled skein into my hand, which may yet lead us to the heart of both. Can you guess—have you guessed—what this thread is? But how could you without the one clue I have not given you? Mr. Gryce, the tenement where this occurerd is the same I visited the other night in search of Mr. Brotherson. And the man characterised at that time by the janitor as the best, the quietest, and most respectable tenant in the whole building, and the one you remember whose window opened directly opposite the spot where this woman lay dead, was Mr. Dunn himself, or, in other words, our late redoubtable witness, Mr. Orlando Brotherson."

CHAPTER XII.
MR. GRYCE FINDS AN ANTIDOTE FOR OLD AGE.

I thought I should make you sit up. I really calculated upon doing so, sir. Yes, I have established the plain fact that this Brotherson was near to, if not in the exact line of the scene of crime in each of these extraordinary and baffling cases. A very odd coincidence, is it not?" was the dry conclusion of our eager young detective. . . .

"Odd enough if you are correct in your statement. But I thought it was conceded that the man Brotherson was not personally near—was not even in the building at the time of the woman's death in Hicks Street; that he was out and had been out for hours, according to the janitor."

"And so the janitor thought, but he didn't quite know his man. I'm not sure that I do. But I mean to make his acquaintance and make it thoroughly before I let him go. The hero—well, I will say the possible hero of two such adventures—deserves some attention from one so interested in the abnormal as myself."

"Sweetwater, how came you to discover that Mr. Dunn of this ramshackle tenement in Hicks Street was identical with the elegantly equipped admirer of Miss Challoner?"

"Just this way. The night before Miss Challoner's death I was brooding very deeply over the Hicks Street case. It had so possessed me that I had taken this street in on my way from Flatbush; as if staring at the house and its swarming courtyard was going to settle any such question as that! I walked by the place and I looked up at the windows. No inspiration. Then I sauntered back and entered the house with the fool intention of crossing the courtyard and wandering into the rear building where the crime had occurred. But my attention was diverted and my mind changed by seeing a man coming down the stairs before me, of so fine a figure that I involuntarily stopped to look at him. Had he moved a little less carelessly, had he worn his workman's clothes a little less naturally, I should have thought him some college bred man out on a slumming expedition. But he was entirely too much at home where he was, and too unconscious of his jeans for any such conclusion on my part, and when he had passed out I had enough curiosity o ask who he was.

"My interest, you may believe, was in no wise abated when I learned that he was that highly respectable tenant whose window had been open at the time when half the inmates of the two buildings had rushed up to his door, only to find a paper on it displaying these words: 'Gone to New York; will be back at 6.30.' Had he returned at that hour? I don't think anybody had ever asked; and what reason had I for such interference now? But an idea once planted in my brain sticks tight, and I kept thinking of this man all the way to the Bridge. Instinctively and quite against my will, I found myself connecting him with some previous remembrance in which I seemed to see his tall form and strong features under the stress of some great excitement. But there my memory stopped, till suddenly as I was entering the subway, it all came back to me. I had met him the day I went with the boys to investigate the case in Hicks Street. He was coming down the staircase of the rear tenement then, very much as I had just seen him coming down the one in front. Only the Dunn of to-day seemed to have all his wits about him, while the huge fellow who brushed so rudely by me on that occasion had the peculiar look of a man struggling with horror or some other grave agitation. This was not surprising, of course, under the circumstances. I had met more than one man and woman in those halls who had worn the same look; but none of them had put up a sign on his door that he had left for New York and would not be back till 6.30, and then changed his mind so suddenly that he was back in the tenement at three, sharing the curiosity and the terrors of its horrified inmates.

"But the discovery, while possibly suggestive, was not of so pressing a nature as to demand instant action; and more immediate duties coming up, I let the matter slip from my mind to be brought up again the next day, you may well believe, when all the circumstances of the death at the Clermont came to light and I found myself confronted by a problem very nearly the counterpart of the one then occupying me.

"But I did not see any real connection between the two cases, until, in my hunt for Mr. Brotherson, I came upon the following facts: That he was not always the gentleman he appeared; that the apartment in which he was supposed to live was not his own but a friend's; and that he was only there by spells. When he was there, he dressed like a prince and it was while so clothed he ate his meals in the cafe of the Hotel Clermont.

"But there were times when he had been seen to leave this apartment in a very different garb, and while there was no one to insinuate that he was slack in paying his debts or was given to dissipation or any overt vice, it was generally conceded by such as casually knew him, that there was a mysterious side to his life which no one understood. His friend—a seemingly candid and open-minded gentleman—explained these contradictions by saying that Mr. Brotherson was a humanitarian and spent much of his time in the slums. That while so engaged he naturally dressed to suit the occasion, and if he was to be criticised at all, it was for his zeal which often led him to extremes and kept him to his task for days, during which time none of his up-town friends saw him. Then this enthusiastic gentleman called him the great intellectual light of the day, and—well, if ever I want a character I shall take pains to insinuate myself into the good graces of this Mr. Conway.

BETWEEN your process and your cooking the flavor of Tillson's is held all the way from sheaf to breakfast table. Nature gave a greater allowance of nourishing qualities to oats than to almost any other of her plant children.

Very wisely, Nature also gave to oats a most delicious flavor and aroma. Of course, we well know that neither flavor nor aroma adds to the nourishing quality of food. But who would want to eat food that had neither flavor nor aroma?

The flavor which the oats have within themselves as they stand in the sheaf, we preserve in our exclusive pan-drying process. During this process we keep them covered.

Try Tillson's Oats to-morrow. You will then learn how the most nourishing of all breakfast cereals can also be made the most delicious of them all.

Scotch Beef Broth

Take a pint of prepared beef broth. Add one tablespoonful of Tillson's Rolled Oats and simmer gently until the oatmeal is soft and jelly like. Strain, season and serve very hot. Excellent for children and invalids. Broths of this character are not usually nutritious, therefore grains are added to give the required food value. Use Tillson's Oats, these cooking smooth and adding a most delicate flavor.

Tillson's Oats

Your grocer has Tillson's. Two sizes—10c and 25c. Each 25c package contains a handsome piece of English Porcelain Tableware.

You Can Thank Advertising

NEXT time you step into the corner store, take a look around. Of all the articles on the shelves, how many were on your shopping list five years ago? Make it ten years, and you will find that most of the things you buy to-day—and could not do without—were not even made then.

You men and women who buy things, let this sink in. You are better men and women because of advertising. You eat more wholesome food. You wear better clothes. Your home is better furnished. You have cleaner and more sanitary houses. You read better books and magazines. You seek more healthful amusements.

Your whole standard of living has been raised—and why? Because the men who make these better things are telling you that you will be more comfortable, happier and healthier if you use these higher grade goods.

It is advertising that makes it possible for you to buy "the best" right at your corner store. It is advertising that encourages the inventor to make new comforts and new utilities and enables you to buy them almost immediately after they are perfected.

J. J. Hill says this "high living" costs more. True for J. J.—but it is worth more. And leaving the cost aside, do you want to go back to buying jam out of a pail, oatmeal out of a barrel, raisins out of sticky boxes, or tea exposed in an open chest?

Would you forego the new style razor?

Isn't a Tungsten worth a thousand candles?

Would you now be enjoying these if enterprising manufacturers had not told you about them in their advertisements?

Isn't life brighter because we have new and higher standards of living?

Let us thank advertising for it.

Advice regarding your advertising problems is available through any good advertising agency or the Secretary of the Canadian Press Association, Room 503, Lumsden Building, Toronto. Enquiry involves no obligation on your part—so write if interested.

W. H. Hill, Esq.,
Manager,
Sun Life Assurance Co.,
Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Sir,— I wish to thank the Sun Life Assurance Company, through you, for the prompt and very satisfactory settlement of my 15 year Endowment Policy, No. 64345, which matured and was paid me to-day.

I have also a 15 year Endowment maturing to-day in another leading ——— Company.

The contrast, in the results, is favour of your Company is so marked that I want you to know it, but I am at a loss to know how such a difference could honestly occur. When I tell you that the profits in your Company are three and one-third times the profits in the other Company referred to, and this too notwithstanding I paid the other Company $1.15 per year more per $1000 than I paid you, you will realize my inability to comprehend the cause.

This is surely a tribute to the management of the Sun Life, and I am so well pleased I have applied for further insurance with you.

Incidentally, I would like to say a word for your loan privilege. As you are aware, I borrowed some money on my policy, a little over a year ago, which enabled me to obtain a substantial interest in a town site in the Northwest, and you will be pleased to learn that it has already yielded substantial gain and gives promise to pay hundreds per cent., so that it is impossible to fully realise the value of that Policy to me.

I thought as an old Peterborough boy you would be pleased to know I am delighted with the result.

Yours truly,
(Signed) ROBERT E. DOLAN.

A FEW SCRAPS" - "BAT" MASTERSON

THE Old Plainsman, in a Mood for Talk, Chats of Some of the "Plain, Ordinary Men" Who Possessed Both Nerve and Courage—Both Being Needed

ALREADY, as the years go by, those heroic figures that stalked with a picturesque and gigantic daring a generation ago through the stirring melodrama of the West have bulked to a mighty size on the pages of American history. With the exception of a few gray haired, steady eyed survivors, they have been gathered to their fathers; some of recent years, in peace; others at an earlier day, in their prime, when the song of the six-shooter was still too often a reveille. The Iliad of that day will not be sung, perhaps, until time has softened the detail and created the perspective, but in the meantime the veterans remain, ready, perhaps, to tell a mouth filling tale to the crafty questioner.

One of these men who often is seen in the cool places of the Great White Way frequently finds himself pointed out to the curiosity seeker as the king of the gun men, and it makes him angry. Persons who know this man well hail him as "Bat." Others call him Mr. Masterson.

For twenty years, while the early West was a place of tumult, he was one of those who roamed the prairies of the vast territory lying between the Missouri River and the Mexican border.

Buffalo hunter, Indian fighter, cow puncher, sheriff, city marshal—he was of the leaders of that reckless horde who created and enforced the law when the only arguments were bullets and where men filed the hammer notches from their guns. In friendships cemented by common perils he was the close comrade of such men as Wild Bill Hickok, Wyatt Earp, Luke Short, Ben Thompson, Doc Holliday, Buffalo Bill and scores more, all of them towering head and shoulders above the men around them in nerve, skill with their weapons, qualities of leadership, resourcefulness and brains.

Unfortunately for the would-be historian, William Barclay Masterson is modest. When pointed out to me by an eager bell boy he was placidly smoking a cigar and radiating an atmosphere of peace ineffable. He looked up with a pair of very steady blue eyes, and his voice gave a curious impression of nerves that would not easily vibrate. A smile flickered over his face at my tentative question and he nodded his head slowly.

"Oh, yes—yes—I've seen a few scraps!" The information came grudgingly, but I tried again.

"Young fellow," said Mr. Masterson, shaking a warning finger, "take it from me, you're wasting your time. I'm not my own press agent, and no one else is if I know it. I wouldn't have a press agent for a gift. I'd as soon have a lap dog. Huh!

"If there's anything that makes me tired," he went on, severely, "it's these young fellows who insist on writing a lot of trash about events that happened twenty years before they began yelling for their living. If they'd tell the truth it wouldn't be so bad, but they have to dress it up and tell the public that a peaceable man like me has twenty-seven notches on his gun. Now, don't you say anything about those notches and I'll let you have a few unvarnished facts."

"About some one else?"

"Plain, Ordinary Men."

"Precisely," he said, dryly. "You could write a book about each of those boys I used to run with. But just the same they were just plain, ordinary men, who could shoot straight and had the most utter courage and perfect nerve—and, for the most part, a keen sense of right and wrong. So you see they were just plain, ordinary men like you and me."

I let it pass.

"You distinguish between courage and nerve?" I asked.

"It's a distinction that's vital," he replied. "Every one out there had courage, I suppose. But nerve is different. Nerve was the quality that marked the great gun fighters. Most men lack it to a greater or less degree. It's hard to define it, but I should say that it was that finer kind of courage that allows a man to be deliberate and careful at times when most men fall all over themselves in their haste to get ahead of death. I don't know what it is, but it marks every great fighter. I knew a man named Charlie Harrison in the old days. He was the most brilliant performer with a pistol of any man I have ever seen and he could shoot straighter and faster than many of the great fighters, yet when he got into a scrap with a man named Jim Levy the missed him with all six shots at close range before Levy could reach for his weapon. Levy coolly dropped him with a single shot. Harrison was brave, but he had no nerve, you see.

"In reckoning up the qualities of the men of that country you must remember that to the kind of shooting which you see nowadays only on the stage they had been trained since they were boys. Not only that, but they were in perfect health from their out of door life. Perfect physical condition is half the battle in this matter of courage. Men like Wyatt Earp and Wild Bill could do wonderful things with their fists, and Wild Bill could have licked six ordinary men with his bare hands. They were something more than crack shots.

"Of course their accuracy with the pistol was marvellous, and they could sure do the tricks—even those you read about in dime novels. I remember a favorite stunt used to be for a man to put a fast horse at full speed and then put all six bullets from his gun into a tree eight inches in diameter as he rode by it. Now when you come to think of it," he smiled, "that was pretty good.

"It reminds me of a fellow whom I'll call Bill Smith, since that isn't his name. He got sore at me one day and just mooned around aching for a scrap. His hand would hover lovingly near his gun, and every time he'd make a motion I'd say:—'Now, Bill, you be careful. Don't you draw that gun, Bill, because I'll sure pepper you if you do.' Well, he kept it up, mad as a wet hen and getting madder. Finally he yanked out the iron. He happened to be a good friend of mine or it would have been his finish. As it was I just shot his gun out of his hand. We made up later. He's a big detective in Denver now. Yes, we knew a lot about hardware."

He chuckled at the recollection before he went on. "The first gun we had out there was the old cap and ball six shooter. There was a little steel ramrod fastened alongside the barrel and aligned with the chambers of the cylinder. It was necessary to pour in the powder, then the ball, and then ram down the charge. Some were pretty quick at it, but naturally it was slow work at the best.

"It was partly on this account that many of us carried two guns. Later when the modern cartridge came in the 'two gun man' was generally a bad man, as those who shocked the not too sensitive virtue of that country were called, but in those earlier days the two guns were a necessity. We could use two guns at once, shooting equally well with either hand. The calibre of those old guns was .36 and .44. The modern .45 Colt did not come in till about 1870, when the cavalry introduced it—just when it was needed. The first Colt .45 was of the single action type.

Making the Shot Easy.

"The double action was never used in shooting, even after it was introduced, owing to the hard pull. The gun was cocked with the thumb for each shot, and the drawing and cocking of the weapon was a matter of such quickness that I don't suppose it occupied a fifth of a second, though I never tried to time it. If you'll just reach your hand to your side and back again as quickly as possible you'll get some idea of what I mean. To succeed in that game meant the same fineness of perception that an expert billiard player shows in directing his cue, with the difference that the billiard man can take his time.

"We used to file the notch of the hammer till the trigger would pull 'sweet,' which is another way of saying that the blame gun would pretty near go off if you looked at it. Some of the boys used to file the notch entirely off, so that the gun would go off simply by pulling back the hammer and letting it go.

"The filed notch finally became the mark of the bad man or the would be bad man, but the real gun fighters—the better class, I mean—didn't file the notches off, even though they generally did the next best thing. Many used to carry in addition to a gun in the hip holster another swung under the armpit. In this way they could draw on an adversary while he was waiting for the familiar motion toward the hip.

"I remember one of Wild Bill's more humorous stunts used to be shooting the centre out of the O's of an I. O. O. F. sign in Kansas City, across from Police Headquarters. Imagine a man amusing himself with that kind of target shooting in Kansas City to-day! I dropped in for a talk with the chief of police of that town one day while Wild Bill was in his prime, and, chancing to notice the sign, asked what had happened to it.

"The chief swore roundly and said it was the work of that blasted madcap Wild Bill. It appears that Bill used to spend his winters in Kansas City, and much against his will was required by the chief of police and the law to give up his shooting irons while he was in town. Bill hated the idea, for it naturally made him feel like a fish out of water. So he invariably used to relieve his feelings by emptying the guns at that hapless sign. He would repeat the operation in the spring when the guns were returned to him, saying it was to keep them from getting rusty.

"As soon as it became known in Kansas City that Bill was unarmed every bum in town began taking pot shots at him from unsuspected places, and Bill had to go skipping past alleys and street corners, especially on dark nights, till you'd have taken him for a ballet dancer. Finally he began to feel the annoyance. In response to his protest to the authorities he was allowed to carry two derringers. Being a man of peace he advertised the fact that he had two shots coming on the next ambitious marksman, and I never heard that any one went gunning for him any more. If he had said he had one shot ready it would have served personally well.

"BAT" MASTERSON

"Wild Bill was a close personal friend of mine and he'd have fitted into the pages of a novel. He was a giant, six feet two without his boots, and built like a Greek god to the extent of two hundred pounds of bone and muscle. He had broad shoulders, a slim waist, a forty-five inch chest, big bones and almost incredible strength. He'd have made the average heavyweight prize fighter look like fun. There wasn't a man in the West that could have touched him in a physical encounter. And then, as I have said, he was unexcelled as a gun fighter. Nature had added to his other qualifications a fine, handsome face. His full name was James Butler Hickok. I never knew him to seek a fight or to kill a man in any but a fair encounter. He was finally assassinated in Deadwood by a little snake named Jack McCall, who was later hanged in Yankton for the deed. McCall came up from behind while Bill was seated at a table and shot him at close range. Bill never knew what hit him. It was the most damnable thing of its kind that I remember out there, except, perhaps, the murder of Ben Thompson, a gun fighter I would have backed to win in a stand up fight with any man in the whole West.

A Dastardly Murder.

"Ben was city marshal of Austin for many years. As a fighter he was simply deadly. In that respect he had no peer. Others missed at times, but Ben Thompson was as delicate and certain in action as a Swiss watch. He killed a good many men in fair fights, but there was nothing wicked about him. No man ever scorned a murderer more than he. He was finally murdered, with his friend King Fisher, in a vaudeville theatre in San Antonio in 1884. It was a dastardly deed and the murderers were never touched for it, either.

"The assassins were stationed behind the wings of the theatre with Winchesters, and the instant Ben and his friend entered the place shot them down like dogs. They were dead before they hit the floor. Ben was hit eight times and Fisher five. I read in a newspaper recently that Ben killed six of his assailants before he went under, but that isn't true. They took too good care of their own hides for that.

"Another fighter who was not in the least spectacular but who never failed to deliver the goods was Luke Short. He was a little man with a quiet, conciliating manner, but for all that he never failed to get his gun out first, and about the only time I remember him to have missed his aim was on occasion when he shot at a gambler and the bullet grazed the man's cheek. I was with Luke when he killed Charlie Storms, when the latter drew on Luke and forced him to it. I was also with him when he killed Jim Courtright, a bully who tried to shoot him because he wouldn't let him run his place in Fort Worth. It was a fair fight each time. Luke was arrested after he killed Courtright and an ambitious mob wanted to lynch him, but I had seen the fight, and knowing he had met Courtright on the level I spent the night with him in his cell. We were both armed and I guess the mob thought better of it. Anyhow, they didn't lynch either of us if I remember rightly. Luke died of consumption in Fort Worth.

"Speaking of the picturesque characters, I guess Doc Holliday stands in that category. I never liked him and few persons did. He had a mean disposition and differed from most of the big gun fighters in that he would seek a fight. He was a consumptive and physically weak, which probably had something to do with his unfortunate disposition. He was of a fine Georgia family and was educated as a dentist. He went West after shooting down several defenceless negro boys in a quarrel as to who should occupy a certain swimming hole. He made Dallas in the early seventies, and hung out his shingle, J. H. Holliday, dentist, but he soon quit that for gambling. His shooting of the negroes became known, and so he got a reputation as a bad man from the start and associated on equal terms with men of more notable record.

"He finally killed a man in Jacksboro and fled. Then he killed a soldier, and to avoid being caught by the military authorities made a desperate flight to Denver, across eight hundred miles of waterless, Indian infested desert. He made Denver in seventy-six. The law forbade him to carry a gun there, so he slipped a knife into his bootleg and presently carved up the face of one Ed Ryan, who bears the marks to this day. He fled then to Dodge City, where I first met him. He kept out of trouble in Dodge somehow, but presently wandered to Trinidad, Colorado, where the first thing he did was to shoot and seriously wound Kid Colton. Then he escaped to Las Vegas, a live town in New Mexico, where he disagreed with Bill Gordon and shot him dead in a doorway. Again he lit out five hundred miles across country to Dodge City. He went to Arizona with Wyatt Earp in '79 and took part in the famous battles of the Earp brothers in and around Tombstone. He died of consumption in Glenwood Springs.

"I think it was the distinguishing trait of Wyatt Earp, the leader of the Earp brothers, that more than any man I have ever known he was devoid of physical fear. He feared the opinion of no one but himself and his self-respect was his creed. He landed in Wichita, Kansas, in 1873, at the age of twenty-six, a very quiet man, but a terror in action, either with his fists or with a gun.

The Earp Record.

"He wiped out three gangs of robbers around Tombstone practically in person while down there with his brothers, Jim, Virgil, Morgan and Warren, who was the kid of the family. The trouble arose from the fact that Morgan, who was shotgun messenger for the Wells-Fargo people between Tombstone and Benson, refused to quit his job at the request of a band that wanted to hold up the stage and didn't dare to try it so long as one of the Earp boys was on board, fearing vengeance from the whole family.

"The gang, which hung out in San Simon Valley, was one that had terrorized the whole country and defied the troops for years. It was made up of Ike and Billy Clanton and Tom and Frank McLowry. Well, in a rash moment those four sent word that they were going to kill off the Earp family on a certain day, and sure enough they rode into Tombstone as they promised. The whole town watched the fight from the housetops and it was sweet while it lasted. The four met Wyatt, Virgil and Morgan Earp and Doc Holliday face to face coming around a corner at a ten foot range and opened fire from behind their horses. The Earps charged and in a few seconds Billy Clanton and the two McLowrys were dead, each with six bullets in him. Ike threw down his gun and Wyatt let him go.

"In a few days Curly Bill, of an allied gang, potted Virgil Earp at night, nearly shooting off his right arm. Later Morgan was shot and killed at night through a window. It was clear enough that action was necessary if the rest of the family were not to go the same road, and Wyatt promptly started out to execute vengeance, accompanied by Doc Holliday, Jack Vermillion, Sherman McMasters and Bill Johnson.

"They hunted down a Mexican named Florentine, whom they shot, and then, one by one, they got Frank Stillwell, Curly Bill and others who had had a hand, directly or indirectly, in the war. Wyatt Earp is still living.

"We used to see a bit of Indian fighting, of course. The worst hornets' nest I ever got into was the battle at 'Dobe Walls, on the Canadian River, in the Panhandle. There were twenty-one white men there, fourteen of us armed, and we kept off a force of a thousand Cheyennes, Kiowas, Comanches and Arapahoes for two weeks. We lost three men and when they finally retreated they had lost eighty.

"There were two or three buildings there, and as luck would have it the dirt roof gave way the morning of June 28, 1874. That woke us up. If it hadn't been for that they'd have had us to rights. As it was, we were up and doing when they made their dawn attack and gave them so hot a fire that we drove them back in all three charges they made. The trouble with an Indian is that he can't shoot straight and he won't fight on foot. They charged the building on horseback, so of course there was nothing doing for them.

"I remember one day old man Kozer strolled out to the pump under the hottest fire they could give him to draw some water for a boy who had been shot in the lungs. The bullets cut his shirt and his hat and shattered the pump handle, but he wasn't touched. Another day I was obliged to make a running jump for the other building for ammunition for a fine rifle we had, and I slipped through at a pretty good clip, I'll admit. So you can see for yourself that those fellows couldn't shoot. They were a war party, and after cutting loose from the reservations they tackled us as the first game handy. They got considerably more than they could chew, however."

He finished and thoughtfully refit his cigar.

"And this," I said, "is intended to show that these were just ordinary men, is it?"

Mr. Masterson laughed.

"Well, you wouldn't have known they were, just to meet them," he grinned. "Still, I suppose they did have their good qualities."

LIQUIFIED CHLORINE FOR USE IN BOMBS

A terrible weapon of warfare suggested by the great inventor Sir Hiram Maxim.

Sir Hiram Maxim, who recently celebrated his 72nd birthday, has aroused considerable indignation in England by asserting that it is next to impossible to find English workmen capable of earning a weekly salary of $25. The average English employe, he says, gets along on a weekly salary of $7.50 and does nothing to fit himself for a better paid job.

Sir Hiram himself is certainly setting a good example for others to imitate. In spite of his age, he is up at seven in the morning summer and winter. He has correspondence to attend to, and newspaper contributions to write; and in the evening, spends his time among the books and papers in his library. Sunday, too, he passes in reading. He is still interested in the invention of articles pertaining to warfare.

"I notice," he said in an interview, "that Sir William Ramsay has suggested the use of prussic acid in bombs for warlike purposes. I have no acquaintance with that particular form of poison, but I should say it would be very dangerous to both parties.

"What I would suggest is that we should be more modest and commence by using liquified chlorine. The advantage of this would be that it does not require heavy pressure to keep it in the form of a liquid; that it flies into vapor when the pressure is removed, and the vapors are very dense and much heavier than the air. Instead of flying away like prussic acid gases, they would stick to the ground, and as one breath of chlorine is instant death, I think we ought to be satisfied with it. Bombs charged with chlorine gas would be very effective if they should be exploded on shipboard between decks, but it would require some degree of invention to design a bomb, because chlorine has the disagreeable habit of eating up everything it touches except glass.

"I think, he said, "that during the next ten years more scientific thought will be devoted to the investigation of the air than to all other branches of the physical sciences put together. We have made machines that fly, and we now have to develop these machines so that they may be suitable for military purposes; and the indications are that within ten years the aeroplane flying machines will be one of the principal arms employed by all the great European nations.

"From the very nature of things however, the aeroplanes will never be come a machine that can be used commercially after the manner of railroads. It is essentially a millitary arm, and must remain as such."

FLIGHT TO EUROPE

Possible for the Aviator to Alight on Land or Sea if His Engine Stops.

Pontoons of an entirely new type, which can be inflated or deflated and attached to an especially-designed aeroplane that will fly over land or sea, have been patented by Harry N. Atwood, of Lynn, Mass.

The invention, devotees of flying say, promises to revolutionize the art. With his improved type of pontoons and other attachments, which will be added to a machine he is designing, Atwood's projected flight to Europe seems certain.

According to the young aviator, but one other improvement is necessary to ensure absolute safety on a long flight such as that proposed. It is an engine which can be started without the assistance of anyone. The new engine would have to be one which could be started at a moment's notice by the aviator, without moving from his seat. Atwood has told friends that he has ideas along this line, which he will develop just as soon as his latest invention is thoroughly tested.

The new pontoons are very simple in structure. With them it will be possible for an aviator to make a landing on land or sea in case his engine stops.

They are constructed of one-eighth inch rubber over a light framework of fabric, which gives them shape. Despite their frailness these pontoons, Atwood declares, will stand up in any sort of sea, or wind.

Suffered Greatly With Her Heart.

Many people may be unaware of having anything wrong with their heart till some excitement, overwork, or confinement in an overheated or overcrowded room, or public building makes them feel faint and dizzy.

On the first sign of any weakness of the heart or nerves, flagging energy or physical breakdown, you should not wait until you case becomes desperate before you avail yourself of a perfect cure by using Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mrs. D. McGilvery, Bathurst, N.B., writes:—"Just a few lines to let you know what Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have done for me. I suffered greatly with my heart and became so weak at times I could hardly walk. A friend of mine advised me to try your Pills, which I did, and soon found great relief. They are the best medicine I have ever taken for heart trouble."

THE HOME LIFE OF THE WELSH

Some Glimpses of the Subject's of the Prince of Wales—Influence of Mr. Lloyd-George

Mr. Frank Ellis has a very informative article about the Welsh people in T. P.'s Magazine.

"The student of Welsh life and character who encounters almost any village in North Wales, will be able to acquire a full knowledge of his subject without travelling a mile farther. For Welsh life has a certain quality of uniformity which is not found in the other constituent peoples of the Empire.

"The centre of the Welshman's life is the Chapel. On it his hopes are set, and in its light every fact of his character illuminates itself. He spends his leisure in its service, and even his relaxations are taken within its walls. The characteristic entertainment of the Welshman is the annual Chapel 'Tea Party and Grand Concert.' The 'grandeur' of the concert is taken for granted. The table spread before the purchaser of the tea-party ticket is not, perhaps, one to charm an eclectic taste. Bread and butter and bun loaf are the chief dishes. But there is abundance, there is an effervescing spirit of friendliness, and—thought dear to the passionate musician in every Welshman—there is the prospect of the concert.

"But the significance of the Chapel to the heart of the Welsh villager rests upon surer foundations than the social: Wales is a deeply religious nation, and the history of Wales is a religious history. Through the character of the Welshman there runs a strong strain of poetry and mysticism; he feels, with a special urgency, the appeal of the unseen. From his childhood he has breathed in the religious fervor of his fathers. The magnificent services of the Welsh Sunday-school to the national life have never been properly acknowledged. Nearly all the achievements of the Principality have had their foundation in this school.

"No form is more characteristically Welsh than that of the minister. He is plainly a son of the people. Indeed, every man who has moved the mind of Wales during the past two hundred years was born poor. Moreover, with the exception of Mr. Lloyd George, nearly every Welshman who wields an influence over his people has remained poor. Any obscure Englishman of modest prosperity going daily to the City and live in a $300 house, could have bought up most of the great Welshmen of the past. They had always to keep their wants humble. From inspiring their people they had to face an empty larder. But poor, these men were not despised. Theirs were the names their country celebrated. And so it is to-day.

"They have small means to buy books—these men—yet nearly every one of them has his library—a library which includes much of the best of English literature. That this is so becomes obvious when, as they often do in their journeys, they preach in the Saxon tongue.

"But not only are these men readers; they are writers and they are poets. Indeed, the greater number of the national bards are ministers of religion.

"The Welsh minister is not, however, wholly a self-trained man. He has his denominational college and his National University. But, more than this, many Welsh preachers are Oxford men. No Nonconformist ministry, probably, has a larger number of its younger men holding Oxford degrees. Jesus College is the recognized home of Welsh culture, and it was among a notable set of Oxford men of the late eighties that the Young Wales Movement, of which Tom Ellis was leader, had its rise.

"The influence which Mr. Lloyd George wields in Wales is not, perhaps fully understood. It is true that he attracts the admiration and enthusiasm which are the due of the natural leader. So, however, did Gladstone in England and Parnell in Ireland. Between the popular attitude towards Mr. Lloyd George there is this difference, that Gladstone and Parnell, loved though they were by the common people, were regarded not only with affection, but with a certain element of awe. They were felt to stand upon another plane than that of their followers. There is very little of this feeling among the men who follow Lloyd George.

"Mr. Lloyd George has an enormous moral and political influence in Wales. But he exercises, in a curious degree, an influence of quite another kind. Not only is he moulding Welsh opinion: he is even affecting Welsh psychology. The minor note in Welsh character has been observed. But the emergence of a Welshman, in every sense typical of his countrymen, upon the platform of world-history, has quickened the Welsh pulse and widened the Welsh outlook."

HOW TO KNIT A MAN'S TIE

You will need half an ounce each of white and colored knitting silk or cotton, and four needles.

Begin at the wide end by casting on 36 stitches; arrange 12 on each needle. Knit 12 rounds in colored, take up the white silk and knit six rounds, with the colored silk knit two rounds (the silk is not broken off, but passed up inside), six rounds in white, two rounds in colored, six rounds in white; repeat five times, and decrease thus: Knit the two first stitches together and the two last together of the round in every alternate round six times, so reducing the stitches to 24; repeat the stripes nine more times—this makes the tie one and a quarter yards in length—and cast off.

Lay the tie flat, letting the ends of the rows where the silks are changed come exactly in the centre of the back, sew the ends neatly together, place the tie between the folds of a damp cloth and press with a hot iron.

PREMIER ASQUITH

As a result of the widespread agitation against Christian Science, Premier Asquith is the recipient of many letters protesting against "healers" being permitted to practice in England. The crusade against the cult founded by Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy has attained great proportions because of a number of deaths alleged to have resulted from neglect to call a medical practitioner. For some weeks past the new Home Secretary, Reginald McKenna, has been receiving written and verbal protests against the "healers."

LESSON IN MANNERS FROM VICE-ROYALTY

A Correspondent Makes Observations Regarding Their Importance.

A correspondent made the following observations regarding the visit of the Duke and Duchess of Connaught to Toronto: Among the good results which may be expected to flow from the visit of H.R.H. the Duke and Duchess of Connaught will be a distinct improvement in some of the morals and some improvement in the English of those who from one cause or another found themselves in the Vicereagal presence, or who have taken the trouble to read carefully the replies to the formal addresses both the Duke and the Duchess, wherever they went, wherever they appeared, wherever thy spoke, were in themselves the expression of the highest culture and charm in bearing, manners and language. Those who had eyes to see and ears to hear could not fail to observe in them, as well as in their immediate entourage, dignity without pomposity, grace without pose, graciousness without familiarity, good humor without hilarity, all united to supreme tact and graced by ability to use the English language with consummate skill without purism in words or affectation in their utterance. There were also conspicuous manifestations of those lesser virtues which so many people affect to despise, but which are always expected in the Royal Family of Great Britain—punctuality in keeping appointments, lively interest in what makes for the social and moral well-being of the whole people, and consideration for the aged, the sick and the afflicted.

As to their manners in public, these august personages and their entourage, we hope it is not impertinent to remark, never permitted themselves to do what many people who consider themselves, or wish others to consider them, perfectly well bred make it their constant habit to do. They did not notice with disdainful smiles any faux-pas on the part of those who approached them. Nor did they point with the finger at anything that claimed their attention upon the street. In circumstances that might be supposed to provoke risibility they never moved an eyelash, so perfect was their self-control. It goes without saying that they did not loll in their carriages, nor spread their arms over the sides of the vehicles, nor sit in public with knees crossed or feet spread far apart, nor at any time indulge in loud talk and laughter. Such behaviour in them would be unthinkable. Nor was the Duke seen to walk about with his hands in his pockets puffing tobacco smoke in people's faces. Nor did he when he took a seat gather up the tails of his coat, as if he had never heard of Lord Chesterfield's dictum on that point. Nor, without further particularising, did they do many other odious things which all decent people are supposed to be trained to leave undone before they have quitted the nursery or emerged from school. There are, of course, not a few people—and some of them who do not live in the public eye—whose manners are just as correct as if they had been bred in Court; but it cannot be gainsaid that in this democratic age, when one man is as good as another, and one woman a great deal better than another, there is too much disposition to ignore or to despise perfectly polite manners, and to imitate what is flashy, bizarre, ostentatious, and even meretricious.

It is not to be presumed, however that the Duke and Duchess in coming amongst us, ever thought of setting an example in manners and language to the Canadian people. All their tact, charm, and graces are simply the outcome of the most careful and prolonged training in childhood and youth and the meticulous observance in mature age of what would be most becoming to their exalted station. In our recent visitors we have, it may be said, without the faintest tinge of adulation, the finest product of education and training in their widest sense upon a basis of Christian character.

SHOT SILVER FOX

William Barber, of Hespeler, shot a silver grey fox in Puslinch Township, ten miles from Hespeler. The skin of the animal is considered worth $450. The fox was a beauty, weighing about twenty-five pounds, and was about seven months old, with a fine pelt.

Like Comfort?

Then what's the use of breaking down your vigor when there's a way to make and keep your daily life comfortable.

Most persons need all the vitality they can secure. Some have an excess and proceed to destroy it with one or more of the sedative drugs—among the most common of which are tea and coffee. They could use that vigor to "get ahead" in business or whatever pursuit they are engaged in, but, strange to say, many prefer to nullify it with drugs.

However, each one must make choice and pay the bill.

The one who can cut out tea and coffee when they are known to cause sleepless nights and nervous troubles will surely win the laurels.

The change from tea or coffee and their aches and ills to well-made with health and comfort, is really quite easy.

POSTUM

Postum has a dark brown colour which changes to rich golden brown when cream is added, and the snappy distinctive flavour (when made according to directions) is very likethe mild. high grades of Java coffee.

The change brings refreshing sleep, drives out the tea and coffee troubles and the old condition of health and confort returns.

There's really no joy and comfort on earth quite so satisfying as the perfect poise of mind and body—generally yours for the taking.

"There's a Reason" for POSTUM

Sues Sam Lichtenhein.

Montreal, March 14.—Rudolf C. Bach, editor of the defunct Free Lance, has entered action against Sam Lichtenhein, president of the Montreal Baseball Club and the Wanderer hockey team, for $2,000 damages for alleged false arrest.

Lichtenhein had Bach arrested for publishing an article in The Free Lance criticising his (Lichtenhein's) management in terms which he considered were criminally libellous. Bach states that he was arrested in the evening so that he could not secure bail and had to spend the night in jail. The plaintiff was acquitted on the charge of libel.

Portuguese Infantry Revolt.

Lisbon, Portugal, March 14.—A sensation was caused yesterday by the announcement that a large part of the tenth regiment of Portuguese infantry at Braganza, on the northeastern frontier, had crossed the border with their arms and joined the Royalists.

Other regiments stationed in the north have been removed, the Government fearing that the Royalist propaganda has weakened their loyalty.

RADWAY'S READY RELIEF

COLDS and COUGHS

Apply the Relief to the throat and chest until the surface smarts and reddens. Give Radway's Pills in such doses as will freely move the bowels. For a sudden cold, take a large dose of Radway's Pills, and a teaspoonful of Relief with a teaspoonful of molasses, in a tumbler of hot water. Retire at once to bed. A profuse perspiration will break out, and in morning the cold will be gone.

Ask for RADWAY'S and be sure you get what you ask for.

Fighting Welland Canal.

Montreal, March 14.—The Chamber of Commerce yesterday decided to send a memorial to Premier Borden expressing disapprobation of any proposal which should have as its objects the postponement of the construction of the Georgian Bay Canal and instead the spending of money on the enlargement of the Welland Canal.

The chamber also heard protests against the Canadian Northern Railway plans for tunnelling the mountain and for erecting overhead tracks from Lagauchetierre street to the harbor.

Suffragettes Heavily Sentenced.

London, March 14.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Ten of the suffragettes who were committed for trial by the police magistrate at the Bow street court on March 2 on a charge of smashing windows during the women's suffrage demonstration on March 1, were sentenced yesterday at the London Sessions Court to terms ranging from four to six months in prison.

The women were tried in the Superior Court on account of the damage caused by each of them having exceeded the value of $25.

Sick Vigil Caused Suicide.

Montreal, March 14.—Worn out by a week's constant watching at the bedside of a sick wife, W. N. Carter, St. Urban street, yesterda morning shot himself dead in the vault of the London, Liverpool and Globe Insurance Co.'s office, where he was employed.

So much is a man worth as he esteems himself.—Rabelais.

Young Englishman Killed by Cow.

Winnipeg, March 14.—William Sayers, a young English farmer living near here, was yesterday morning killed by a kick from the cow he had just finished milking. Sayers was about 30 years of age, and had been here about a year.

Cookery Points

How to Cook Prunes.

A housewife has this to say about prunes:

"Seldom have I found even so called stewed prunes properly cooked abroad. They should never be boiled. That spoils the flavor. This is the way we western cooks stew them: Cleanse thoroughly, soak in water ten or twelve hours, adding a little granulated sugar when putting to soak, for, although the fruit is sweet enough, yet, experience has shown that the added sugar changes by chemical process into fruit sugar and brings out better the flavor of the fruit. After soaking the fruit will assume its full size and is ready to be simmered on the back of the stove. Do not boil prunes. That is what spoils them. Simmer, simmer only. Keep lid on. Shake gently. Do not stir and never let boil. When tender they are ready for the table.

"Serve cold, and a little cream will make them more delicious. Added just before simmering, a little sliced lemon or orange gives a rich color and flavor to the sirup. Many housekeepers think that if they pay a fancy price for large prunes they secure fruit of better flavor, but the small varieties are frequently just as sweet and just as finely flavored."

One Woman's Way.

"A new dish every day" was the self imposed task of a young wife who was in possession of a new home and plenty of time.

Although she had never cooked before in her life, her shining new kitchen was a lure she could not resist, much to the delight of her husband and friends.

She bought cookbooks, studied ingredients and proportions and devoured magazines devoted to things culinary. In the end she developed into a real wizard of a cook, and she originated dainties that sent the most blase of epicures into ecstasies of enjoyment.

She discovered that possibilities of food combinations are practically inexhaustible, and she still pursues the rule of "something new every day"—a rule entailing very little extra labor and a world of enjoyment.

Parsnips With Cream.

Take some nice fresh parsnips, peel and wash them, then cut them into the shape of olives, using only the outside part for the purpose. Put them into a saucepan and cover them with cold water seasoned with a little salt and lemon juice. Bring to a boil, then strain and put into a clean saucepan with two heaping tablespoonfuls of butter. Add half a cupful cream, a little pepper and salt and a quarter of a cupful of white sauce. Put the lid on the pan and cook very gently for thirty minutes. Sprinkle with a little finely chopped parsley and the strained juice of half a lemon and turn out on to a hot dish and serve at once.

Compote of Rice With Pears.

Wash two-thirds of a cupful of rice add one cupful of boiling water and steam until the rice has absorbed the water. Then add one and one-third cupful of hot milk, one teaspoonful of salt and one-fourth of a cupful of sugar. Cook until the rice is soft and turn into a slightly buttered, round shallow mold. When shaped remove from the mold to a serving dish and arrange on top section of cooked pears, drained from their sirup and dipped in macaroon dust. Garnish between sections with candied cherries and pour over the pear sirup.

Peach Jelly.

Peel and stone a peck of peaches slicing or cutting them, and add to them a dozen cracked peach pits. Cook until the fruit is broken and soft then strain and measure. Return to the fire, add the juice of a lemon and boil for twenty minutes. Stir in a pound of heated sugar for each pint of juice, boil up once and pour into glasses. This will make a delicious jelly.

A SEVERE COLD DEVELOPED INTO

PNEUMONIA.

Doctors Said He Would Not Live.

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP Cured Him.

Too much stress cannot be laid on the fact that when a person catches cold it must be attended to immediately, or serious results are liable to follow.

There is only one way to prevent pneumonia, and that is, to cure the cold just as soon as it appears.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup will do this quickly and effectively.

Mr. Hugh McLeod, Esterhazy, Sask., writes:—"My little boy took a very severe cold, and it developed into pneumonia. The doctor said he would not live. I got some of your Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and he began to improve. Now, he is a strong healthy child, and shows no sign of it coming back."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25 cents.

Points for Mothers

Nervous Young Girls.

One is rather shocked in this day of athletics and fresh air to know how prevalent neurasthenia is among young girls. One is constantly hearing of nervous breakdowns while girls are still too young to know the meaning of nerves. This condition has been laid at the door of the school life by eminent authorities.

It seems that the practically continuous time table of the school life of the present day is responsible for the development of nerves. Girls overtrained in athletics and in the classroom develop a restless incapacity to interest and occupy themselves satisfactorily when they return to their homes.

To this grinding and pushing is also due the fact that valuable knowledge of character is so ill assimilated that it fails to make life a comprehensible and interesting whole. The failure is a serious defect in any system of education.

It is equally injurious, on the other hand, to fill a girl's life with such a continuous round of games and lessons that the knowledge absorbed from both has no time to be digested. The modern girl undoubtedly needs more leisure.

The art of assimilation is what will make a girl into the competent, self reliant woman who will be able to enjoy applying what she has learned to any circumstance she may find herself in, one who will be able to regard all forms of athletics in their proper proportion and not become morbid if she is withdrawn from their influence.

One cannot quarrel with games as a means of exercise if they are not carried to the extreme, but that seems to a great extent to be just the tendency of the schoolgirl's training.

Consequently educators are beginning to see the advantage of giving girls proper exercise by means of practical work. There is a satisfaction in it that cannot find a counterpart in games.

The Hay Pillow.

"I wish mothers would, first of all, throw away those feather pillows and wool mattresses which their children sleep on and substitute bolsters and beds of hay. It would cost only about 10 cents, and think of the wonderful relief," remarked a well known physician. "The profuse perspiration of a child at night would be done away with. Children should not be roasted night after night as they are. The hay is cool and sweet smelling, and the child couldn't do anything but sleep comfortably.

"The mothers could get long tufting needles and tuft the hay so it wouldn't form in mounds or slide to one end completely. It would be a good thing if grownups also tried it. Once having experimented with it they never would pass through another hot wave without it. It is hygenic, cooling, aromatic. It is an easy matter to establish hay beds and pillows in the home.

Care of the Baby's Feet.

Too much care cannot be given the baby's feet. The little child's foot is naturally pretty, but it is so soft and pliant that it is easily molded, and an ill fitting, badly made shoe will only too quickly deform it and twist it out of shape. The shoes, regardless of whether they are buttoned or laced, must not be too tightly fastened or the circulation of the blood will be impeded. It is a good plan in summer to allow the baby to go barefoot as much of the time as possible about the home. This allows the foot to grow naturally.

Children's Names.

Some parents seem unable to resist the temptation to make a joke with the Christian names of their children. A certain register testifies to the existence of a Mineral Waters, a Frosty Winter and an Alfred Days Weeks. There is something to be said in favor of naming children in the order of their arrival—Primus, Secundus, etc.—but it is unfortunate for a well known Canadian named Cumber that it should have fallen to his lot to be Quinton, for his name is always appearing in the papers as Q. Cumber.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, March 13.—At the Canadian Pacific live stock market this morning the offerings were 700 cattle, 1250 sheep and lambs, 1075 hogs and 1500 calves. A firm feeling prevailed in the market for cattle, owing to the fact that the supply was not in excess of the requirements, and, as the quality of the stock was better than it has been of late. The demand from butchers was fairly good, and the trade for the season of the year was fully up to expectations.

A few odd choice steers sold as high as 6c, but the bulk of the trading was done in this class of stock at 5½c, while good steers brought 5¼c to 5¼c. Choice cows and good, useful bulls were dealt in at $4.50 per 100 pounds. A weak feeling has developed in the market for milch cows, and prices during the past few days have declined $10 to $15 per head, and the price for choice milkers now being $65, and the commoner grades run from that down to $30 each.

There was no change in the condition of the market for hogs, prices being fairly maintained under a continued good demand, and sales of selected lots were made at $7.75 to $7.85 per 100 pounds, weighed off cars. The trade in calves was active, owing to the increased supplies coming forward, and the tone of the market is easy, but prices show no actual change as compared with Monday's figures. The market for sheep and lambs was quiet, with a weak undertone.

At the Montreal Stock Yards west end market the offerings of live stock were 350 cattle, 75 sheep and lambs, 1200 hogs and 1000 calves. The trade was fairly good in all lines and the prices realized were much the same as those quoted above. The demand for hogs and calves was especially good.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $4.75 to $5; do., medium, $4.50 to $4; do., common, $4 to $4.25; canners, $3.75 to $4.25; butchers' cattle, choice cows, $4 to $4.25; do., bulls, $3.50 to $4.50; milkers, choice each, $65; do., common and medium, each, $50; springers, $60 to $80.

Sheep, ewes, $5 to $5.25; bucks and culls, $4 to $4.50; lambs, $6.75 to $7.25.

Hogs, f.o.b., $7.75 to $7.85.

Calves, $8 to $12.

WYETH'S SAGE SULPHUR HAIR REMEDY

All healthy hair contains sulphur. When the hair does not contain a sufficient amount of sulphur, it loses its color, dies and falls out. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy quickly corrects this condition.

A Wonderful Cure

My hair was getting quite gray and falling out rapidly, and I was troubled with a terrible itching of the scalp. My head was full of dandruff. I heard of your Sage and Sulphur for the hair. I got a bottle and used it and almost at once was benefited by it. A few applications relieved the itching, my hair stopped falling out and gradually came back to its natural color. It is now a nice dark brown color, soft, glossy and pliable.

ATTEMPT MADE TO KILL ITALIAN KING AND QUEEN RESULTS IN A FAILURE

Six Shots Were Fired and One of Their Escort Was Wounded, But Their Majesties Escaped.

ASSAILANT ARRESTED

Special to The Examiner.

ROME, ITALY, MARCH 14. — A man calling himself an individualist Socialist, made an unsuccessful attempt this morning to assassinate King Victor Emmanuel and Queen Elena, as they were driving from the palace to the Pantheon to observe the anniversary of the death of the late King Humbert, who was himself a victim of assassination. The Royal carriage was proceeding along a thoroughfare lined with the populace, when six shots rang out in quick succession. An escort of cuirassiers immediately dashed up, and surrounded their Majesties, and Major Lange, their commanding officer, received one of the bullets in his body, and was seriously wounded. The would-be assassin was seized by a crowd and roughly handled before the police took charge of him. His name is Antonio Dalba, aged 21. He disclaimed any connection with the Cammorists or Turkish plotters, but the authorities are very suspicious. The King and Queen drove calmly on to arms as if nothing had happened.

MONK TO REPRESENT CANADA

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, MARCH 14.—Hon. F. D. Monk, Minister of Public Works, leaves here on Monday next to represent Canada at the annual meeting of the American Society of Engineers in Chicago. President Taft will be among the guests.

A REWARD FOR BRAVERY

Special to The Examiner:

HOUSTON, TEXAS, MARCH 14.—The Coroner's Jury this morning exonerated David Truesdale, the express messenger, who shot and killed two bandits who tried to rob his car yesterday. The Wells Fargo Express Company will present Truesdale with $600 and a gold watch.

Unsightly Skin Diseases

Disfiguring skin diseases always seem to appear on the face and hands, so that they cause a feeling of shame, as well as pain and suffering.

Internal treatments have never proven very satisfactory in the treatment of eczema and similar skin troubles, but when Dr. Chase's Ointment is applied you can see for yourself and feel for yourself the benefits which are being obtained.

It soothes the inflamed, irritated skin so that itching ceases, and by its extraordinary healing power causes a new, smooth skin to form where the sores have been.

In every home there are many uses for Dr. Chase's Ointment, as for pimples and blackheads, barber's itch, chafing, erysipelas, chilblains and wherever there is itching skin or a sore or ulcer that refuses to heal. This ointment is pure, clean and pleasant to use and may be applied to the most delicate skin.

TRYING TO DRIVE OUT LLOYD GEORGE

LONDON, ENG., MARCH 14.—Daily Sketch announces to-day it has the information that Hon. Lloyd George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, will be compelled to leave the Cabinet. There is a league among the financial circles of England to obtain the resignation or dismissal of this Minister whose financial policy, it is said, has already inflicted heavy losses on a large section of the community. The interests say that the election speeches of Lloyd George have helped considerably to bring about the present state of industrial unrest.

NO HOSPITAL FOR PORT HOPE

Counties Council Decides to Take Money From Helm Bequest Rather Than Hospital

ROAST FOR COBOURG

The Counties Council yesterday turned down the bequest of $100,000 from the late John Helm for a counties Hospital, an action which is considered by the fair minded people of these counties as almost criminal. A bequest of $100,000 from the late John Helm, a property valued at $40,000 and an additional grant of $10,000 from the town of Port Hope to establish an hospital almost on the dividing line of the counties, an institution where the people of these counties would in time of sickness be properly cared for, was thrown aside. And by men of supposed average intelligence, in whom sufficient confidence was placed to conduct the affairs of the counties. As a result Toronto receives $60,000, and the balance is equally divided between Port Hope and Cobourg. Such things might happen in China, but to actually occur in these counties seems almost incredible.

It is a clear case of spite on the part of Cobourg. The throwing over of this bequest meant $20,000 cash to Cobourg, but more important than that "it would beat Port Hope out of the hospital." This has been Cobourg's principle since the "Hogtown" was first heard of, and will be to the end. Maher, who in his own estimation, is the whole Counties Council, has accomplished his purpose, and he and the town of Cobourg will now be satisfied.—Port Hope Guide.

LUMBER CAMPS ARE CLOSED FOR SEASON

The men who have been engaged during the winter in cutting out logs for the lumber companies have completed their season's work and have returned to the cities and towns. Quite a number have been noticed in Peterborough during the past week, some residing here, others passing through on their way to their homes. The logs have been hauled out onto the ice and will be floated as soon as the ice disappears. The timber limits in this country are fast disappearing according to one authority, and the next six or seven years will see them approaching the vanishing point. Some of the lumber men who came to Peterborough recently, followed the traditions of the trade, but the most of them expended their money on clothes, pink ties and other articles they actually required.

TO CONSERVE THE WATERS

Changes in Trent Canal Staff Partially Responsible for Meeting of Men Interested in Local Water Supply

ASSOCIATION FORMED

A private meeting of Peterborough gentlemen interested in the conservation of the waters in the Trent Valley system was held last night in the Bank of Montreal chambers. Among those present were Messrs. W. H. Denham of the Quaker Oats Co., E. G. Patterson of the Canadian General Electric Co. Ltd., W. H. Munro, of the Peterborough Light and Power Co., Dickson Davidson of the Peterborough Lumber Co., John Duigan of the A. McDonald Estate, John Crane of the Dominion Bank, and J. H. McClellan, Superintendent of the Trent Valley Canal.

The meeting was for the purpose of discussing the question of the scheme of conservation of the waters in the chain of lakes and rivers that comprise the Trent Valley watershed. It was intimated by some of those present at the meeting that the conservation of water, now that the spring freshets are impending, has aroused a certain amount of apprehension by reason of the numerous changes in the personnel of the Trent Valley Canal staff. It was feared that owing to the inexperience of the men recently appointed, the storing of the water in the upper lakes and bays might not be attended with the same success as was shown by the former employees. The regulation of the water supply is a vital question to those power interests and consumers who depend upon the Otonabee and the upper chain of lakes for the supply that turns the generators at the various power houses along the rover. The lumber companies are also concerned in the manipulation of these waters.

This was the question the meeting discussed and, while merely preliminary, it was decided to form an association to be known as the Central Ontario Water Conservation Association. Mr. W. H. Denham was appointed president for the present and Mr. W. H. Munro secretary.

It is felt that this may be the nucleus of a larger association that may include all those interested in the conservationof water along the entire Trent system and those systems tributary to it and those to which these are tributary. The movement is for the purpose of interesting the navigation, lumber and power concerns in the requirements and possibilities of the conservation of the water referred to.

LECTURE ON "TURNER"

Rev. F. J. Sawers will deliver a lecture this evening on the subject "J. M. W. Turner, the Man, and His Art," to the Women's Art Association, in the studio, in the basement of the Public Library. A silver collection will be taken up, but admission is free to members.

LAID TO REST

The remains of Mr. Alexander Dawson, who met such a sudden death in Vancouver, arrived in Peterborough by the noon train to-day, and were interred this afternoon at the Little Lake Cemetery.

At 2.30 a very impressive service was conducted at the cemetery by the Rev. Robert Pogue. A large number of Peterborough friends attended the funeral to show a mark of esteem to the deceased and sympathy to the relatives.

Ottawa Despatch Says Importation of Old Country Potatoes Will be Over by April 1st

PRICE MAY ADVANCE

OTTAWA, MARCH 14.—The Department of Labour's wholesale prices record up to date shows a still higher level for February than for January, notwithstanding that the latter month was reported as having seen the highest prices since 1882-4, and probably since 1873. The index number rose during February from 131.4 to 134.3, these being percentages of the average level of prices during the last decade of the last century.

The upward movement was largely the result of advances in grains, animals and meats, dairy products and potatoes. Retail prices were also upward, especially in the food products derived from the lines above mentioned.

Ottawa, and in fact the whole of the fair province of Ontario, is threatened with a famine of the most dire kind—a potato famine.

Ontario used to be a great producer of "murphies," but last year the crop was a rank, miserable failure, and just as they are now carrying coals to Newcastle on account of the great British strike, so are they carrying potatoes to Ontario.

The two chief sources of supply are New Brunswick and Ireland and England. Up to the present time Ontario has been getting potatoes by importations from those places, but only for a few weeks more will the supply hold out.

The supply of potatoes in New Brunswick is limited, and the people of that Maritime province will soon cease to respond to the cry from old Ontario: "Give us potatoes," and will keep what tubers they have left to themselves.

Can't Come Across Ocean.

And word has reached Mr. J. Moyneur, wholesale produce merchant, of Ottawa, that starting in April, potatoes cannot be imported from the old lands, because they no longer remain in good condition after the winter months. Already many bad vegetables are found among the shipments from across the ocean.

Mr. Moyneur said to-day that towards the end of May and in June the potato famine would be felt the worst, and prices would probably go up to $2.50 or even $3.00 a bag.

Only For Millionaires.

The common, ordinary, plebian potato may become a luxury only Ottawa's 32 millionaires can afford to put on their menu cards, and then probably they will be cooked "with the jackets on" 'to prevent any of the precious article being wasted.

However, there may be some alternative form of diet. When they told Queen Mary Antoinette that the people had no bread, she innocently asked: "Why don't they eat cake?"

So when the people of Ottawa have no potatoes, perhaps they may resort to spinach, asparagus and perhaps a few of the wealthy classes will be able to afford turnips and mangolds.

Prices Will Go Up.

At present Irish potatoes are selling at $1.75 a bag in Ottawa and the New Brunswick tubers at $1.85. The potatoes from the maritime province seem to be superior in quality to the vegetables from the land of the shamrock.

However, these prices will prevail only while the shipments recently received here last, and then potatoes will probably start a steady aeroplane ascension in price.

Shamrock Social on Friday evening March 15th, under auspices Ladies' Aid of George St. Methodist Church. Excellent programme and refreshments. Admission 25c. t-t

REMOVAL TO THE HOSPITAL.

Man With Hands Frozen in Serious Condition.

Archie Melvin, who was placed in custody yesterday by the police, was removed to the hospital, where he is undergoing treatment. His hands were severely frozen, and it is feared that amputation of some of the fingers will be necessary. He is under the care of Dr. McCullough.

JUDGE IS KILLED

United States Sheriff and Prosecuting Attorney Are Also Assassinated by a Mob of Mountain Outlaws

PRISONERS RELEASED

Examiner Special:

ROANOKE, VIRGINIA, MARCH 14—Meagre rumours have reached here of the assassination of Circuit Judge Massie, with Sheriff Webb and prosecuting attorney Foster by a mob of mountain outlaws at Hillsville, Carrol county, where they went to try men arrested for making moonshine whiskey. When the judge's party reached Hillsville they were met by the prisoners' friends, who fought them a pitched battle, with casualties as aforesaid. Then they released the prisoners and rode hard for the mountains.

STOLEN ORE DISCOVERED

Two Men Are Arrested at Cobalt Charged With Stealing Ore From the Mines---Property is Found

WERE GOING HOME

Examiner Special:

COBALT, ONT., MARCH 14.—The Provincial police arrested here yesterday afternoon Geo. Kershaw and John Bellerby, two Englishmen, charged with stealing high-grade ore from the mines. They had booked passages for England to sail by the Virginian and the ore was discovered in trunks shipped through to Liverpool. There was about one hundred pounds, practically pure silver.

URIC ACID SUFFERING

Uric acid is an accumulation of poison which finds lodgment in the system when the kidneys fail to remove it from the blood. In the kidneys and bladder it forms stones, in the joints and muscles it causes rheumatism. In any case the pain and suffering is almost beyond human endurance. Uric acid is promptly removed from the system when the kidneys are kept healthy and active by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Absent From City Twenty-five Years

Mr. Albert M. Marshall, special representative of the National Sewing Machine Co. of Belvidere, Ill., is in the city to-day. He was thirty years ago the agent for the Singer Sewing Machine Co. in Peterborough and has not been in the city for twenty-five years. He is greatly impressed with the appearance of Peterborough and expresses regrets at ever having left it, on account of its progressive and modern apearance. Mr. Marshall is in Peterborough in the interests of his company and has closed arrangements with Mr. J .P. Cunningham of the Peterborough Music Co., whereby the latter will handle the National sewing machine.

TRAGEDY OF EVERYDAY LIFE

New York, March 11.—Abrahem Uman of Everett, Mass., shot and mortally wounded himself late last night because he had a disagreement with Miss Dora Kats, his fiancee, which ended with the young woman's breaking their engagement. The girl knelt beside him. "I love you," she sobbed. "I kew you love me now, and I'll marry you when you get well."

"It's too late now, Dora," he murmured. "I'm dying."

Case of Theft Against Two Local Boys Will be Dealt With Monday.

The two local youths who were yesterday arrested, charged with having stolen a valise, were remanded until Monday. One of the youths was committed to the Shelter and the other was allowed to proceed to his home.

LIQUOR CASES AIRED IN THE POLICE COURT THIS MORNING

Fine of $50 and Costs Imposed in One Case---Chief of Police Thompson Who Laid the Information, Conducts Prosecution---Inspector Stewart Present But Left Before Cases Were Over.

It took nearly four hours of a Police Court session to dispose of a number of liquor cases, this morning. Mr. Haverson, K.C., of Toronto, represented the defense, with the exception of the case of the Palace, which was looked after by Mr. G. N. Gordon. License Inspector Stewart was present, but his voice was not heard in court. He left the room before the cases were concluded. The Chief, who had laid the complaints, conducted the prosecution.

The first case dealt with was that of the wine clerk at the Palace Hotel. He was charged with unlawfully supplying liquor to Hanlon Howard, contrary to the provisions of the Indian Act, the said Hanlon Howard being a band Indian, belonging to the Hiawatha Reserve. The defendant pleaded guilty. He was fined $50 and costs.

No evidence was offered for the defence.

Sold Liquor to a Minor.

The case of Bruce Lee, bartender at the Grand Hotel, who was charged with unlawfully supplying liquor to a local youth, contrary to the provisions of the liquor act, respecting minors, was heard next.

Mr. Haverson, counsel for the defence, pleaded not guilty to the charge.

The boy in question on being put into the witness box, related what occurred on the evening on which the alleged contravention of the License Act was committed. The witness, who gave his age as seventeen, entered the bar of the Grand Hotel on the evening of March 8th. He was accompanied by another youth. Witness consumed several drinks, consisting of lager and whiskey. The former beverage was served by one of the bartenders, Bruce Lee, by name. This was followed by a whiskey, which was supplied by William Evans, another of the bartenders. Evans questioned him as to his age, which he declared to the questioner to be twenty-one. No questions pertaining to his age were asked by Lee. Witness had shaved since Friday, a circumstance which he believed would render him younger in appearance.

The next witness called, the companion of the former, corroborated the evidence as given by the preceding witness. He, himself, had been served with several soft drinks by the bartenders, and also one whiskey.

At the request of the Counsel for defence, witness was requested to describe his appearance on entering the hotel. This he did by placing his cap on his head, buttoning up his overcoat, etc. The other youth entered the bar similarly garbed, excepting that his coat collar was turned up, a precaution which he adopted to cope with the snowstorm which was prevailing at the time.

"What about the proving of these boys ages?" queried the Magistrate. "Unless they are proved I refuse to make a conviction."

The Chief made a move to go below and consult the City Clerk about the matter, when the Counsel for the defence intervened and emphatically stated that he would raise no objection as to the ages.

"We have so many surprises," commented His Worship.

"Yes, but you have never known me to go back on my word," retorted Mr. Haverson.

Bruce Lee, the first witness for the defence, testified to the effect that he recollected serving the two young men in question.

"Did they strike you as being under 21," asked the Chief.

Witness—"No."

"What would you have done if they had?"

Witness—"They would have got chased; that's all."

Witness admitted that he would not serve them with liquor as they appeared in court.

High County Constable Cochrane and Mr. Wylie, an insurance agent, were called upon for an expression of opinion regarding the ages of the boys. The former said that he would take both of the boys to be under 20, although he had never seen them before. Mr. Wylie could not see very much difference, but if he were asking to either of them relative to a $1,000 policy he would hit them up for an 18-year premium.

In summing up the case, Mr. Haverson asked that the case be dismissed in view of the fact that the witnesses for the defence had acted bonafide in selling the liquor to the youths. They came into the barroom covered with snow and with their coat collars up in such a manner that rendered it difficult to discern their youthful features.

His Worship did not know how much sea room a bartender should have in such cases. The safe way was not to see how near the precipice you could come, but to see how far away you could get from it.

His Worship then imposed a fine of $13.05 in each of the two charges against Bruce Lee and William Evans, the two bartenders at the Grand Hotel. They were given ten days to pay it in.

For loitering in a barroom the two youths in question were fined $2.00.

Case Was Dismissed.

Charles R. Nixon pleaded not guilty, through the medium of his counsel, Mr. Haverson, to a charge of supplying liquor to one Hanlon Howard, an Indian, belonging to the Hiawatha Reserve.

The Indian was put into the box, and examined by the Chief.

Witness testified that on Saturday last he came into the city, got drunk and, some time during the afternoon was arrested. He pleaded guilty to the charge, in the Police Court, on Monday, and specified the Palace Hotel as the source from which he secured the "fire-water." Describing the circumstances, in detail, witness stated that he secured several drinks of whiskey at the Grand Hotel. He was served over the bar in the regular way. After dinner he returned to "Nixon's" and was served with more whiskey. He did not recollect being ejected from the bar by Mr. Nixon. He further admitted securing liquor at the Palace Hotel earlier in the day.

On being cross-examined by Mr. Haverson, counsel for the defence, witness described his actions on the Saturday in question. He came into town by train, and after transacting a little business, went to the Palace Hotel and secured some whiskey. He next visited the Grand Hotel and followed a similar procedure. Witness failed to recall many of the circumstances pertaining to his movements in the city on the day in question, and to many of the questions asked by Mr. Haverson he repeatedly landed out the formula "I don't remember."

"I am afraid that I am pumping at a dry well," said Mr. Haverson. "Say, witness, there is one more question that I am going to ask you," he added: "Are you going to confine yourself to the 'don't remember' business to any further questions that I might ask you?"

"Yes," replied the witness.

William Evans, Bruce Lee and Walter Chambers, three bartenders at the Grand, all testified to the effect that they did not observe the Indian drinking in the "Nixon" house on Saturday. They further denied having sold him any liquor. The Indian was seen loitering around the bar-rooms during the day, and about 2 o'clock a scuffle ensued between the Indian and another man. Bruce Lee separated them and shoved the Indian out of the back door and his arrest followed a few minutes later.

This closed the evidence in the case Mr. Haverson, in a brief resume of the case, did not consider that the evidence offered was of sufficient weight to warrant a conviction.

The case against Charles Nixon was dismissed and a fine of $5.00 imposed in the case of Hanlon Howard, charged with being drunk contrary to the provisions of the Indian Act.

CHURCH UNION.

The church union movement seems to have encountered a new impasse. While individual congregations are voting favourably to union as an abstract principle, many of them, especially among the Presbyterians, are pronouncing against the basis of union. Now, the basis of union seems to be the cardinal consideration upon which the whole scheme hinges. A workable basis of union seems to involve so many sacrifices of principles of doctrine and church polity, so much surrender of ecclesiastical individuality that the outlook for making organic church union effective, seem to be not very promising.

WISE EXPENDITURE.

The county of Wentworth will spend $61,000 additional in the construction of a county roads system. This is in addition to $71,000 previously spent, making in all an expenditure of $429,000 for the county road system, one-third of which is contributed by the government. At $3,000 a mile—which should make a good road—this means that the county of Wentworth has about 145 miles of first-class leading highways, which will represent to the farmers of the riding a saving of time, wear and tear of horse flesh and vehicles very greatly in excess of any added taxation that may be involved. Good roads as to cost are a more important item in the farmers profit and loss account, than any other single item or any half dozen items. Good roads do not only benefit the farmers, but the residents of towns and cities. Merchants gain by easy access of farmers, by means of good roads to their market or other towns, and market patrons also gain. A farmer who bowls smoothly and comfortably over good roads to market with a load of produce, will be in a good humour and inclined not to be as exacting in the matter of prices as he would be if he had been pounded over rough and muddy roads, consuming twice as much time, perhaps, as he would over good highways.

HOME RULE.

The Grand Master of the Grand Orange Lodge of Ontario West, in his address, denounced the Irish Home Rule bill, because, as he poetically asserted, "the bill means ultimately being ruled, from the Tiber, instead of the Thames". In the British Empire is very little ruling from the Thames. Every important part of the empire is self-governing, like Canada, Australia, etc. Canada is self-governing and wouldn't be the Canada it is unless it were so, and Canadians would refuse to live, and would probably cease to thrive if the days were brought back when this country was ruled from the Thames. We are separated in system of government from the Mother Country much further than we were three score and ten years ago. Yet we are more closely connected in sentiment and community of interest than we were when we took our laws and our administration from Downing street. Home rule has been a great success in Canada; it is what, among other things, has chiefly made Canada great; and it has not weakened but distinctly strengthened the tie of British connection, and contributed to promoting Imperial unity. Why should not a similar success follow the concession of self-government in Ireland. Every Canadian who rejoices in the privileges of self-government furnishes on the grounds of British fair play alone, an argument for Home Rule for Ireland. Every concession of popular liberty and popular enfranchisement, in the history of the British Empire has been met with pessimism such as influences the Grand Master. The key stone of empire was being knocked into ruin and disaster were overhanging Great Britain on the head of every great reform that has made Great Britain and its political constitution the model of noble and beneficient government.

NEGLECTED AGRICULTURAL INTERESTS.

Nobody but an extreme partizan of the Whitney government will deny that the agricultural interests of the province are indifferently and inefficiently administered. Officially, the Minister of Agriculture is a cypher at the left side of the ministerial digit of the cabinet. This condition is not improved, but proved, by the appointment of a Deputy-Minister of Agriculture to succeed Mr. C. C. James — a young man without any considerable experience in agricultural matters. Instead, the very best and most experienced man procurable should have been selected as deputy minister to succeed such a man as Mr. James. It was only the presence and power and efficiency of Mr. James that kept the department in as good condition as it was, and prevented it from going to further smash. It is claimed that the Whitney government has increased the grants to agriculture. This claim is only ostensibly sustained. The grants made to agriculture by the preceding Liberal government amounted to 8 1-2 per cent. of the total revenue, while the grants made by the Whitney government are only 7 per cent. of the total revenue of the province. Thanks to the sources of revenue provided by the Liberal government — largely opposed by the Conservatives—and thanks to the national prosperity developed under the Liberal government of the Dominion, these sources have provided a large proportion of the increased revenue of the province and placed the present government in a position to deal far more liberally than they have done with the interests of agriculture. But appropriation of money does not satisfy the responsibility of the government. Its prudent and effective expenditure under a capable administrative head is what matters. And evidence daily accumulates that Ontario's head of the Agricultural Department qualifies to rank in rank inefficiency and far-niente incompetency with the Minister of Education, who has to call in a special commissioners to investigate a deplorable condition of laxity that has grown up under the very nose of the Minister himself, whose department, if decently administered should have revealed even after it had permitted a deplorable neglect of educational interests and unfamiliarity with the uses of the machinery of his department.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

It is surprising that the authorities have not thought of the most effective punishment for the window smashing suffragettes — preventing them from talking.

The supplementary estimates of the Ontario Government contain provision for the increase of salaries for the staff of Peterborough Normal School—Department Master, increase $160; drawing master, increase $40; music master, increase $50; instructor of manual training, increase $40; instructor of household science, increase $30; stenographer and librarian, increase $50; total, $370.

LAURIER'S NAVY "MET REQUIREMENTS."

It would be interesting to learn the reason for the suppression for five months of a memorandum by Admiral Kingsmill on conditions in the Canadian naval service, presented to the Commons on Monday. The Admiral's report was made in October, shortly after Mr. Borden's Government was formed. It is not necessary to speculate as to the object of the new Government in asking for Admiral Kingsmill's views. If that object was to obtain expert support for the Tory ante-election cry that Laurier's navy was a "tin-pot" affair, Admiral Kingsmill refused to promote it by playing politics.

He stated that the late Government had called for tenders for four cruisers and six destroyers, the latter of the improved river class. While not ambitious, this scheme, he said, met requirements. He expressed the opinion that it would be in the interests of efficiency if part of the ships were built in England. Cruisers ordered in England could be delivered in a year.

The Government's action on this report was significant. It declared that the Laurier program, which, according to the professional head of the service, "met requirements," was of no benefit to the country, threw out the tenders for construction, and announced the repeal of the Navy Act. Intimation was made of an intention to consult the British Admiralty, but not a single practical step of any sort has been taken to provide Canada with vessels for naval defence. The policy that "met requirements" has been swept aside, and nothing has taken its place save a promise of some action in the indefinite future. What do the British-born who were humbugged by the talk of Laurier's "tin-pot" navy think of the suppression of Admiral Kingsmill's report? — The Globe.

ORANGEMEN FOREGATHER.

(London Advertiser.)

The Orangemen of Ontario West are gathering in the city for their annual meeting under the presidency of an employee of the Whitney Government. Here and there a few Liberals may be humbugged into joining the order by the pretence that it is not a political organization, though it remains, as it has always been, the most militant wing of the Conservative party.

The Grand Lodge of Ontario West will discuss bilingual schools, the Ne-Temere decree, and other politico-religious questions, but with the Conservative party in power at Ottawa and Toronto the debates will be robbed of their wonted fervour. Without a Liberal Government at hand to harry, the average Orangeman's occupation is gone. The home rule issue, in the circumstances, will be a special providence to the Grand Lodge. The brethren can dress up the Asquith Government in clerical robes and punch it to their heart's content. The Black Knights have already finished the first round.

Some of our Roman Catholic fellow-citizens take the Orange order too seriously. It is not so much anti-Catholic as anti-Liberal. In this country it dislikes Sir Wilfrid Laurier a great deal more than it dislikes the Pope. In the last election it stood shoulder to shoulder with Bourassa and Lavergne, who represent the ultramontaine element in the Province of Quebec. The Orange Sentinel and Le Devoir were the heavenly twins of the anti-Laurier press. While the Sentinel shrieked against him as a tool of French clerical aggrandisement, Le Devoir painted him in Orange colours. In this co-operative enterprise the Orangemen and Nationalists have been engaged for many years.

One thing must be said of the Orangeman: You know where to find him. He is not weak-kneed in his party allegiance. He is "agin the Government" providing it is a Liberal one, and he has no prejudice against the company of his Catholic fellow-citizen, French or English, from Quebec or elsewhere, who are marching in the same direction.

LAURIER VINDICATED.

(Ottawa Free Press)

The third reading of the Manitoba Boundaries bill in the House of Commons early this morning was just another justification of the wise statesmanship of Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

It was an historic day, probably the greatest since the final autonomy debate of 1905, but it served to justify every act of Wilfrid Laurier from the day when the school question in Manitoba became a federal issue down to this year of grace.

The sneers of the Monks and of the Pelletiers and the men behind them could not rob Laurier of the glorious claim that he was the first of Canadian statesmen to make conference and conciliation the basis of his administration. He had the justification last week; but the greatest justification of all came when the "juvenile" F. D. Monk attacked the "senile" Laurier, and the juvenile was compelled to admit that the "senile gentleman" knew more about things political than he did.

It was, perhaps, ufortunate, that some of Laurier's followers had to abandon him on this issue. They must have been men of very little faith. They may have had regard to pressing political exigencies in their own constituecies, but, even though two of them were former members of the Laurier cabinet, there is no doubt that by their votes they gave an intimation to the clericals that they have but to dictate and the representatives of the people will dance.

That is not Laurier's Liberalism. That is not British Liberalism. If Liberalism means anything it means adherence to a principle. In this case the principle was the observance of the rights of the province, and Laurier recognised now, as in 1896, that national claims and national ambitions were above and beyond any parochial claims.

Borden and Rogers may have won in yesterday's divisions in the Commons, but the man who comes out of the ordeal with best honour is Laurier, the man who staked his all in 1896 upon the die of a national and united Canada, and who has never since wavered from that ideal.

NEW POLITICAL ETHICS IN RELATION TO PARTY APPOINTMENTS

(London Advertiser)

The House of Commons the other day discussed the case of Mr. Lyman C. Smith of Oshawa, the victim of an atrocious application of the spoils system. Mr. Smith was dismissed from the office of collector of customs at the instance of William Smith, M. P., a man who had been rebuked by two high court judges for bribing electors. William Smith complained to Dr. Reid, minister of customs, that Lyman Smith had been "in many ways very active during the election which closed on Sept. 21," and advised his removal as soon as possible. Previous to this Mr. Lyman Smith had written to Mr. Wm. Smith, refuting the charge of partisanship and asserting that he had never sat on a political platform, spoken at a political meeting, attended a party committee meeting, or canvassed for votes. To one man he did say in private conversation that he "would never vote for a man who had proved to have been concerned in the giving of money for bribes." These words were conveyed to the self-confessed corruptionist who sits for South Ontario in the House of Commons, and they were sufficient to cause Mr. Lyman Smith's dismissal, by the confession of the Minister of Customs himself. Mr. Carvell, M. P., replied indignantly to the Minister:

"According to his own story he (Mr. Lyman Smith) is an extraordinary man; he does not seem to have taken the usual interest that men everywhere take in public affairs, and he appears to be under the impression himself that he was dismissed because he made the statement that he did not approve of bribery at elections. Surely that would not be a good reason for dismissing this official, and that is the reason why, after having read the correspondence, I ask the minister to give an explanation."

The minister still maintained that the letter of Mr. Smith justified his dismissal, and the following colloquy ensued:

"Mr. Guthrie—What portion of that letter justified his dismissal?

Dr. Reid—The whole letter. The man himself admits that he was practically canvassing.

"Mr. Sinclair—Oh, no.

"Dr. Reid—Well, it amounts to that; he says he went around expressing his opinion to private individuals.

"Mr. Sinclair — And the opinion he expressed is an opinion that is shared in by everybody in this country, 'namely that we should have pure elections.'"

Here the doctrine is laid down by a cabinet minister that a public official has no right to express an opinion on a public issue in private conversation. The Czar of Russia could hardly go further. The high character of Mr. Lyman Smith, his services as principal of the Oshawa High School for over a generation, and his literary reputation, ought to have shielded him against thuggery and tyranny of this kind. The community of Oshawa should stand by an honourable citizen, and punish his assailant when the next election comes. This it will do if it thinks more of the Lyman Smith type than of the William Smith species.

SALIENT POINTS OF THE BUDGET

OTTAWA, MARCH 13.—The largest surplus on record—namely, $39,000,000, being the difference between a total estimated revenue for the current year of $136,000,000 and an expenditure on revenue account amounting to $97,000,000.

Capital expenditure for the year, including an extra outlay of $5,000,000 to implement the Grand Trunk Pacific bond guarantee, met out of revenue, with a balance left for debt reduction amounting to $1,150,000.

Total estimates for the coming year will probably reach $175,000,000, or $25,000,000 more than the "extravagant" Liberal Government provided for last year.

No tariff changes and no bounty renewals, pending investigations by the new Tariff Commission.

This Will Stop Your Cough in a Hurry

Save $2 by Making This Cough Syrup at Home.

This recipe makes 16 ounces of better cough syrup than you could buy ready made for $2.50. A few doses usually conquer the most obstinate cough—stops even whooping cough quickly. Simple as it is, no better remedy can be had at any price.

Mix two cups of granulated sugar with one cup of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a 16-ounce bottle; then add the Sugar Syrup. It has a pleasant taste and lasts a family a long time. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

You can feel this take hold of a cough in a way that means business. Has a good tonic effect, braces up the appetite, and is slightly laxative, too, which is helpful. A handy remedy for hoarseness, croup, bronchitis, asthma and all throat and lung troubles.

The effect of pine on the membranes is well known. Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norwegian white pine extract, and is rich in guaiacol and all the natural healing pine elements. Other preparations will not work in this formula.

This Pinex and Sugar Syrup recipe has attained great popularity throughout the United States and Canada. It has often been imitated, though never successfully.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to the Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

CITY SHOULD PUT NAMES ON STREETS

Trades and Labour Council Endorses Proposal

A meeting of the Trades and Labour Council was held last night in the Labour Hall, there being a large attendance of delegates.

The Council endorsed the action being taken by the Pattern-makers of Canada in memorializing the Minister of Customs and others re the admission into Canada of American and Foreign patterns free.

It was decided that the City Council be reminded of the fact that the placing of the names on the corners of streets was as yet a dead letter, and that same should be attended to.

A committee of six was appointed to get up a debate on Co-operation for the next monthly meeting.

It was decided to hold the next concert on Friday, April 12th, when a good programme will be presented.

PETERBORO' AND OTTAWA ARE ADDED TO THE ROSTER OF THE CANADIAN LEAGUE

Annual Meeting Was Held at Hamilton Yesterday—The Salary Limit Was Increased—Honoraria for Officers.

SCHEDULE NOT DRAWN

HAMILTON, MARCH 13.—(Special)—Ottawa and Peterborough were this afternoon formally taken into the Canadian League, making an eight-club circuit. The meeting was held at the Hotel Waldorf, President J. P. Fitzgerald of Toronto, being in the chair, and the various cities represented as follows: London, S. Stevely, George O'Neil, F. C. Buxsell; Peterborough, W. S. Davidson, Dan. McCabe and Manager Curtis Templin; Ottawa, Frank Shaughnessy; Brantford, Thomas Nelson and Richard Escrett; Guelph, W. J. Sheridan, J. Hilliard; Berlin, "Pop" Williams, Manager "Rube" Deneau, W. H. Rhoades; St. Thomas, Charles Stanley; Hamilton, M. M. Robinson and Manager George Lee.

The secretary and H. L. Walsh, of Brantford, were appointed to draft a schedule for the season. Mr. Robinson was granted an honorarium for last year's work, and he and the President were voted salaries for this year. The season will open on May 14 and close on Labour Day. The salary limit was raised from $1,200 to $1,500. It was stated that Manager Chaucer Elliott of St. Thomas, who is under treatment in New York for an injury, was in danger of losing a limb. A resolution of sympathy was sent. Manager Shaughnessy of Ottawa claimed that owing to the fact that he was part owner of the Ottawa club, and Fort Wayne claims him, the latter club will not be able to make good the claim before the National Commission.

"Old Folks" Templin, who has been apointed manager at Peterborough, was sold by Berlin. London protested against a fine imposed last year for using season tickets, and a committee was named to investigate and report.

DEROCHER CAPTAIN OF ALL STAR TEAM WHICH BEAT CLEVELAND 2 TO 1

Syracuse, N.Y., March 13.—The All-Star O.H.A. team which wore the colours of Syracuse to-night against Cleveland, put a crimp in that team's aspirations for the United States amateur championship, and beat the Ohioans 2 to 1 in a fast and exciting contest.

Cleveland had expected to meet the old Arena team and its backers dropped a bunch of money in the contest. They put up an awful "holler" over the result, but their former captain, who was judge of play, was very partial to them. With two minutes to play he banished Hunter (Toronto) from the game for a minor offence.

Marchand, the former Kingston player, was the star for the visitors. McCamus from Toronto, and Hunter, also from that city, were the bright lights for Syracuse, although Derocher of Peterborough, did his full share of the good work. These men were brought here last week to form a team to play the Kingston Frontenacs. They tied the Frontenacs in the first game and lost the second. Bearss, Kelly and Coughlin of Peterborough and Art Armstrong of Trenton were in the lineup on that occasion. Jupp of Orillia won favour for his dashing work, while Doheny of Cobourg continued the grand work he performed in the Kingston series. Beatty from Midland was in the game every minute.

The Wanderers and Les Canadiens of Montreal will play here on March 25th and 26th. The line-up:

Referee—F. H. Sproule, Toronto.

SALVES CAN'T CURE ECZEMA

In regard to skin diseases, medical authorities are now agreed on this:

Don't imprison the disease germs in your skin by the use of greasy salves, and thus encourage them to multiply. A true cure of all eczematous diseases can be brought about only by using the healing agents in the form of a liquid.

WASH THE GERMS OUT.

A simple wash: A compound of Oil of Wintergreen, Thymol, and other ingredients as combined in the D.D.D. Prescription. This penetrates to the disease germs and destroys them, then soothes and heals the skin as nothing else has ever done.

We have made fast friends of more than one family by recommending this D.D.D. Prescription to a skin sufferer here and there, and we want you to try it now. We can tell you all about D.D.D. Prescription and how it cures eczema, or you can get a free trial bottle by writing D.D.D. Prescription, 49 Colborne St., Toronto. McDermid and Jury and E. L. Payne, druggists.

MANAGER TEMPLIN SIGNS A PETERBOROUGH CONTRACT

Messrs. Dan. McCabe and Walter Davidson of the local ball club returned from Hamilton last night, highly pleased with the success of the annual meeting of the Canadian League and with the prospects for the season. The most pleasing feature was that negotiations for the release of Manager Templin from the Berlin Club were satisfactorily concluded and the Reading, Pa., player affixed his John Hancock to a Peterborough certificate last night, being the first player to actually sign a contract.

At the meeting yesterday the different delegates congratulated Peterborough upon securing the services of Templin, whom they rate as a star player. Templin did not return to Peterborough, but after a trip to Brantford and Berlin to-day will leave for Reading, where he will round up his team. He has seven or eight men already in hand. Some of the League managers will try out a big bunch of men. Knotty Lee, of the Hamilton League, has no less than thirty-six, but it is not probable that he will bring them all to Hamilton for a try. On the other hand the Ottawas have only three signed at present, although like Peterborough, they have strings on the others and will sign them up immediately.

HOCKEY HAPPENINGS

The Rustlers and Colts played a lively game at Brock street rink last evening, the Rustlers winning by 7 goals to 3. At half time they were in front 1 to 0. Both sides worked hard and it was a good exhibition of juvenile hockey, with Richardson and Stevenson of the Rustlers starring. E. White refereed and the teams were as follows:

The Bugle Band made a light lunch of No. 3 Company in their game at Brock street rink last night the score at the finish being 8 to 0 in favour of the musicians. It might easily have been thirty had it not been for the goal-keeping of Dwyer of the juniors, who stopped a host of shots. The Bugle Band team lined up as follows:

The Brinton Carpet Works team wish to challenge any team in the Mercantile League or any similar team to a game of hockey to be played as soon as possible at Brock St. rink.

PENNY BANK

Smiths Falls, Ont., March 11.—Though the penny bank scheme has only been in existence in connection with the Smiths Falls public schools one month, the savings to the credit of the children to the end of February totalled $485.73. The pupils are greatly interested in the matter and the system is working out well.

Baseball News

(By I. E. Sanborn)

Few things are more striking in the recent growth of baseball than the increase in the quantity of playing talent considered necessary for a team. The player limit recently fixed forbids a club carrying more than twenty-five men, except in the spring and fall. The team with which Pittsburgh won its third straight pennant in 1903 had only fourteen players who took part in enough games to count.

The Pirates were exceptional in their makeup. Three of the men who helped win three straight championships were in Pittsburgh's regular line-up last season and two others were with that team as late as 1910. Manager Clarke, Hans Wagner and Tommy Leach shone last year with only a slightly dimmed lustre compared to their work in 1901, 1902 and 1903. The manager has announced he will work from the bench this year, but few believe him. Leach cannot stick much longer and Wagner is nearing the twilight.

Leach played third base in 1903 and had beside him Wagner at short, Ritchie at second and Bransfield at first, with Krueger as utility man. "Kit" was with Philadelphia and Chicago last season and will not be among those present in fast company this year. Beaumont and Sebring were the other outfielders besides Clarke. Beau made good until as late as 1910, then was discarded by the Cubs. Sebring got tangled up with an outlaw league and was on the ineligible list until his death.

Kennedy, Phillippe, Leever and Doheny were the Pirate pitchers in 1903, and Smith and Phelps the catchers. Doheny lost his reason long before his associates lost their grip as pitchers. Smith went to Boston and managed the Nationals part of one year, while Phelps helped out Bresnahan last season.

Nine out of every ten fans probably regard Philadelphia's two times world's champions as youngsters. They think only of that athletic infield, McInnis, Collins, Barry and Baker. But five of the players who shared in the proceeds of the last world's series not only were prominent on the team in 1903, but helped the Athletics win their 1902 pennant. They are Harry Davis, Chief Bender, Dan Murphy, Eddie Plank and Topsy Hartsel. Only three of that quintet remain in Philadelphia, for Davis is Cleveland's new manager and Hartsel is in class AA at Toledo. Plank and Bender were young bloods in 1903, but Davis was considered a veteran even then, and last year ranked second to Cy Young in point of active service.

Murphy was a second baseman in 1903 and the rest of the infield included Davis on first and the two Crosses, Monte and Lave, at short and third. Monte will return to the majors in the role of scout for St. Louis this year. Hartsel had for partners in the outfield Seybold, Hoffman and sometimes Pickering when Socks took Davis' place on first. Rube Waddell then was the star, although not the mainstay of the club staff, and Henley was the only other regular pitcher besides Plank and Bender. Shreck and Powers were the catchers, the latter being one of the few players of recent years whose major league careers have been shortened by death.

Out of the Phillies of 1903 have developed two major league managers of to-day and one assistant manager. One other player of that team still is in its ranks. Charley Dooin, the blonde manager of the Phillies, shared the backstopping with Chief Zimmer and Frank Roth in 1903 and learned well the lessons taught him by th chief, who then was manager. Harry Wolverton, now the Highlanders' pilot, played third in Philadelphia that year and at second base was Kid Gleason, now assistant to Jimmy Callahan of the White Sox. Hulswitt played short with Barry and Douglass holding down first and Brashear and Hallman acting as utility infielders. Hulswitt hung on longest among those infielders and only recently dropped out of the big circuits.

John Titus refused to be jimmied out of right field in all those years, although Thomas and Keister both had to yield. The Philly pitchers were Ruggieby, Mitchell, Fraser and Sparks. Fraser later became one of the Cub reliables and Mitchell turned catcher, getting a job with the New York Americans. Sparks was one of the last of the quartet to lose his arm.

Not a vestige of the Washington team of 1903 was left in the majors last season, nor the year before that, although the Senators of 1911 were largely composed of veterans. Washington seems always to have had a team of old timers and the aggregation of nine years ago was no exception. There were Ryan, Selbach and Ed Delehanty in the outfield with Hendricks as substitute. Ryan turned to the semi-pro field in Chicago. Selbach got too fat to do anything but bowl and Delehanty lost his life in Niagara Falls. Hendricks has since made his mark as a minor manager and will be part owner in Denver this year.

The infield had Clarke and Carey on first, McCormick at second, Moran and Robinson at short, and Coughlin at third. The pitchers were Orth, Patton, Townsend, Dunkle, Lee and Wilson, and the catchers Kittredge and Drill. The aggregate age of that outfit would make even last year's team look like "rookies."

Lost Time.

The late Sylvanus Miller, civil engineer, who was engaged in a railroad enterprise in Central America, was seeking local support for a road and attempted to give the matter point. He asked a native:

"How long does it take you to carry your goods to market by muleback?"

"Three days," was the reply.

"There's the point," said Miller. "With our road in operation you could take your goods to market and be back home in one day."

"Very good, senor," answered the native. "But what would we do with the other two days?"—Boston Record.

"Oh," replied Arthur, "we have the servants to pull the chains."—Judge.

There doesn't exist the woman who can lightly turn her back upon such a brilliant assemblage of Laces and Embroideries as we've gathered for this season. There's such a multitude of lovely styles ---more than we've ever before offered in a single showing. The workmanship and needlework of these dainty materials are flawless, while the patterns are so new and attractive. To give a detailed description of the most desirable styles would be impracticable. You must see this display personally in order to realize its extent and scope. Come! You'll find that prices are as tempting as the Laces and Embroideries are beautiful.

RICHARD HALL & SON

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

"If you would be pungent, be brief; for it is with words as with sunbeams—the more they are condensed the deeper they burn."

—Southey.

There is a certain type of person who is appreciated in every walk of life, the home, the office, the pulpit, the social function, the schoolroom; in short everywhere — and that is the man or woman who knows how to say what he or she has to say and then stop.

How few people we know who talk too little! And how many who are guilty of the opposite offense! A great writer has said that the smallest part of his art is in knowing what to write, the larger part in knowing what to leave out, and when to stop. Apparently most of us find the same difficulty in conversation—we have no trouble in finding enough to talk about, but we have difficulty in knowing when to stop. As the wearied listener said of the speaker who missed many excellent opportunities to bring his speech to a close: "Our terminal facilities seem to have been neglected."

A recognition of the need of greater conciseness, if such is to be accomplished, is expressed in the little sign which hangs in so many business offices "Be Brief." It warns the over-voluble visitor. "We have our living to earn and it takes most of our time to do it."

It is said that one's digestion and general health are best served when he rises from a meal not feeling sated, but as if he could eat more. We seldom get a chance to leave a conversational meal with this feeling, but I think on the rare occasions when we do meet with a companion who really talks so sparingly and has so much reserve that we wish to hear more from him, instead of less, the result is that his words are much more carefully heeded and better digested.

Although most of us are in a hurry these days, we do not seem to have acquired the fine art of conciseness. And that does not mean omitting half what one really has to say or cutting it short to save time. That's the kind of haste that makes waste. It means the fine art of having something worth saying, saying it simply, clearly, without repetition or irrelevant dilution, and then stopping short and sharp as a well trained orchestra stops before a rest.

The French have a proverb which runs: "Le secret d'ennuyer est de tout dire."—"The way to bore yourself and everybody else is to say everything you know."

If you want to be a benefactor to yourself and the human race, practise not saying everything you know. Learn to keep a few things back; make your listeners feel they have heard too little rather than too much; let your conversational guests leave their banquet hungry rather than surfeited.

BIG THINGS FOR DOMINION FAIR

In Ottawa, 1912

The decision of the Federal Government to hold the Dominion Fair in Ottawa this year, at once turned the attention of stock breeders, manufacturers and exhibitors in general, all over Canada, to the coming Central Canada Exhibition. The special grant of $50,000 from the government has already brought extra amounts from the regular sources of maintenance. Every department of the Fair will be improved from 100 to 200 per cent. Live stock and other premiums are [illegible] doubled, and a similar [illegible] in securing attractions.

On learning of the Dominion grant the Fair managers set to work enthusiastically. The first thing was to extend the dates, taking an extra Saturday into the Exhibition period. The Fair will open on Thursday, September 5th. The first two days will be for preparation, and Saturday, September 7th, will see the event in full swing. It will continue till Monday, September 16th, inclusive.

The management has started off with completing arrangements for the erection of a $90,000 machinery hall. The building will be 144-384 feet, made of brick, fire-proof, and of architectural design to conform with the other handsome edifices on the grounds. This means that the large number of manufacturers of farm implements and other machinery who have deferred coming to Ottawa will be on hand at the 1912 Fair and add much to its educational value. It is too soon to speculate on the special attractions, but it is known that the directors are negotiating through Col. Lowther of the Governor-General's staff to secure the famous band of the Scots Guards for open air concerts.

The broad scale on which the Dominion Fair is to be conducted has necessitated beginning the work of preparation months before the usual time. The enlargement of the prize lists means a lot of careful revision and several important changes will be announced later. Inquiries are pouring in already from all parts since the special nature of the Fair became known. As far as amusements and exhibits are concerned it will simply be a matter of selecting the best from a great host.

Lost His Hair, Beard and Mustache

Terrible Plight of a Pennsylvania Man Reported by a Prominent Citizen

"About two years ago my hair, beard and mustache started to come out in spots. These spots were entirely bare of hair.

Seeing PARISIAN SAGE advertised, I purchased four bottles and after using two of the bottles, the hair came in until now I have as good a head of hair as I had before this trouble started.

Please bear in mind that PARISIAN SAGE is not guaranteed to grow hair on bald heads.

In Mr. Galder's case the hair root was not dead, and there is no good reason why PARISIAN SAGE should not do just what he writes it did.

"The next time Mr. Galder came into my store after purchasing the PARISIAN SAGE," writes the druggist who sold him, "his appearance was so changed I did not know him."

PARISIAN SAGE is without doubt the most efficient hair grower, beautifier and dandruff cure in the world, and people who are wasting time with ordinary commercial tonics should wake up.

PARISIAN SAGE will banish dandruff, stop falling hair and itching scalp; will put life, lustre and beauty into faded hair, or money back. It is a most delightful and refreshing tonic for men, women and children. Large bottle 50 cents at Wm. Madill's and druggists the country over.

1911 REPORTS OF FISH AND GAME INSPECTORS OF THIS DISTRICT

Ducks Were Plentiful Last Year and Bass Fishing Was Good—Big Lunge Caught Near Idyl Wyld—Suggestions of Interest to Sportsmen.

SOME RECOMMENDATIONS

The fifth annual report of the Game and Fisheries Department for the Province contains some information that may be of interest to those who make the waters of this district the objective points of fishing and excursion trips during the summer. The report is for 1911:

Overseer John Watt, of Peterborough, reports that the fish run began quite early this year. Very few nets were confiscated in comparison with previous years, owing to the little chance the fishermen had in getting them set in safety. Owing to the raising of the water at the dam below the city in the early spring, the catch was not quite so good in the little lake inside of city limits. In some instances they took five feet of water at a time when the fish were spawning.

Ducks seemed rather scarce in the early open season, but have been very plentiful since. Partridge are numerous in all the woods around there, but some hunters have reported a scarcity in the northern country.

There were not so many muskrats this year as last.

The Fish and Game Laws have been fairly well observed in so far as they have been looked after. He has had to report about eleven violations to the Department, the settlements for same amounting to $50.50; also confiscation of one gun.

Not quite so many anglers came his way this year. However, he can see enough work there to keep an overseer employed all his time the year round.

Mr. Thompson's Report.

Overseer W. H. Thompson of Bancroft, reports that the Game and Fish laws have been fairly well observed in his division, not saying but what there has been some illegal fishing going on. Fishing has been fairly good at the mouth of the Otonabee River, especially for maskinonge.

Black ducks and woodducks have been scarce in the river this season, but partridge have been very plentiful. Black squirrels are also plentiful, but he thinks that open season for partridge should start with the duck season as people shooting ducks along the shore sometimes go after partridge, and again the leaves are thicker on the trees and therefore they would be better protected.

Muskrats are not so plentiful owing to their being a good price, and they are more closely trapped. The rat season should start March 1st in place of Dec. 1st and stop April 15. It would be better for both rat and trapper, as they wouldn't be so closely trapped and more left for breeding. He also thinks that trappers should have a license fee of $2, and the Department furnish each licensed man with a paper, and have him send in the number of hides sold and price of each. Some of the trappers in his division are in favour of this.

Mink are very scarce and should be protected one month longer, open season starting Dec. 1st in place of Nov. 1st. This would keep trappers out of creeks till they were frozen up and therefore they wouldn't catch muskrats.

He also thinks that the frogs should be protected as they are very scarce.

From Gore's Landing.

Overseer J. R. McAllister of Gore's Landing, reports: Fish were very plentiful in the marsh last April and May. During spawning season the law was well observed, although he often hears reports that netting is going on in the Otonabee River. Fishing has been very good. On the 11th October, in the afternoon, he was fishing for maskinonge, and had seven strikes and landed four nice lunge before five o'clock in the evening. There have been a great many large ones taken this fall—one close to Idyl Wyld weighing 31 pounds, and several 20 and 25 pounds.

Muskrats were very scare this year. He thinks the open season is too long, and that it should be from the 15th March to May 1st, as a muskrat pelt is not prime until the month of April.

He never saw more wild ducks than than there were in Rice Lake last April, and the Game Law is very well observed, as he has not heard of a duck being killed in the spring for a number of years; but he has been told lately that the Indians of Hiawatha have been killing ducks illegally on the rice beds down the lake near Keene.

Black squirrels are quite plentiful, and grouse more so than they have been for years.

Reports from Keene.

Overseer John McFarlane of Keene reports that the fishing has been good on Rice Lake this season, better than in previous years, owing to the scarcity of wild rice, which is due partly to dry, hot weather, and partly to high water, the lake being high since early in June. The water was lower the end of May than at any other time this season, which is due to some work being done to the new locks at Hastings ,the result is that new fishing grounds were opened up, as there was clear water where there used to be large rice beds.

The Fish Laws were well observed this season, there being hardly any illegal fishing done. The farmers living along the shore are anxious to see the law kept; they do not break the law themselves, and they don't want to see others break it and would soon make complaint if there was much of it done.

The mill owners were also careful as to rubbish or sawdust, there being very little sawdust in the river.

Great care should be taken to keep the water up on the lake early in the season to give the spawn a chance to hatch and let the young fry get out to clear water. This season the water was let down at a very bad time, but it may be kept up better now, as the work is done at Hastings.

There were quite a few ducks when the season opened but in two or three days they all left on account of so many hunters, but as it got later on in the fall they got to be plentiful again.

He finds the Game Laws harder to watch than the Fish Laws, as there are so many strangers coming on to the lake as they are not as good at keeping the law as the people living in the locality.

He also finds that the men employed as guides shoot for the men who employ them, which is against the law. They think the guide should be allowed to shoot, and don't know that if they do they are breaking the law. He thinks guides should not be allowed to carry a gun while acting as guides, and if this was added to section 18 they would be sure to understand it, and it would make it easier for the Overseer to enforce the law if only one gun were allowed in the boat when there was a guide employed. Imagine a guide guiding a man and the man shoots at a flock of ducks and misses them, and the guide sits in the boat with a loaded gun in his hand and watches them go by without shooting, and the guide a professional duck hunter.

Also if an Inspector was close by with his back turned, and one or two shots fired he might turn around in time to see the ducks fall, but he would not know which of the men did the shooting.

Most of the people in that locality would like if there was a limited number of ducks for each man, as some of the hunters are not satisfied with a reasonable number. There was not much trouble with blinds, but he is told there was a little Sunday shooting.

A. J. Kent of Bewdley.

Overseer A. J. Kent of Bewdley, reports that very few fish were taken illegally during the spawning season. Sleep was out of the question for a good many nights during that time, and to his knowledge there was only one attempt made to use a jack light. Preparations were being made when he surprised the parties, and they quickly disappeared from the shore.

When the season opened, the maskinonge fishing was not very good on account of so much windy weather, then in midsummer the extremely hot weather came, so that the fishermen confined themselves to bass fishing, which was extra good. In fact there were more bass caught this last season than any two previous seasons that he remembers.

The trappers had a fair catch of muskrat last spring. It is his opinion that the season for trapping those animals should be made shorter, as they are being trapped too closely, altogether.

Ducks have been plentiful this season. There are some large marshes at that end of the lake and the number of black ducks that hatched there last spring was surprising. He came across several nests, but trapping muskrats where the ducks have nests is very annoying to the ducks. In fact a number of black ducks were caught in the traps, and most of them were dead when found. It also keeps the ducks flying too much when they should be on the nests.

The fall ducks were very numerous this season, and on his division there are quite a number of creeks and bays that are good places for shooting. Duck hunters have invaded his territory to quite an extent this season, but they are all welcome as long as they behave themselves; but he does not care very much for those pump guns. They are almost as destructive as the automatic.

Partridge shooting has been very fair, but there are so many hunters that it is hard for any partridge to escape. Every year seems to add numbers to the hunting squad.

Black squirrels are numerous, but in order to protect squirrel and partridge, Game Wardens should be appointed for each township, at a small salary, because he finds that the unpaid Game Wardens are allowing the black squirrels to be killed off in several places, since about the 15th of October. Squirrel hunters do not come around very often; more where the railroads are is where they are to be found, as they can get away on a train to different places.

Lakefield Report.

Overseer F. J. Moore of Lakefield, reports that during the past year the Fishing Laws have been fairly well observed in his division.

The past spring was not very good for fish spawning in the waters of Stony Lake, for the reason that the waters fell very fast after the ice went out.

Tourists have had fairly good luck with rod and spoon this year, as a number of good catches have been made with both bass and maskinonge. He would strongly recommend that Stony Lake be restocked with bass each year, as it is of great importance that the fish supply be kept up in the waters. It is fast becoming a great summer resort for tourists, who come from all parts of the United States, as well as from our own Province, to do their fishing and also to spend their holiday.

He does not think the fishermen would mind paying more for their fishing permits if they had good fishing, as they seem delighted with those waters.

He again says it would be a good thing if some arrangements could be made with the Dominion Government in regard to the rising and falling of the waters of Stony Lake in the spring, and he thinks this could be done without much injury if the matter was taken up. If this could be done a great part of the fish spawn would be saved which is now lost by the falling of the water before the spawn gets to its maturity. He would again suggest that the close season for bass and maskinonge be from the 1st of April till the 15th day of June, as these fish run as soon as the ice disappears.

The Game Laws have been fairly well observed, particularly in regard to deer hunting. Ducks are not very plentiful in his district. Partridge are more plentiful than they have been for some years. Trappers have had a good season, particularly trapping muskrats. Mink are very scarce.

He would again suggest that the carrying of firearms be prohibited in that district during the close season, if it could be done, as there are so many people on the water in the summer. It is very dangerous and there is no necessity for it. If this could be done, it would put a stop to some parties killing ducks before the season opens, and he thinks it would be better for all tourists and cottagers.

Harwood Report.

Overseer W. H. Johnson, of Harwood, reports that the law regarding fishing in his district has been fairly well observed, no illegal fishing having come to his notice, although he is under the impression fish is disposed of, but it is done in such a way one cannot do anything. No jack lighting was done in his district.

The water in Rice Lake fell very fast in spawnig season, and left a great deal of spawn in the marshes to perish. Maskinonge fishing has been good and a number of large ones were caught—28 pounds and over. Black Bass fishing has been splendid this season, but yellow bass not so good.

Quite a number of tourists visited Rice Lake, but not so many Americans as usual, and all were pleased with their success in taking fish.

He would suggest that winter fishing through the ice be prohibited; also a close season for frogs, as they should be protected same as other game; and if shippers of frogs take out a license.

The Game Law has been very well observed. No illegal trapping. Muskrats were not so plentiful last spring and it would be a great benefit to have trapping stopped not later than the 20th April, as it would be a great protection to fish in spawning season. Ducks are not so plentiful this fall.

Partridge are becoming scarce. He thinks they are shot off too closely, and would suggest a close season for three years and afterwards an open season of only two weeks.

From Hastings.

Overseer Edward Fleming of Hastings, reports that the Fish and Game laws were well observed in Hastings and on the River Trent as far down as the Narrows; that there were a number of large fish caught—not many in Hastings Village, as work was going on at the canal and the old dam was all take away, and the fish did not come up to Hastings dam.

He has seen more duck than usual this fall, although there has not been so much shooting.

J. H. Hess of Hastings.

Overseer J. H. Hess of Hastings, reports that the law has been well observed in his territory from Trent Bridge to Rice Lake and that the fishing has been the best in several years and the quality of bass and maskinonge has been far above the average in size. Just at Hastings the fishing has not been good, the reason is on account of the construction of the dam and locks, which necessitate a considerable amount of blasting and dredging. There was very little, if any, illegal fishing done during the close season. The people are beginning to see that it is necessary for them to preserve the fish in close season if they expect to have good fishing when the season opens.

Regarding game and fur-bearing animals the law has been quite well observed, but he would recommend that the season for trapping muskrats and mink be changed, and the season be from the 15th day of October until the 30th day of March, as from information which he has gathered, he is convinced that in April they should be protected.

Bass Fingerlings.

The number of bass fingerlings placed in Stony Lake and Big Cedar Lake last year was 10,000; in Gull Lake 3,000, and in Fairy Lake 5,000. Capt. Carson logged 5,080 miles during the season from April 24 to October 18th.

BIRTHS.

Ready-to-wear Garments

As Featured in the Formal Exhibition of Spring Fashions

New Exclusive Moderately Priced

See Window Displays

"Words of Praise"

were heard yesterday and to-day on every side from hundreds of fashion lovers who visited the Ready-to-wear department in connection with our Formal Exhibition of Spring Fashions.

The "words of praise" were truly well merited for seldom will one find newer, or nattier modes than are at present assembled in our garment section. Never have ready-to-wears been so distinctly fetching, so attractive or possessing such an abundance of smart, snappy style as is this season given expression in exclusive gowns, suits, coats and dresses. Beautifully rich gowns for social functions and dress occasions—trim, tailored suits for street wear—full length swagger coats that are indispensable to the completion of the feminine wardrobe—smart, cloth dresses in every desirable colour—and charming blouses to supply every want will be found here in a wealth of new and original treatment.

Newness and Exclusiveness are the predominating features of this magnificent assemblage and the moderate prices at which they have been marked will create a favorable impression on all who view the showing.

C. N. R. To Spend $8,000,000 In Its Work At Montreal

A sketch of the official plans providing for its entrance into the city gives accurate impression of the ambitious programme that the Canadian Northern Railway has completed already, and the work that lies before it still. Five thousand acres of land have been purchased at a cost of nearly five million dollars, while the lots and buildings that have been secured in Montreal bring the value of the real estate it has purchased for its entrance into the city near the $8,000,000 mark. In the rear of Mount Royal 1,700 acres of its holdings have been arranged by Mr. Frederick G. Todd into the model garden city of America, but 3,300 acres remain untouched.

The C.N.R. enters the Island of Montreal across the Back River, near the C.P.R.; then runs in a southeasterly direction to a point about one-quarter of a mile west of the new convent near the C.P.R. tracks. There it enters into the ground, passes beneath Mount Royal, coming from the mountain a little northwest of McGill University, emerging into daylight again after three miles of underground route at Lagauchetiere street. From that point it runs southeast to the harbour on elevated tracks, a freight station being provided at Haymarket square.

Steam as a motive power will not be used after the line crosses into Montreal, but electric motors of the most approved style will haul the trains to the Dorchester street terminal. Shops for the repair of cars and motors, and a plant for the generation of power will be erected near the entrance into the island, while a freight yard is planned just west of Bois Franche road.

Mr. H. K. Wicksteed, chief engineer for surveys for the C.N.R., is the authority for the statement that there will be a sub-station one-half a mile from the C.P.R. yards in Outremont, this station being called Northmount. Another is likely to be at St. Catherine road, while the main one will be where the two eighty-foot diagonal boulevards intersect in the new city. At St. Catherine road the line will be 600 feet beneath the surface, while at Sherbrooke street it will be but eighty feet underground, and at St. Catherine street but fifty feet.

Mr. S. J. Thomas, who is interested in the model city, will be at the Oriental Hotel for a few days and will be pleased to give information to anyone who would like to learn more about the work of the C.N.R. at Montreal.

Ill-Health And Success

Is ill-health in the way of your success? Do you lack the energy and vitality, the red blood which is necessary to good health and success in life? What have you done to overcome this condition? For it can be overcome by a little patient treatment.

There are combined in Dr. Chase's Nerve Food the elements which go to form new, rich blood. By using this food cure regularly you increase the quality and quantity of blood in the body. The wasted nerves feed on this rich blood and become revitalized. Mind and body regain snap, vim, energy and all that accompanies health and strength.

Nervous headache and indigestion, nervous prostration and exhaustion give way when this great restorative treatment is used to put new health and vigour into the blood.

BOATMEN IN LINDSAY.

AN ENJOYABLE SOCIAL EVENING

A very successful social evening was held under the auspices of the S. O. E. in the S. O. E. Hall, Hunter street, last evening.

Various pastimes were indulged in, including carpet bowls, bagatelle, cards dominoes, checkers, etc., and a very enjoyable evening was spent. Mr. John Williams presided. In addition to the above there was a fine musical programme. During the interval refreshments were served.

The programme was as follows:

Pianoforte overture—Mr. F. Howarth.
Song—Mr. G. Deakin.
Song—Mrs. Wells.
Recitation—Miss M. Moss.
Song—Mr. J. Simonite.
Song—Mr. H. Carte.
Song—Mr. B. Barton.

It is anticipated that the success of the evening will result in an increase in the membership of the Society.

BIG ROLL CALL

The annual roll call, held at the Murray Street Baptist church, last night, was notable in two ways. In the first place it was the last roll-call that will be held in the old church, and in the second, it was marked by the largest attendance ever present at a roll-call in the history of the congregation.

Only teas grown at an elevation of 5,000 feet are used in "Salada," thus making it richer, more fragrant, and infinitely more delicious than other teas.

SHE GAINED 8 LBS.

Mrs. George Bradshaw, Harlowe, Ont., writes: "I was troubled for many years with weak, watery blood and dropsy. I had nervous headaches, dizziness, and sinking spells, and was, in fact, a semi-invalid. Doctors told me my heart and kidneys were diseased and gave me up. By using 10 boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I have been cured of many of my old complaints and gained 25 pounds in weight."

PRESENTATION TO REV. PERRY

The Hamilton Spectator says:

Rev. T. H. Perry, who has been Curate of the Church of the Ascension for the past two and one-half years, is leaving the city early this week for Halifax, having been appointed Rector of St. Matthias' church in that city.

During last week he was the recipient of various testimonials of esteem from all the different organizations of the church and on Saturday afternoon he was invited to the Tudor Inn, where a representative gathering of the men of the congregation met to testify to the esteem in which Mr. Perry was held by them.

Canon Wade, who acted as chairman, told of his pleasant relationship with Mr. Perry and wished him success in his new work. Adam Brown, on behalf of the men of the congregation, presented Mr. Perry with a purse of gold, and expressed, as only Mr. Brown can, the appreciation of Mr. Perry's good work among them. J. A. Henderson said that the general opinion was that the new responsibilities would develop Mr. Perry's undoubted ability, and that he was leaving Hamilton with the cordial wishes of all his associates in the Church of the Ascension.

Rev. Mr. Perry formerly assisted Rev. Dr. Lahgfeldt at St. Luke's and has many friends in Peterborough, and the surrounding country.

FIRE HALL MASCOT DISPOSED OF

He was an Irish, wire-haired terrier of creditable descent and was purchased for the men of the brigade from Mr. Dumble when only one month old. Growing up among the men, he shared in their battles, and has had many exciting experiences, having been run over repeatedly by various vehicles. Once he was seriously injured by the hose wagon and it was deemed advisable to have him destroyed. The police were summoned to shoot poor Davey, but on their arrival hey, presto! he had disappeared as if by second sight he anticipated danger.

But recently he has developed a somewhat domineering spirit, and took a fancy to a portion of a man's wearing apparel. Some time ago also he tore a piece out of the coat of Mr. L. M. Hayes. Hence the reason for his being shot by the police this morning, and Davey will no longer grace the doorway of the Fire Hall.

WILL BEAT IT FOR MADOC

"Thank you," said Benjamin Hobson fervently, as he stepped out of the dock with nothing worse than "suspended sentence" to mark the occasion of his presence in the police court: He was charged with being drunk and disorderly, in addition to being a vagrant.

Hobson stated that he had a good home in Madoc and would only be too glad of the privilege to get there as soon as possible.

The magistrate ordered him home. "You can give me a year if you find me inside of a hotel to-day," said Hobson as he beat a hasty retreat.

Strikes In February

The strike situation in Canada continues, on the whole, favourable, according to the latest reports of the Department of Labour. Few disputes of importance occurred during February, the one affecting most employees being that of the cloak and garment workers in the employ of T. Eaton Company, Toronto and Montreal. About 600 employees were affected by this dispute. Altogether, there were twelve strikes in existence during February, affecting about 50 firms and 1,900 employees. The loss of time in working days was approximately 10,000, compared with 12,000 days lost from the same cause during January, and over 32,000 days lost in February, 1911. Eight strikes remained in existence at the close of the month.

According to the record of industrial accidents kept by the Department of Labour, 61 persons were killed and 178 injured during February, 1912. This record compares very favourably with that of January, when 86 workmen were killed and 214 injured. Compared with February 1911, the record is still more favourable, as 93 were killed and 197 injured in that month. The worst disaster of the past month was the premature explosion of dynamite on construction work near Fort Frances, Ont., on the line of the Canadian Northern Railway, by which 13 construction hands were killed and six others seriously injured.

For Saturday Only

STAGE LOVE LIKE STAGE MONEY

Edward J. Bowes, the young Seattle man who recently married Margaret Illington, the actress, declares he is never troubled with jealousy when he sits in a box at the theatre and sees some dashing young hero making love to his wife on the stage.

"Stage love-making," he said, "is like stage money. It isn't a whit more real. Real lovers would have no part in the stage, for the reality would hamper them.

"When the actor puts some wood in the stove, he doesn't actually build a fire. It is the electric light inside the stove that passes for the fire. If the actor was to find a real blaze, it would seriously hamper his acting."

Miss Illington, who a few years ago caused some little comment when she retired from the stage because she wanted to "darn her husband's socks and tend a baby," but who later divorced the aforesaid husband (Daniel Frohman), and then married Bowes, whose socks she may or may not darn at present, interrupted at this point.

"Why, a husband would be silly," she said, "to become jealous of his wife because she took part in a love scene on the stage. Stage love-making is not real. I have a most positive aversion to stage kisses. In 'The Thief,' for example, I never once kissed my stage husband, though I felt all I did for him."

And right here the actress changed her subject and gave a dig at the "temperament" folks. "That enigmatical something called temperament," she said, "is just an excuse for following our own desires. It is frequently used as a lash to make our associates do things our own way. Life is too short for needless unhappiness. If everyone in the world would try to make some other being happy, the result would be amazing."

PERSONAL AND SOCIAL

Mrs. T. C. Elliot, McDonnel street, will not receive again this season.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Orchard left for Rochester to-day after spending a week with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. Noyes of Concession street.

Mrs. R. McGill Hood, her son Archie, Miss Jennie Browne, Mr. R. A. Browne, and Mr. J. G. Browne, were in town from Peterborough, also attending the late Mrs. Morrison's funeral, who was an aunt of the visitors.—Warder.

A regrettably incorrect paragraph, in which the name of Mr. E. H. D. Hall appeared, was printed in this column of yesterday's Examiner. The error was due to misunderstanding of a telephone conversation.

OBITUARY

ANTHONY McMANUS.

There passed away last evening Anthony McManus, a well-known resident of Douro.

The deceased gentleman was 67 years of age and was born on the farm on which he died, residing thereon all his life. He was well-known and respected in the vicinity where his death is generally regretted.

The funeral will take place to-morrow morning. The funeral cortege will leave the late residence of the deceased, second concession of Douro and proceed to St. Joseph's Church, Douro, and from thence to St. Joseph's cemetery, Douro, for interment.

THE DOG IN THE MANGER

(Short Story.)

BY J. R. REHAM.

There was a curious expression in Robert Shalford's eyes as he opened the door of Harold Compton's room, entered and locked it behind him. "Hello!" exclaimed Harold in surprise. "What's up—and what have you locked the door for?"

"I've just come from Margaret," replied Shalford slowly. "I got her by herself to—to ask her to be my wife, and—and—"

"Ah!"

"And she informed me that an hour ago you had forestalled me, and that she had accepted you." Harold regarded the man he had outstripped in the race for Margaret's hand with an air of puzzled curiosity. They were clerks in the same office, they lived in the same boarding house, and now they had fallen in love with the same girl—the landlady's charming daughter Margaret.

"I am sorry," he said. "It's rough luck on you."

"I don't want your sympathy, Compton." His voice was quite expressionless, listless almost. "You have got to give her up. You have always been my rival. At the office you have walked over me, but in this matter you shall not walk over me. She has chosen; but that is not my point. My point is, that if I can't have her, you shan't."

His tone was still dull and expressionless, but his eyes were blazing with jealousy and hate. "That's rather the attitude of the dog in the manger, isn't it?" asked Compton, glancing uneasily at the locked door.

"Exactly."

"I suppose you are going to produce a revolver and threaten to murder me?" he said, measuring his man with his eyes.

"Not quite. I haven't bought the revolver yet, but I am going to buy one.

"I see. This is a warning."

"Yes, a warning. As I said before, if I can't have her, you shan't, and neither shall any one else. I shall serve you all alike."

"Don't be so ridiculous, so absurdly melodramatic, you idiot!" snapped Compton, losing his temper. "Do you think I am to be frightened into giving up my life's happiness? Go to bed, you jealous fool, and you'll think better of this in the morning. Open that door."

"Not till I have made everything clear. This is the plan: If you won't give her up I shall wait my time and opportunity and shoot you like a dog."

"Rubbish. Stuff and nonsense. If I thought you were responsible for what you are saying I should send for the police."

"You can if you like, and when I have served my sentence for threatening bodily harm, or whatever they call it, I shall spend the rest of my life hunting you down. I'm quite prepared to swing for you, Compton, if you marry Margaret. And if you marry her while I am in prison, by heavens, I'll shoot her too."

"What you want is a jolly good licking," said Compton ferociously. "That would knock the nonsense out of you." He rose, and Shalford made a dart for the fireplace and seized the poker. But his voice and his manner still remained unnaturally calm. "I've thought it all out," he said. "I've thought of everything, and I'm ready for you at all points. I won't bother you with the details, but you can't escape me, and, if necessary, you shall both die."

He took the key out of his pocket and unlocked the door. Compton rushed forward while he was thus engaged, wrenched the poker out of his hand, shook him like a rat, and then kicked him out of the room and slammed the door.

Compton heard him pick himself up and return to his room, heard some one call out to know if anything was the matter, and heard Shalford reply, "No; I only slipped on the landing."

"Jealous, melodramatic ass," murmured Compton to himself. Then he got into bed, and was soon fast asleep. But in the morning, when he went downstairs, specially early—he who usually appeared at breakfast five minutes late—to steal a few moments with his sweetheart, he found Margaret pale and nervous, and when he held her in his arms he felt her trembling.

"What do you keep looking over your shoulder for?" he asked.

"I thought perhaps Mr. Shalford might be down early for once," she said.

"Shalford? Ah." He flung his arm protectingly round her. "I think I know what is the matter, dear," he whispered tenderly. "Tell me, please, all that he said last night."

She told him, and he found that Shalford had said to her very much what he had said to him. "Don't let it worry you," he said, comfortingly. "Don't you worry, dear. Never mind what he said. He was upset last night. He will probably be more reconciled to his loss this morning. Poor chap." He beat down and kissed her. "I can't bear to think how terrible it would have been if you had refused me instead of him. That's what makes me able to understand him, darling."

But a night's reflection had apparently made no difference to Shalford's attitude. At breakfast he spoke never a word to a soul. Watching him furtively at the office, Compton saw that his eyes were often fixed meaningly on him. When he came in from lunch he walked over to Compton's desk.

"See," he said, exhibiting a new revolver, "that's for emergencies." And he passed on to his own desk without another word. Compton, sane young man though he was, felt genuinely alarmed. The fool did mean it then. He was mad, of course, mad on that one point—jealous mad. That explained the peculiar expression in his eye, and that made the case so difficult to deal with. He was quite sane on all other points, and no doctor could certify him as mad, for Shalford would see through the intention at once, and be cunning enough to frustrate it by denying that he ever meant really to do it. It would be foolish also to send him to prison for threatening to shoot for he was just the kind of chap to brood secretly over the matter while he was there and come out more determined than ever.

The whole thing was ridiculous. It was absurd that he and Margaret should be terrorised like this, but what could he do? There was no doubt that Shalford meant what he had threatened, and though it would be easy enough to give him in charge, that would not dispose of the difficulty about the future.

Compton began to feel very unhappy. The dog in the manger looked like coming between him and his love, for, though he was ready enough to take the risk himself, he did not feel, as a lover, that he could expose Margaret to the risk of being shot by a madman. He had read enough to know that ten years, twenty years, hence this "fixed idea" would still rule the man's life unless he could somehow knock it out of his head, once and for all, before it got too strong a hold upon him.

Very quietly Harold Compton stole into Shalford's bedroom, and found him sleeping soundly and the room in darkness. Shutting the door behind him, he noisily struck a match and lit the gas. Shalford started up.

"Here," he cried. "What's this?"

"Keep still. Lie down again," said Compton, pointing a revolver at his head. Shalford turned pale.

"Wh—what are you going to do?" he gasped.

"Wait and see. Where is that revolver you bought to shoot me with? Quick! If you don't tell me at three, I fire. One, two——"

Shalford pointed to the chest of drawers and Compton strode across the room and took possession of the weapon. "Same cartridges as mine," he remarked, loading it, and then added: "I warn you, I am desperate. If you call out, it is a hundred to one that nobody will hear; but if you do call out, I fire."

"Wh—what are you going to do?" faltered Shalford.

"I'm going to arrange a very neat and picturesque suicide for you." He pulled some stout cord out of his pocket as he spoke. "You see," he went on," you have come between me and happiness. I acknowledge that you have me cornered, so I propose to take the only possible way out—to get rid of you, and arrange things in such a manner that people will think you committed suicide because of your disappointment in love."

"Compton, look here——"

"Don't say you'll give her up, because I shan't believe you. I shall regard it as only a trick to get out of this present exceedingly tight place you are in. Keep still. Keep very still, Shalford." As he was speaking, he proceeded to bind the man's hands and arms, and to lash them to the bedpost above his head. "You see," he went on, "you are desperate, and so am I. Therefore, one of us has got to go."

Making a gag he stuffed it in his victim's mouth, and then proceeded to lash Shalford's own revolver to the top of the bedpost at the foot of the bed, with the muzzle pointed downwards directly at him where he lay. Smiling, he proceeded to tie a piece of cord round Shalford's toe, and attached the other end to the trigger of the revolver. "See the idea?" he asked pleasantly. "I shall give your leg a jerk, bang! will go the revolver, and then I shall whip off your gag and your bonds, and pretend that I was the first to reach your room, and be most horribly distressed at such a ghastly, determined way of committing suicide. I shall explain to them all: 'He couldn't make up his mind to pull the trigger, so hit upon this way—kicked it off in his sleep. I expect it will make rather a stir, Shalford. There. Everything is ready!"

Shalford's condition was pitiable, for his eyes were almost bulging out of his head, and great beads of perspiration stood upon his forehead. "Here goes," said Compton, taking hold of his leg. "One, two, three—now!" and he gave the leg a quick, strong jerk.

"Bang!" went the revolver, and Compton whipped off the bonds and the gag, just as he heard footsteps in the passage. "It's all right," he said, opening the door and peeping out. "Go back to bed. I was playing with Shalford's revolver, but nobody is hurt. You can't come in because Shalford's in bed." Then he returned to his victim, and gazed at him with obvious anxiety; but just as he was beginning to be really alarmed, and to think he had gone too far, the man came to.

"I'm sorry," said Compton, "I was an ass. I loaded the thing with a blank cartridge by mistake. Now you'll have to go through the whole thing again." Shalford, verging on absolute collapse, feebly moved his arms in protest.

"Mercy! mercy!" he gasped, as Compton made as if to place the gag into his mouth again. "I'll swear never to interfere with you again. I take back my threat. I—I wouldn't marry her for worlds. For heaven's sake, don't be such a fiend."

"Very well," said Compton, sternly. "I've messed things a bit, and people in consequence would become suspicious, so I'll give you one more chance. Swear. Give me your solemn oath, and if you break it, I shall have no mercy on you."

Tremblingly Shalford promised, and Compton went back to bed, satisfied that he had frightened the coward.

DANE NEW MASTER

T. & N. O. Commissioner is Head of Orange Lodge

PYNE MAKES A SPEECH

London, Ont., March 15.—Fred. Dane of Toronto was elected Grand Master of the Orange Grand Lodge of Ontario West at the closing session last night by acclamation. Dr. Williams of Woodstock was elected Deputy Grand Master and H. C. Hocken of Toronto second deputy.

The passing of resolutions against bilingual schools and the ne temere decree, which were presented by the legislation committee, under Col. Scott, made up the principal business of the afternoon. The resolution respecting ne temere expressed satisfaction on the part of the grand lodge that the Federal Government had done what the order desired the Provincial Government to do, namely, to have the courts pass upon the ne temere decree, and the resolution further expressed the hope that only the Dominion Parliament should have the power of dissolving marriages.

An emphatic protest against "special privileges" in the matter of bilingual schools was voiced in that resolution, which was adopted after a lively discussion. It declared that the Ontario Government cannot compel obseerbance of the law as long as there is "one loophole for the use of French in schools."

The resolution was brought in by Lieut.-Col. J. H. Scott of Walkerton and seconded by Controller H. C. Hocken of Toronto. A similar resolution will come before the grand lodge of Eastern Ontario in Kingston next Wednesday.

Hon. Dr. Pyne, who delivered a strong address, declared it was the desire of the Government to make English the language of the province. That was the purpose of the Department of Education in having prepared the exhaustive report of Dr. Merchant on the bilingual question. All were agreed that Ontario should remain English-speaking. Dr. Pyne also favored better-paid teachers, made responsible to the Government.

An address was given by Hon. Jas. Duff, who expressed opinions practically supporting all that Dr. Pyne had said.

GIANT POWER TRUST.

U. S. Investigator Reports on Electrical Conditions.

Washington, March 15.—Startling statements respecting the water powers of the United States and their domination by a huge trust are contained in a special report to the President by Herbert Knox Smith, commissioner of corporations, made public here yesterday. The report denounces as the merest guesswork many semi-official computations heretofore made as to the amount of electrical energy susceptible of generation from the water powers of the country. The highest possible amount which can be generated in the U. S., according to Mr. Smith, is 25,000,000 horse-power. At the present there is being generated in the U. S. for commercial use about 3,000,000 horse-power, being about 10 per cent. of the total stationery power produced by steam, water and gas combined. Of the 3,000,000 horse-power of electrical energy now being generated 1,800,000 horse-power, or 60 per cent., is controlled by the electric trust. This trust is composed of ten large groups headed by the General Electric Co. They control between them, in addition to the power now being developed, undeveloped water powers to the extent of 1,449,000 horse-power and municipal lighting plants, city street car systems, city gas plants and radial railways in great number.

These groups have seized nearly every strategic point in the eighteen sates in which water powers abound.

In California six great power corporations, of which the most important is the Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (with 118,343 horse-power), together control 375,000 horse-power, over 86 per cent. of all the developed water power in the state.

In Washington two companies control 210,000 horse-power, or about 70 per cent. of all developed water power.

In South Carolina the Southern Power Co. owns about 101,000 horse-power, or 75 per cent. of the total commercially developed, with 73,000 horse-power undeveloped.

In the Southern Peninsula of Michigan the Commonwealth Power, Railway & Light Co. controls 52,000 horse-power, or 73 per cent. of the commercially developed, together with probably 71,000 horse-power undeveloped.

Practically similar conditions exist in Montana, Colorado, Georgia, and Niagara Falls.

Provincial Health Bill

Toronto, March 15.—With provision made for the division of the province into not more than ten health districts and the appointment of a legally qualified medical practitioner to be known as the district officer of health for each district, the bill revising the Public Health Act was introduced in the Legislature yesterday by Hon. W. J. Hanna.

Centralization of power, and that centre the Provincial Board of Health with offices at the Parliament Buildings, is the chief feature of the health act in its revised form.

The new clause referring to the powers of the chief officer and members of the Provincial Board states that these officials shall possess all the powers conferred upon a medical officer of health, and the officers of the local board by the act or by the regulations.

Cities of 50,000 population or over, according to the last census, shall not be included in any one of the districts. These cities already have competent medical health officers.

Every district officers of health under the regulations of the new bill shall be paid an annual salary not exceeding $2,500, and an allowance of $1,000 for expenses. Such salary and allowance shall be payable in the first instance out of the consolidated revenue fund.

To defray a part at least of the cost of the new officers, the council of every part of a health district shall annually, on or before the first day of February, pay to the Provincial Treasurer such proportion of the salary and allowance of the district officer of health based upon the population of the county according to the last census of Canada and exclusive of the population of any city or separated town within the county, as may be certified by the chief officer.

Where communicable diseases exist in any boarding school or other institution where students are received for tuition the head of the institution shall immediately isolate the patient and within twelve hours after the disease is known to exist shall notify the medical officer of health. Medical health officers will have a measure of control over the meat sold in the markets of the municipality where he has authority and he can insist on finding out from the vendor where the meat came from. The M. H. O. may refuse a local license in case he is not satisfied with the information given on or with the origin of the meat supply.

No isolation hospital can be established by a municipality until the plans for such hospital are approved by the Provincial Board of Health.

The corporation of every municipality shall enter into an agreement with the medical officer of health or some other legally qualified medical practitioner, resident in the municipality, for his medical attendance upon patients who are unable through poverty to pay for the necessary attendance and who are not cared for in a public or private hospital.

The medical officer of health shall be the executive officer of the local board, and with the local board shall be responsible for the carrying out of the provisions of this act and of the regulation of the bylaws of the municipality.

An annual conference of the medical officers of health will be held at such time and place as may be determined by the provincial board.

Oratorical flourishes marked the budget speech debate which stretched into the night at the Legislature yesterday. Although impossible to finish up by Easter the House worked after lark for the first time this session. The back-benchers were given a chance to unlimber their vocal artillery. Lively this happened now and then. Sir James Whitney and W. N. Sinclair had a set-to when the Premier declared that the much-talked-of telegram to the Elk Lake regions containing an election eve promise of a railroad was a forgery.

DEMANDS BOUNTIES

W. F. Cockshutt, of Brantford, Revolts Against Leaders

VERVILLE FOR LOWER TAX

Ottawa, March 15.—"When a man is drowning it is not a time to investigate, it is a time to save him, and after you have done so, find out how he got there," declared W. F. Cockshutt (Brantford), who strongly protested in the House of Commons last evening against the absence from the budget speech of any announcement of a renewal of the steel bounties. It would seem, he said, that the steel industry had fared better at the hands of a so-called free trade Government than it would at the hands of a so-called protectionist Government.

The budget was adopted at midnight without a division.

Alphonse Verville (Maisonneuve), who resumed the debate, devoted his energies for an hour and a half to a denunciation of the wicked policy of protection under which there had grown up in Canada 39 combinations and trusts. Instead of spending $10,000,000 of the $39,000,000 surplus on the navy, as suggested by the member for South York (W. F. Maclean), it should be devoted to lowering taxation.

Andrew Broder (Dundas) declared that the 39 combinations and trusts that the hon. gentleman had spoken about must surely have sprung up since Sept. 21; otherwise such a shrewd, observant gentleman would surely have protested against them long ago. If an evil existed it was a legacy from hon. gentlemen opposite.

Hon. Frank Oliver said that the trusts had grown up during the last few years, but he argued that this was a condition that had grown naturally out of the progress of the country, and for which that Government was not responsible, but with which it was dealing in the reciprocity pact.

He declared emphatically that the tariff legislation of the present Government, when it was brought down would be found to be framed in the interests of the combines.

"You'd better wait till it happens," called out F. B. Lalor (Haldimand).

W. F. Cockshutt (Brantford) expressed regret that no mention had been made in the budget of steel bounties. The very point expected had been missed. It was an anomaly that the steel industry had fared better at the hands of a so-called free trade Government than it seemed it was to receive from a so-called protectionist Government.

"When a man is drowning it is not a time to investigate; it is a time to save him, and after you have done so find out how he got there," said Mr. Cockshutt. The bounties should have been renewed, and then if it were found out later that they were not wanted they could be taken away. The cost was estimated at about $2,000,000.

"This Government was elected largely on the ground that it was protectionist Government. I am not ashamed of being a protectionist," he said.

The excess of imports over exports Mr. Cockshutt declared to be a danger to Canada. There was an unfavorable balance of $175,000,000 which had to be paid for in cash. Of this $165,000,000 had gone to the United States in the last year. He declared himself for protection for both the manufacturer and the farmer.

"The longer you hammer away at reciprocity," he said to the Opposition, "the longer you'll stay on that side of the House. We're glad to have you talk reciprocity." Not trade more with the United States, but trade more with the Mother Country should be the aim of Canada. A mutual tariff preference was coming, and it would come under a Canadian Premier of Britain—Bonar Law. Free trade was put forward by Cobden to fracture the Empire.

Before the orders of the day were called Hon. F. D. Monk announced that H.R.H. the Princess Louise had presented to the Government, through the Governor-General, a valuable oil painting of the Duke of Kent, the grandfather of King George, by Sir William Beechey.

warden Brockbank Resigns.

A Talk On Bifocal Lenses

I used to shy at bifocals. My patients usually came back and made such a fuss that I had often to keep the peace, to take back the glasses and give two pairs instead, one for near and the other for distance. But I have learned by experience and study of the subject, and I never hesitate any more, for it is all a matter of the adjustment. Even with the adjustment just right, there are a few who come back but never despair. I just take another glance, or a few glances, at the glasses, and usually I find it is the adjustment after all. It takes time for many people to get used to looking through segments, but sensible people are willing to allow for this, but when they are afraid of is the danger of an eastbeast in going up and down stairs. To remedy this the segments must be set low, so low that the edges, when looking down slightly, are below the bottom edge of the pupils of the eye. Of course, this means that in reading the eyes must be dropped quite low, which is a trick to be learned, but once learned there is no more trouble in using bifocals.

We carry all the different kinds of bifocal lenses, including the Franklin Invisible Kryptok. Ask for booklet describing them.

"INITIALS ONLY"

BY ANNA KATHARINE GREENE

"Of Brotherson himself I saw nothing. He had come to Mr. Conway's apartment the night before—the night of Miss Challoner's death, you understand—but had remained only long enough to change his clothes. Where he went afterwards is unknown to Mr. Conway, nor can he tell us when to look for his return. When he does show up, my message will be given him, etc., etc. I have no fault to find with Mr. Conway.

"But I had an idea in regard to this elusive Brotherson. I had heard enough about him to be mighty sure that together with his other accomplishments he possessed the golden tongue and easy speech of an orator. Also, that his tendencies were revolutionary and that for all his fine clothes and hankering after table luxuries and the like, he cherished a spite against wealth which made his words under certain moods cut like a knife. But there was another man, known to us of the —— Precinct, who had very nearly these same gifts, and this man was going to speak at a secret meeting that very evening. This we had been told by a disgruntled member of the Associated Brotherhood. Suspecting Brotherson, I had this prospective speaker described, and thought I recognized my man. But I wanted to be positive in my identification, so I took Anderson with me, and—but I'll cut that short. We didn't see the orator and that 'go' went for nothing; but I had another string to my bow in the shape of the workman Dunn who also answered to the description which had been given me; so I lugged poor Anderson over into Hicks Street.

"It was late for the visit I proposed, but not too late, if Dunn was also the orator who, surprised by a raid I had not been let into, would be making for his home, if only to establish an alibi. The subway was near, and I calculated on his using it, but we took a taxicab and so arrived in Hicks Street some few minutes before him. The result you know. Anderson recognized the man as the one whom he saw washing his hands in the snow outside of the Clermont, and the man, seeing himself discovered, owned himself to be Brotherson and made no difficulty about accompanying us the next day to the coroner's office.

"You have heard how he bore himself; what his explanations were and how completely they fitted in with the preconceived notions of the Inspector and the District Attorney. In consequence, Miss Challoner's death is looked upon as a suicide—the impulsive act of a woman who sees the man she may have scouted but whom she secretly loves, turn away from her in all probability for ever. A weapon was in her hand—she impulsively used it ,and another deplorable suicide was added to the melancholy list. Had I put in my oar at the conference held in the coroner's office; had I recalled to Dr. Heath the curious case of Mrs. Spotts, and then identified Brotherson as the man whose window fronted hers from the opposite tenement, a diversion might have been created and the outcome been different. But I feared the experiment. I am not sufficiently in with the Chief as yet, nor yet with the Inspector. They might not have called me a fool—you may; but that's different—and they might have listened, but it would doubtless have been with an air I could not have held up against, with that fellow's eyes fixed mockingly on mine. For he and I are pitted for a struggle, and I do not want to give him the advantage of even a momentary triumph. He's the most complete master of himself of any man I ever met, and it will take the united brain and resolution of the whole force to bring him to book—if he ever is brought to book, which I doubt. What do you think about it?"

"That you have given me an antidote against old age," was the ringing and unexpected reply, as the thoughtful, half-puzzled aspect of the old man yielded impulsively to a burst of his early enthusiasm. "If we can get a good grip on the thread you speak of, and can work ourselves along by it, though it be by no more than an inch at a time, we shall yet make our way through this labyrinth of undoubted crime and earn for ourselves a triumph which will make some of these raw and inexperienced young fellows about us stare. Sweetwater, coincidences are possible. We run upon them every day. But coincidence in crime! that should make work for a detective, and we are not afraid of work. There's my hand for my end of the business."

"And here's mine."

Next minute the two heads were closer than ever together, and the business had begun.

CHAPTER XIII.
TIME, CIRCUMSTANCE, AND A VILLAIN'S HEART.

"Our first difficulty is this. We must prove motive. Now, I do not think it will be so very hard to show that this Brotherson cherished feelings of revenge towards Miss Challoner. But I have to acknowledge right here and now that the most skilful and vigorous pumping of the janitor and such other tenants of the Hicks Street tenement as I have dared to approach, fails to show that he has ever held any communication with Mrs. Spotts, or even knew of her existence until her remarkable death attracted his attention. I have spent all the afternoon over this, and with no result. A complete break in the chain at the very start."

"Humph! we will set that down, then, as so much against us."

"The next, and this is a bitter pill too, is the almost insurmountable difficulty already recognized of determining how a man, without approaching his victim, could manage to inflict a mortal stab in her breast. No cloak of complete invisibility has yet been found, even by the cleverest criminals."

"True. The problem is such as a nightmare offers. For years my dreams have been haunted by a gnome who proposes just such puzzles."

"But there's an answer to everything, and I'm sure there's an answer to this. Remember his business. He's an inventor, with startling ideas. So much I've seen for myself. You may stretch probabilities a little in his case; and with this conceded, we may add by way of off-set to the difficulties you mention, coincidences of time and circumstance, and his villainous heart. Oh, I know that I am prejudiced; but wait and see! Miss Challoner was well rid of him, even at the cost of her life."

"She loved him. Even her father believes that now. Some lately discovered letters have come to light to prove that she was by no means so heart free as she supposed. One of her friends, it seems, has also confided to him that once, while she and Miss Challoner were sitting together, she caught Miss Challoner in the act of scribbling capitals over a sheet of paper. They were all B.'s with the exception of here and there a neatly turned O., and when her friend twitted her with her fondness for these two letters, and suggested a pleasing monogram, Miss Challoner answered, 'O.B. (transferring the letters, as you see) are the initials of the finest man in the world.'"

"Gosh! has he heard this story?"

"Who?"

"The gentleman in question."

"Mr. Brotherson?"

"Yes."

"I don't think so. It was told me in confidence."

"Told you, Mr. Gryce? Pardon my curiosity."

"By Mr. Challoner."

"Oh! by Mr. Challoner."

"He is greatly distressed at having the disgraceful suggestion of suicide attached to his daughter's name. Notwithstanding the circumstances—notwithstanding his full recognition of her secret predilection for a man of whom he had never heard till the night of her death, he cannot believe that she struck the blow she did, intentionally. He sent for me in order to inquire if anything could be done to reinstate her in public opinion. He dared not insist that another had wielded the weapon which laid her low so suddenly, but he asked if, in my experience, it had never been known that a woman, hyper-sensitive to some strong man's magnetic influence, should so follow his thought as to commit an act which never could have arisen in her own mind, uninfluenced. He evidently does not like Brotherson either."

"And what—what did you—say?" asked Sweetwater, with a halting utterance and his face full of thought.

"I simply quoted the latest authority on hypnotism, that no person even in hypnotic sleep could be influenced by another to do what was antagonistic to his natural instincts."

"Latest authority. That doesn't mean a final one. Supposing that it was hypnotism! But that wouldn't account for Mrs. Spotts' death. Her wound certainly was not a self-inicted one."

"How can you be sure?"

"There was no weapon found in the room, or in the court. The snow was searched and the children too. No weapon, Mr. Gryce, not even a paper-cutter. Besides—but how did Mr. Challoner take what you said? Was he satisfied with this assurance?"

"He had to be. I didn't dare to hold out any hope based on so unsubstantial a theory. But the interview had this effect upon me. If the possibility remains of fixing guilt elsewhere than on Miss Challoner's inconsiderate impulse, I am ready to devote any amount of time and strength to the work. To see this grieving father relieved from the worst part of his burden is worth some effort and now you know why I have listened so eagerly to you. Sweetwater, I will go with you to the Superintendent. We may not gain his attention and again we may. If we don't—but we won't cross that bridge prematurely. When will you be ready for this business?"

"I must be at headquarters to-morrow."

"Good, then let it be to-morrow. A taxicab, Sweetwater. The subway for the young. I can no longer manage the stairs."

CHAPTER XIV.
A CONCESSION.

"It is true; there seems to be something extraordinary in the coincidence."

Thus Mr. Brotherson, in the presence of the Inspector.

"But that is all there is to it," he easily proceeded. "I knew Miss Challoner and I have already said how much and how little I had to do with her death. The other woman I did not know at all; I did not even know her name. A prosecution based on grounds so flimsy as those you advance would smack of persecution, would it not?"

The Inspector, surprised by this unexpected attack, regarded the speaker with an interest rather augmented than diminished by his boldness. The smile with which he had uttered these concluding words yet lingered on his lips, lighting up features of a mould too suggestive of command to be associated readily with guilt. That the impression thus produced was favourable, was evident from the tone of the Inspector's reply:—

"We have said nothing about prosecution, Mr. Brotherson. We hope to avoid any such extreme measures, and that we may the more readily do so, we have given you this opportunity to make such explanations as the situation, which you yourself have characterized as remarkable, seems to call for."

"I am ready. But what am I called upon to explain? I really cannot see, sir. Knowing nothing more about either case than you do, I fear that I shall not add much to your enlightenment."

"You can tell us why with your seeming culture and obvious means, you choose to spend so much time in a second-rate tenement like the one in Hicks Street."

"Have you seen my room there? It is piled to the ceiling with books. When I was a poor man I chose the abode suited to my purse and my passion for first-rate reading. As I grew better off, my time became daily more valuable. I have never seen the hour when I felt like moving that precious collection. Besides, I am a man of the people. I like the working class, and am willing to be thought one of them. I can find time to talk to a hard-pushed mechanic as easily as to such members of the moneyed class as I encounter on stray evenings at the Hotel Clermont. I have led—I may say that I am leading—a double life; but of neither am I ashamed, nor have I cause to be. Love drove me to ape the gentleman in the halls of the Clermont; a broad human interest in the work of the world to live as a fellow among the mechanics of Hicks Street."

"But why make use of one name as a gentleman of leisure and quite a different one as the honest workman?"

"Ah, there you touch upon my real secret. I have a reason for keeping my identity quiet till my invention is completed."

"A reason connected wiht your anarchistic tendencies?"

"Possibly." But the word was uttered in a way to carry little conviction. "I am not much of an anarchist," he now took the trouble to declare, with a careless lift of his shoulders. "I like fair play, but I shall never give you much trouble by my manner of ensuring it. I have too much at stake. My invention is dearer to me than the overthrow of present institutions. Nothing must stand in the way of its success, not even the satisfaction of inspiring terror in minds shut to every other species of argument. I have uttered my last speech; you can rely on me for that."

"We are glad to hear it, Mr. Dunn. Physical overthrow carries more than the immediate sufferer with it."

If this were meant as an irritant, it did not act successfully. The social agitator, the political demagogue, the orator whose honeyed tones had rung with biting invective in the ears of the United Brotherhood of the Awl, the Plane, and the Trowel, simply bowed and calmly waited for the next attack.

Perhaps it was of a nature to surprise even him

"We have no wish," continued the Inspector, "to probe too closely into concerns seemingly quite removed from the main issue. You say that you are ready, nay more, are even eager to answer all questions. You will probably be anxious then to explain away a discrepancy between your word and your conduct, which has come to our attention. You were known to have expressed the intention of spending the afternoon of Mrs. Spotts' death in New York and were supposed to have done so, yet you were certainly seen in the crowd which invaded that rear building at the first alarm. Are you conscious of possessing a double, or did you fail to cross the river as you expected to?"

"I am glad this has come up." The tone was one of self-congratulation, which would have shaken Sweetwater sorely had he been admitted to this unofficial examination. "I have never confided to any one the story of my doings on that unhappy afternoon, because I knew of no one who would take any interest in them. But this is what occurred. I did mean to go to New York, and I even started on my walk to the Bridge at the hour mentioned. But I got into a small crowd on the corner of Fulton Street in which a poor devil who had robbed a vendor's cart of a few oranges, was being hustled about. There was no policeman within sight, and so I busied myself there for a minute paying for the oranges and dragging the poor wretch away into an alley, where I could have the pleasure of seeing him eat them. When I came out of the alley the small crowd had vanished, but a big one was collecting up the street very near my home. I always think of my books when I see anything suggesting fire, and naturally I returned, and equally naturally, when I heard what had happened, followed the crowd into the court and so up to the poor woman's doorway. But my curiosity satisfied, I returned at once to the street and went to New York as I had planned."

"Do you mind telling us where you went in New York?"

"Not at all. I went shopping. I wanted a certain very fine wire, for an experiment I had on hand, and I found it in a little shop in Fourth Avenue. If I remember rightly, the name over the door was Grippus. Its oddity struck me."

There was nothing left to the Inspector but to dismiss him. He had answered all questions willingly, and with a countenance inexpressive of guile. He even indulged in a parting shot on his own account, as full of frank acceptance of the situation as it was fearless in its attack. As he halted in the doorway before turning his back upon the room, he smiled for the third time as he quietly said:

"I have ceased visiting my friend's apartment in upper New York. If you ever want me again, you will find me amongst my books. If my invention halts and other interests stale, you have furnished me this day with a problem which cannot fail to give continual occupation to my energies. If I succeed in solving it first, I shall be happy to share my knowledge with you. Till then, trust the laws of nature. No man when once on the outside of a door can button it on the inside, nor could any one without the gift of complete invisibility, make a leap of over fifteen feet from the sill of a fourth storey window on to an adjacent fire escape, without attracting the attention of some of the many children playing down below."

He was half-way out of the door, but his name quickly spoken by the Inspector drew him back.

"Anything more?" he asked.

THE LADY DETECTIVE

BY T. F. FAUKES

WANTED.—An educated lady to train as a detective; previous knowledge unnecessary. Apply ——

This advertisement caught my eye many years ago and tickled my sense of adventure. My aunt, with whom I was living, was furious at the idea of such possible degradation. However, I assured her that there was not the faintest chance of my being accepted, as I looked so disgracefully young.

I found a great building with a succession of saloons which hit me in the eye with their gilding and plush. At last I was received by the head of the firm, who stared at me for a long time through his gold rimmed glasses, and murmured impatiently, "A mere child, a mere child?" I shrivelled and looked round for a means of escape. I wished I could sink into the soft carpet and melt away.

Looking back on my experience I cannot help reflecting that, if I had a daughter I would rather put her to work as a domestic servant than follow in my footsteps. The occupation is far less interesting than it sounds, and very often much more dangerous than the public imagines.

My first case was to prove that a young nobleman would be wise to break off his secret engagement with a beautiful young actress. Thus it came to pass that I found myself staying at a well known seaside resort.

One day I was watching the boats lying at anchor in the bay and I happened to let my field glasses fall from my hands over the sea wall. A young fisherman who was working at repairs picked them up for me, and I was attracted by his honest face and clear blue eyes.

"Can you tell me the name of that yacht?" I asked.

"That is the Stella, miss. Belongs to my master. She used to be called the May Queen, but Captain T., that is my master's name, had it altered about two years ago. Captain T! Could it possibly be the same Captain T of whom my employer had so often spoken while giving me my brief?

Soon after I was comfortably settled in a pretty little boat. A few tactful questions elicited sufficient information to convince me that his master was none other than the man my employer was after. I said a friend of mine was anxious to buy a yacht, and suggested that he should take me over to the Stella. After some hesitation he consented, and I found myself on one of the prettiest little yachts I have ever seen. A sudden exclamation escaped my companion's lips.

"What is it?" I asked.

He gave an unhappy whistle and said, "There is Captain T. There on the landing stage. He has seen me take you over the yacht, and I'll bet he'll let fly some language." As we drew up to the landing stage I noticed a smartly dressed man apparently between thirty and forty years of age, clean shaven, his face flushed with anger. To my surprise and disappointment the moment he saw me getting out of the boat he turned on his heels and walked away, but I had made a mental photograph of him, and when a couple of mornings later I saw him walking a few steps in front of me, I came up and said: "Captain T., I believe?"

"Yes," he said, wheeling around and staring hard at me.

"I must apologize for trespassing on your yacht on Monday last, but —"

He cut me short. "Don't apologize. You are welcome, heartily welcome to do so."

"Thank you," I said feebly. "I felt I must apologize," and with a slight bow I turned to retrace my steps.

"Oh don't go," he said, "come and sit on this seat." I did so, and that was how I came to know the man, who, within three days, ruthlessly exposed the "turned down pages" in the life of a young and beautiful actress—exposed them to me, a three days' old acquaintance? This is how it came about:

I sat talking with this man, against whom I had an instinctive feeling of repugnance. His manner was free his speech affected, but I had determined not to return to my employer without the information he sought. I snubbed him when he made a vain endeavour to exact a promise from me to take tea with him at his rooms the following day, but I ridiculed his excuse that he would be "shooting all the earlier part of the day; and too beastly tired to go out in the evening."

Finding me adamant, he asked me to meet him an evening later at 8.30; with yet another excuse for the lateness of the hour, but, "if I would not come to tea, surely I would not deny him the pleasure of a walk with me, as he was leaving for town the next morning."

I consented. The appointed hour arrived. Here let me mention that I had, a day or two earlier, changed my name, at the same time changing my hotel. I had taken the two Christian names of the elder Miss W., and had changed my surname also. But to continue. I was sitting on a seat facing the sea waiting for him. He was half an hour late. A little group of fishermen of a rougher class than the one who rowed me out to the yacht were smoking and chatting not far from me, occasionally glancing my way, and I became aware that they were discussing me.

The next instant I heard Captain T.'s voice, loud and clear. "Well, Stella, this is the way to treat a fellah," he called. And, coming up, he added: "Here have I been waiting for you this half-hour, and swearing like a trooper." I explained that it was I who had waited, and we walked away, while I noticed, with some trepidation, that he was steering for the loneliest part of the cliffs.

Eventually we found a seat; it was growing a little chilly, and the night was very dark. We sat talking, and I felt that I liked him less the more I conversed with him. He said I reminded him of a "little girl" he once knew. I was so much like her, but I was sweeter, and "strangely enough," he added, "her name was the same as your——"

"I don't suppose her second Christian name was like mine," I said.

"What is it?" he asked.

"Evelyn," I answered. The next instant I sprang back with a little cry of fear, partly feigned, certainly, but I must own I was afraid, for my companion, with angry eyes and fists clenched, wheeled round on me in a most threatening attitude.

"Oh, what have I done?" I asked.

"You are having me!" he hissed between his teeth, and there was a murderous look on his face.

"Indeed I am not," I replied. "Whatever do you mean? I don't understand."

He changed his tone then. "Evelyn was her other name," he said.

"That is strange, but I cannot see why you should be so angry," I answered, with a sob. I was trembling violently, and my teeth were chattering. He came a little closer.

"Did I frighten you?" he asked.

"A little; you seemed to be angry," I answered. I felt the cold, and told him so.

"Get inside my coat," he said.

The invitation was not accepted. We sat a little longer, and then retraced our steps, but not before I had learned from his own lips of the weeks he and Miss W. had spent cruising in the pretty yacht with only an old sailor as chaperon. I interviewed the old sailor before I came back to town, and a tip extracted much valuable information from him. I left, albeit I had promised to meet Captain T. beneath the flag pole the following Monday. I don't suppose he is still waiting, but—I wonder.

Mrs. Joseph Taroop, Upper Point de Bute, N.B., writes:—"I cannot speak too well of Doan's Kidney Pills. For two years I was so tired life was a burden, and I got up more tired than when I went to bed, and my back was so lame I could hardly straighten up. I took different kinds of medicine, but none of them did me any good until a friend advised me to try Doan's Kidney Pills. I did so, and to-day I don't know what it is to be tired, and my lame back is all gone I can recommend them to any person suffering with lame back and that terrible tired feeling."

Girl Charged With Forgery

Emily Breen, aged seventeen, of Colehill, was returned for trial at Longwood Petty sessions on a charge of having forged and cashed cheques with intent to defraud. The girl's father made a pathetic appeal to have the girl dealt with by the magistrates, but the resident magistrate said they were bound to return her for trial.

Distress in Dublin.

The great distress prevailing in Dublin is shown by the fact that there are no fewer than 2,500 applications on the books of the Dublin Distress Committee, who, with those dependent on them, represent nearly 6,000 or 7,000 persons. The pawn offices are kept busy, and all kinds of articles, including blankets, wedding rings, clothes, and furniture, are being pledged in an endeavor to supply the necessities of life. In one of Sir Charles Cameron's reports he states that in one year it is calculated there were 2,566,034 pawn tickets issued in Dublin, the loans amounting to $2,787,365, or at the rate of $11 per head of the population.

Died While Leading Prayer

The death of a well-known Weardale farmer has been reported to the Darlington district coroner. The farmer, William Watson, was leading a meeting in prayer at High Close Wesleyan Church when he fell forward and immediately expired.

THE HOME PHYSICIAN
Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills Cure Most of the Family's Ills.

Perhaps if the children, and the "grown-ups" too, always ate exactly the right quantities of exactly the right things, at just the proper times, and in every other way obeyed the rules of health, there would be no sickness in the family, and no need of medicine.

But they never have and probably never will, so in every family there are sure to be more or less frequent attacks of sick headache, biliousness, indigestion, constipation, and kidney and liver troubles, and occasionally some one is "sick in bed".

This Little Boy is Mother's Stand-by.

It is worth a good deal to the mother, then, to have on hand that perfectly safe and reliable remedy for these ills — Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

They invigorate those organs which cleanse the body of waste and impurities, regulating the bowels, stimulating the kidneys and opening the pores of the skin.

Thus Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills cure the common ailments and keep the family healthy. This they have been doing for over half a century in every part of the world.

Post Office Inspector James T. Cortelyou Who Has Captured Hundreds of Violators of the Postal Laws, Says That Luck Plays a Large Part in Many Important Cases

THE States of New Jersey and Pennsylvania, including their cities, towns and hamlets, come under the Philadelphia district which is presided over by Post Office Inspector James T. Cortelyou, a brother of the former Postmaster-General, and one of the most successful and shrewdest men in the postal service. "Jimmie," as he is familiarly called by the rank and file of the service, has the reputation of having solved more difficult problems and captured more violators of the postal laws than any other man in that arm of Uncle Sam's service. The territory over which he presides is a big one and, naturally, a wide variety of criminals have to be coped with. The larger cities—Philadelphia, Pittsburg, Newark and Jersey City—are sufficiently big and cosmopolitan to attract that clique of swindlers who seek fertile fields for their operations, while the outlying districts are just as attractive to yeggs, train robbers, horse gypsies and swindlers of smaller calibre, who prey upon the farmers, miners and other unsophisticated residents.

"The operations of the post office inspectors have increased tenfold," Mr. Cortelyou said, "since Postmaster General Hitchcock and Chief Post Office Inspector Shiry have been at the head of things. More fraud cases have been run down and a wider range of work has fallen to the lot of the inspectors. With the increasing of our work that of the Secret Service has been lessened, for now we have many cases that once fell to it. The ruling that a swindler who advertises his schemes in the columns of those newspapers which reach their readers through the mails is a violator of the postal laws has added tremendously to our work, and now we have to watch the newspapers as carefully as we do the mails. Every day we discover some new scheme in the process of hatching, and only prompt and vigorous methods can [illegible] them so effectually for them."

Mr. Cortelyou's experiences cover a wide range of territory, and he has had more than his share of hairbreadth escapes from the bullets and blows aimed at his head. Apparently he has borne a charmed life, for he has come out of every such encounter unscathed, which he attributes to the unusual good luck which has attended him all through his career.

"And speaking of luck," said Mr. Cortelyou, "don't forget that it plays just as important a part in thief taking as it does in every other pursuit. I'll give you an instance. Back in 1906 the post office at Millersburg, Mass., was robbed of $500. A few days later that at Harrison was tapped for $2,000, and after that the office at Lansdowne, Pa., was cracked for $1,000. All were sneak jobs. By that I mean two men would visit the post office and, representing themselves as government agents, would say they were there to see about placing a sign, a lock or something of the sort on the sidewalk. They would time their visits so that all but one clerk would be at luncheon or dinner. While one of the crooks would get this clerk to accompany him to the sidewalk to see about the sign the other would slip in the back way, tap the safe and get away.

One Instance of "Luck."

"Within a week after these robberies I was seated in a café in Forty-second street, New York, one evening when Frank P. Wilson, a notorious burglar, entered. I knew him at a glance, as I had nailed him once before and succeeded in having him sent away for a long term. He always wore a Vandyke beard, which hid the scars in both cheeks caused by a bullet which had ploughed through them. He was faultlessly dressed and impressed every one as a prosperous man of affairs. From the description I had of the man who did the Lansdowne job I was sure Wilson was the chap I wanted. I sent several photographs of Wilson to the postmasters of the robbed offices and each replied that the original was one of the men who had figured in the robbery. I knew I could nail Wilson any time I wanted him, so I hustled to find out who his accomplice was.

"Years ago Wilson had a pal named Tom Delaney, sometimes known as Tom Donohue. After scouting around I got a photograph of Delaney, and this the postmasters also identified. Then I went after them. I found that Wilson had jumped town, but a day or two later I learned in Pittsburg that he had been arrested in Johnstown for the robbery of a hardware store.

A confederate had been taken with him, and I wired the Johnstown authorities to hold them at all hazards. Furthermore, I wired to ascertain if the confederate had a "T" tattooed on his left arm and a "D" on his right arm. An affirmative reply came, and then I knew I had the cleverest pair of burglars and sneak thieves in the country. I instructed the police to take care that Wilson did not shave off his beard, but he had secreted a safety blade in the cuffs of his trousers, and he shaved during the night. That made identification more difficult, but I finally had them sent to Atlanta prison for five years each, a term they have just completed. They are in New York now, I understand. They are a dangerous pair to be at large, and will always bear watching. But it was luck, pure and simple, that brought about their capture."

Wilson also served a term for the robbery of a Brooklyn bank, and got seven years for his part in the robbery of the Cosmopolitan Hotel, in New York. Delaney, or Donohue, has a terrific scar that adorns his forehead. This was caused by a blow with a meat cleaver in the hands of a man he had knifed.

"Here's another instance where luck played an important part," Cortelyou continued. "Not so long ago the residents of the Oranges, in New Jersey, were terrorized by the receipt of letters demanding large sums of money under pain of being blown into eternity or else having their children kidnapped and held for ransom. Jacob Schiff and several members of the Guggenheim family were recipients of similar missives. Each time a letter was sent to any of the intended victims he sent a duplicate to the newspapers. I worked on the case and found that the blackmailer meant business, inasmuch as he sent infernal machines to several of those he had picked out for a plucking. These I intercepted in the mails and found to be not only powerful instruments of death but most ingeniously contrived.

"I was watching near the house of a woman who had received a letter from the blackmailer demanding that she pin an envelope containing $600 in small bills to a tree near her home. It was an inky black night and the rain was coming down in torrents. I noticed a man ride by on a bicycle and later he passed again. On his third trip he stopped and, accosting a youth who stood near by, he asked the time. Remounting his wheel he rode away. One of my men followed him. In the meantime the woman who had received the letter appeared. She told me she was so worried and so nervous that she couldn't remain within doors. I asked her if she knew the youth standing on the other corner. She replied that he was a no'er-do-well living in the neighborhood. Closely questioning her, I learned that this youngster, while a dummy at his studies, stood splendidly in his manual training work and was looked upon at the Newark High School as a genius. I then directed my attention to him. I procured specimens of his handwriting and soon found that they tallied, or nearly so, with the writing in which the infernal machines and blackmailing letters had been addressed. I visited his room in his absence and found half a dozen infernal machines in the course of construction, while one or two were all ready for mailing. Each was powerful enough to blow into eternity any one who attempted to open them in the way intended, for they were literally filled with bullets and charged with black powder and nitroglycerine.

"On the lad's desk I found a little card containing the fire alarm calls of East Orange. Opposite several of these numbers were pencilled dots. I took them to Fire Headquarters and learned that at every box designated by a dot an alarm had been turned in for a fire which the authorities believed to have been of incendiary origin. I landed the youngster and he confessed everything. He had sent the letters and the infernal machines, and he was a pyromaniac as well, for he had set all the fires which he kept a record of on his card. We sent him away, but as it was clear that he was a maniac, he was put in an asylum, where he is to this day and where he will spend the remainder of his life no doubt."

It was Cortelyou who broke up the Storey Cotton Company's swindling operations in Philadelphia and throughout the country, resulting in the arrest and conviction of Stanley Francis, "Judge" Franklin Stone and Sophia Beck, the "queen" of the get-rich-quick enterprises. J. Ewart Storey jumped when the investigation started and died shortly afterward. Millions of dollars were procured by this outfit, as the concern had branch offices in every big city in the country. Sophie Beck and Stanley Francis were the real brains of the outfit, and the raid on the home offices in the Philadelphia Bourse was one of the most sensational in the city's history. Sophie Beck fled to Paris with half a million dollars in cash, but she was later tolled back to this country and was arrested at Atlantic City by Cortelyou. He also arrested Stone and Francis.

"That was a pretty big case," Cortelyou remarked to the writer, "and you know the game we were up against, as you worked on the case with me, but it pales into insignificance when compared to the one I am now engaged on in Philadelphia, in which nearly $7,000,000 has been collected from the 'come-ons' who are looking for quick turns for their money. It's a lumber swindle and will startle the financial world when the facts become known."

Mr. Cortelyou regards December 16, 1910, as the most fateful day in his career as an inspector. That was the day he designated for a wholesale clean up of those indulging in fraudulent schemes throughout his district; and after carefully laying his plans to that end he and his inspectors nipped twenty-one men and one woman in the biggest and most far reaching raid ever conducted by government sleuths.

Concerning this big raid Mr. Cortelyou had this to say:—"The get rich quick artists were flourishing in all parts of the country, and it seemed to me that with such a flood of easy money in sight the best and most effectual manner of checking such operations in my district would be through a ten strike. We had hundreds of cases under investigation, so I arranged that cases nearing completion should be cleared up at a given date, and then have the inspectors throughout the district, at a given signal, make their arrests so that announcements of such arrests would be made simultaneously. The swindlers rounded up included every type of man and woman who prey on a credulous public, and the round-up threw such a scare into others who were under surveillance that they fled the State, and we heard no more from them for a long time.

"Among those taken in our drag net that day were promoters of medical preparations claiming to perform wonders; instruction in art and other things by correspondence; distributing improper advertisements; alluring real estate propositions; pressing claims against express companies in an effort to swindle, and soliciting money for charity which did not go to charity after all. The officials and books and papers of the "Chain Shoe Store Syndicate" were taken in this raid, and that ended the hitherto successful efforts of honest but poor persons, who in a day or two realized they had been swindled, and that the horse was absolutely worthless. Disguised as a 'gyp,' I fell in with this band, and after working with them for a few days I had the goods on them and rounded up McNally and Casey, and that, for a time, put a crimp in the 'gyp' business in Philadelphia and its environs.

"These fellows had enjoyed a strong pull in Philadelphia, and, despite hundreds of complaints that reached the police, nothing was done to stop their operations until the government ruled that such advertisements carried through the mails in newspapers were as gross violations of the postal laws as correspondence by letter.

"To give you an idea of how credulous the readers of newspapers are, take the smashing of the Correspondence Institute of America, at Scranton, Pa. That concern advertised a course in cartooning, claiming that its promoters had secured the services of the ablest cartoonists in the country. The Board of Art Directors, as advertised, contained names that are by words with every reader of New York, Chicago and Philadelphia newspapers, yet in reality that Board of Directors consisted of young women who were paid anywhere from $6 to $10 a week. Their scheme was this: With their advertisement they would print a cartoon. They offered any reader who would make a good reproduction of the cartoon a $40 course for $18. This was to encourage those who 'displayed talent,' so the promoters stated. Well, you can readily imagine that every one sending in a reply and a replica of that cartoon 'displayed such marked talent' that they were at once enrolled with a request for the $18. That concern cleaned up $700,000 in cash, and the case, when tried at Harrisburg, brought together one of the greatest galaxy of cartoonists ever gathered under one roof in this country. We had the promoters convicted, and that ended that correspondence school for good and all."

Complete Band Captured.

It was Inspector Cortelyou who directed the hunt for the gang of green goods swindlers which reaped hundreds of thousands of dollars in their sale of "sawdust" packages in the vicinity of New York a few years ago. It was the first time in the history of a police or government raid that a complete gang of green goods men was captured, together with their entire plant. Hundreds of complaints were being received from persons in New England and in the rural districts of New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania of the flood of green goods literature they were receiving. Inspectors in all the big Eastern cities got busy, and Cortelyou was put in charge. The trail led to Newark, and there the inspectors camped for months. When they had perfected their case they swooped down on a house at No. 25 West street, Newark, and not only got George T. Bradford, alias "Nigger George," but Elmer Brown, alias "Kid Lehmann"; Edward Leland, alias "Thorney McGuire," and James McVickers, the latter king of green goods men and other "shovers of the queer" since the days that the mantle of "Gentleman George" fell upon his receptive shoulders.

Three thousand dollars in counterfeit bills, to say nothing of the wads of white paper cut to the size of bank notes, on top of which was placed a genuine bill in order to fool the come on, was gathered in, as well as the "money chests" and other paraphernalia used by men of this stripe.

"We had followed a come on from New Haven, Conn.," Cortelyou said. "He was met in Hoboken by Bradford, the steerer of the band. Neither the steerer nor the come on was out of our sight a minute then until the pinch was ripe. Antonio Caparmi was the come on, and when we trailed him to the Adams Express Company's office and saw him express a package we knew he had consummated his deal. We intercepted the package, which contained $3,000 in counterfeit bills, for which he had paid $300, and then arrested him. Bradford and Brown, who had been watching him to see that he did not tumble to the game before he quit town, were hovering near, and we got them. McVickers and Leland, the 'turners,' or men who sold the 'queer,' had left the West street house before we swooped down upon it, but knowing their habits we got them at the Cortlandt street ferry after taking the come on along to point them out to us. We seized a quantity of good money as well as the 'queer,' and after arresting the proprietor of the apartment house where the band roosted, and his wife we later got others of the band in a single raid and put the whole crew away."

Inspector Cortelyou said that just now his district is alive with crooks who are floating land frauds. He has nailed a number of them, has a dozen others under surveillance and plans raids on every concern of the kind in the two States.

Suburban Land Frauds.

"The men and women who fall for these schemes deserve little sympathy," the inspector said, "for the swindle is so 'bald' that you would think a child would not be caught by it. These concerns advertise a new development in some attractive suburb and insert a puzzle in their advertisement. The readers are told that all who solve the puzzle will receive a $25 lot gratis. The puzzle is so simple that a baby could solve it. When the victim is notified that he won the lot he is told that he can have the adjoining lot for $25, thus making a very attractive piece of property. Some even fall for this and put up the $25. The land was originally purchased for a song, and little or nothing is done in the way of improvements. If the winner of the lot declines to buy the adjoining lot he is told that he must put up $10 to cover the expense of filing and transferring the deed, and this he usually agrees to. Even the cost of such a fee leaves the promoter a fat profit on the lot, for in reality the land is worth little or nothing. Sometimes a winner insists upon seeing his lot, and he is taken to the development. He is met by the promoter in an automobile and whirled through the adjoining suburb, where everything denotes prosperity and beauty. Then a hurried trip is taken to the new property, and just as they alight the chauffeur vigorously hooks his automobile horn and tells the promoter that he has but a minute or two to catch the last train back to the city. Thus the 'sucker' is cheated out of a chance to look about him and see that the lot he won is worthless.

"But the baldest and most ridiculous of all swindles is the 'divining rod' game. In the little town of Palmyra, Pa., lived four fairly prosperous business men. It was noticed that their daily mail was enormous, and furthermore, that their daily bank deposits were far in excess of sums commensurate with the nature of their business. All were men of family, respected by their neighbors, and were looked upon as the very pillars of the churches they attended. One day another inspector and myself slipped into town and arrested the quartet and then the whole story came out.

"The men had formed a company and had sent thousands of circulars all over the country to credulous ones—whose they got their sucker list heaven only knows—telling of the marvelous powers of a divining rod which they alone constructed. This rod, the circulars set forth, could be used to locate any mineral or other hidden treasures. All the purchaser had to do was to walk about his place with the rod in hand and if the earth contained gold, precious stones or other treasures it would be indicated by a tendency of the rod to turn toward the ground when held in a horizontal position. These rods were quoted at prices ranging from $12 to $75. The 'wonderful liquid' they contained, which alone was responsible for its powers of discovery, was in reality colored water.

"Now, you wouldn't think that people were unsophisticated enough to fall for such a scheme, would you? Well they did and by the thousands. These fellows cleaned up a fortune. Just how much we never learned, but they had sailed away the limit of it before we got on the case.

"A splendid field is offered for the proficient swindler who tells people they are heirs to a large amount of property and induces them to put up money with which to make their claims good. Only a short time ago we arrested a man in Trenton who represented himself as the manager of a syndicate, an association formed to get back the entire State of Delaware for the original owners. From a directory he procured the names and addresses of a number of persons of like name, and each he asked to contribute $35 as their proportionate share of the expenses of litigation about to follow. A good many thousand dollars flowed into that chap's pocket, and when he reached the $50,000 mark and had been content with that sum he might have escaped. But the pickings were so easy that he lingered for more, and we got him. But he overestimated the gullibility of all he wrote to and that proved his undoing.

"Once in a great while post office inspectors are called on to run down train robbers, especially those who crack the mail cars. This was the case a few months ago when Inspector Cortelyou and several of his men ran to cover the gang which held up a fast mail train of the Pennsylvania line a few miles east of Erie.

"As the train halted at a water tank two men entered the mail car and, after shooting the mail clerk, tried to blow the safe. Surprised by the train crew, they put up a running fight and got away. Inspector Cortelyou was sent to the scene of the hold-up, and after getting a good description of the two bandits he started on a still hunt for the pair. The trail led to Buffalo, and there Inspector Cortelyou ran across Frank Trinewski and Frank Wynicke, both desperate characters, as their prison records proved. Cortelyou arrested them on suspicion. The bandits thought the Inspector had the goods on them and they made admissions which were far more damaging than anything the authorities had been able to get on them previously. Then they were put through the third degree and they confessed. They were speedily tried and convicted and each got a twenty-five year term in Leavenworth prison.

Grocery Store Swindle.

"The grocery store swindle game is a successful one in Philadelphia, and other cities surrounded by truck farms. A man opens a store and solicits farmers for their vegetables and other products. The first shipment as a rule is small, and this is promptly paid for. Then he writes to big shippers and solicits goods from them, giving the farmers he has just settled with as references. He receives goods worth several thousand dollars, quickly sells out and moves to some other place. One man who operated a store of this kind in Philadelphia deposited $10,000 in a big bank. When asked for references he referred all such inquirers to his bank. His big account quickly gained him the confidence of the farmers and other dealers. One day his store was closed, he withdrew his funds, which now amounted to $50,000 from the bank and skipped town, leaving a pile of unpaid bills, to say nothing of an angry army of farmers. I got him later in another city, where he started a similar game. He is doing his bit in Atlanta prison now.

"We had a rather peculiar case the other day. We received numerous complaints from various parts of the country from persons who had been duped by a clever woman. This woman wrote hundreds of letters to persons scattered all over the country representing herself as a hopeless cripple. She begged the person addressed to order from her a set of table mats which she would crochet. As she was in desperate need she said she could not make the outlay for the material for the mats unless her patrons would pay her in advance. Her letter was so pathetic and so well written that it rarely failed to bring forth an order for the mats, together with a sum far in excess of the amount demanded.

"I looked up the woman, and instead of a cripple I found a very healthy and active young woman who was living by her wits, and a very good living indeed was she enjoying from the proceeds of her 'cripple game.' We soon had her where she belonged, and her stay in prison will cover a long period.

"Another old game, recently revived and with marked success, is the 'fountain pen game.' This game is worked with many different articles, but somehow it always goes with more success when a fountain pen is used. The swindler watches out of town newspapers and clips therefrom the death notices. Then he sends to each of the deceased a fountain pen. A short letter precedes the pen, stating that under separate cover the pen has been shipped C. O. D., as per instructions. The pen arrives a day later, and as the initials of the 'dear departed' have been carefully engraved on the little gold plate, the relatives of the deceased accept it when it arrives, and the $3 demanded is at once remitted to the sender. These pens cost about $2 a dozen, yet these swindlers do a thriving business in them."

Inspector Cortelyou is invariably selected when the government has a delicate and secret investigation of importance on hand, for his judgment with regard to postal violators is regarded as almost infallible. His record since taking charge of the Philadelphia division is unequalled in the service, since he has secured a conviction in every case prosecuted. Not a single suspect has escaped, and this is due to the care and skill with which he has worked up his cases before taking action. His man hunts have taken him to the far corners of the globe, and some of the prisoners he has made have had international reputations.

By Ruth Cameron

THE very sweetest lady I know, that dear, unselfish saint, in fact, on whose prayers I place my best hopes of Heaven,—I don't suppose I need to identify her farther to anyone who has a mother — has a regular habit of saying at Sunday dinner "This morning in church I thought——"

What she thought may have been the advisability of dyeing my light blue house gown dark blue next winter, or it may have been a recollection that we had forgotten to call up Aunt Maria to ask her about Wednesday, or it may have been a wondering if the cat were shut up where she couldn't get at our Sunday dinner, but it is always at astonishing variance with the subject of the sermon.

And yet the author of these heresies is, as I said before, the very sweetest lady I know. Now if she thus betrays the presence of secular thoughts at a time when one should be thinking only of sermons and devotions, what about the rest of us? Truly it is an appalling thought.

How often do you listen straight through to a sermon over half an hour in length, and not go off on a single irrelevant train of thought? Perhaps I'm more inattentive or rattle-brained than most people, but as for myself, I will frankly admit that I could scarcely claim half a dozen such occasions in a lifetime.

Some years ago, I used to attend a fine old church which was quaintly and beautifully finished in natural beams. Said the minister's wife one day to a group of us, "I think the architecture of this church is beautiful. When I am not especially interested in the sermon, I just love to sit and look up at those great beams."

And she was the minister's wife, the first lady of the church, with a convincing reason, nay two or three of them, if anyone ever had, for listening to every word of the sermon!

Another dear, good woman admits frankly that she plans all the children's clothes in church.

What are you going to do about it? May I offer two or three little suggestions?

My first is not to have any sermons over half an hour long, preferably nearer the fifteen minute mark. A wicked shortening of one's devotions, you say? I don't see it that way. I think we could listen to a fifteen minutes sermon throughout, and surely that's better than hearing a few words of a longer discourse.

Another is for ministers to talk instead of preach. As I say, there have been a few occasions when I listened to the whole sermon. On most of these I sat under a minister who seldom raises his voice; never gets oratorical or audience-y, but just talks as if he were talking right to me, whereupon I feel in courtesy bound to listen to him just as I would to anyone who was talking to me. Whereas, with a minister who is preaching, I feel that he is addressing an Audience with a capital A, and it doesn't really matter whether I listen or not.

My third suggestion is for the audience — for you and me, in other words. And it is for us to realize that we don't honour God and worship Him, and do our duty by sitting in a pew and thinking of clothes and pleasure and business, any more than by sitting at home and thinking of those things.

Presumably when we go to church we are dedicating a certain amount of time to honouring and worshipping God, and time spent in selfish secular thoughts is stolen from this dedicated time. Perhaps if we bolstered up our resolutions to really listen, by that point of view we might do a bit better.

Here's good luck to you—and me.

CASCARETS FOR A SICK, SOUR STOMACH

Gently but Thoroughly Cleanse and Regulate Your Stomach, Liver and Bowels While You Sleep

That awful sourness, belching of acid and foul gases; that pain in the pit of the stomach, the heartburn, nervousness, nauseau, bloating after eating, feeling of fullness, dizziness and sick headache, means indigestion; a disordered stomach, which cannot be regulated until you remove the cause. It isn't your stomach's fault. Your stomach is as good as any.

Try Cascarets; they cure indigestion, because they immediately cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry off the decomposed waste matter and poison from the intestines and bowels. Then your stomach trouble is ended for ever. A Cascaret to-night will straighten you out by morning—a 10-cent box from any drug store will keep your entire family feeling good for months. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a good, gentle cleansing, too.

LUXEMBERG'S NEW RULER

The Grand Duchess Marie Can Well Afford to Keep up Her Court

The New Grand Duchess Marie of Luxemburg will be very rich, for she succeeds to nearly all the immense fortune of her father, the late Grand Duke, who was very wealthy and spent large sums on the duchy. He used to pay the diplomatic representatives, whom he maintained at Berlin, Paris, Vienna, Brussels, and The Hague. The Grand Duchess has been very carefully brought up. She has learned French, German, Belgian and Dutch. She was taught to ride from an early age, and is often seen by her subjects riding in the park.

The inhabitants of Luxemburg are not called upon to contribute much towards the support of their ruler. As Duke of Nassau, the father of the late Grand Duke amassed an enormous fortune from the profits of the gaming tables of Wiesbaden. When he succeeded to the Grand Duchy, he refused to accept a civil list of more than $40,000 a year, out of which he maintained the most perfectly organised of the smaller European Courts, and this amount has never been increased.

SEEK LIFE SENTENCES

German Criminals Think Chances for Freedom Better with Indefinite Term

Local superstition and the fact that he himself is a nonagenarian, force the Prince Regent of Bavaria to examine most scrupulously all supposed confessions of crime. Among German peasants the odd belief is current that penal servitude for life terminates automatically on the death of the State Ruler, with the curious consequence that offenders in jail for offences entailing only four or five years' imprisonment not seldom accuse themselves of crime of sufficient seriousness to entail the punishment of penal servitude for life.

A case of the kind occurred not long ago in Brunswick, where, according to popular belief, the coming to the throne of the "legitimate heir," the Duke of Cumberland, would mean the setting at liberty of those in prison with life sentences. The convict in question charged himself with a murder, the perpetrator of which the police could not trace; and as his statement tallied fairly well with the circumstance of the crime, he was found guilty and sentenced to fifteen years penal servitude. Shortly afterward the same convict accused himself of other crimes, until at length the authorities became suspicious and investigation proved that his object was penal servitude for life in the confident expectation that, with a change of dynasty, he would be released.

WOLVES VS. BEAR

Hungarian Villages are Terrorized by Wild Animals From the Mountains

The inhabitants of several villages near the Royaly Mountains in Hungary are being almost kept prisoners in their houses by numerous packs of wolves from the highlying forests. Cattle and other domestic animals have fallen a prey to the depredations of the invaders. One village near Gross-Banya was treated to the remarkable spectacle of a fight in a garden between a bear which had also come to the villages to look for something to eat and a number of wolves. The bear defended himself stoutly with blows of his paws and killed two of his assailants but he was finally forced to take refuge up a tree, where he was shot by a villager, after the wolves had given up the siege. A farmer at Vessood saw a wolf put his head through a half-opened door of the room in which he was sleeping. With great presence of mind he slammed the door to, caught the animal's neck between door and doorpost and then killed it. The authorities are arranging a drive on a large scale by which it is hoped to clear the inhabited country from the wolves.

ARTIFICIAL RUBBER

The problem of making artificial rubber is said to have been solved by M. Ostromislensky, a young and and distinguished professor of chemistry at the Imperial Technical School of Moscow.

When studying the properties of benzol he found a substance the structure of which resembled rubber, and acting upon the discovery he has produced what is said to be a perfect substitute for natural rubber.

The discovery has caused a great sensation in the rubber industry. The Russian and foreign rights have been acquired by Count Tatistcheff, of the Bogatir Rubber Company.

New Use for Parliament House.

In 1402 Owain Glyndwr, the Champion of Welsh independence against England, assembled the Cymric leaders at Machynlleth to declare him Prince of Wales. His old Parliament House, situated in Maengwyn street, Machynlleth, which has been restored by Mr. David Davies, M. P., has been handed over formally to the local authorities. The building will for the future serve as a town institute, including a temperance hotel, with stabling accommodation, a library, reading and refreshment rooms, and public baths.

ADVICE ABOUT GRIP

How to Escape Its Dangerous After Effects.

With so much grip in town this winter a few words of advice will not be out of place.

First, grip is no trifle. Its after effects are often very serious.

Second, grip is particularly bad on children, old people and all who are not in the best of health.

Third, grip hangs on—takes away your energy and appetite—leaves you feeling weak and played out. That is a dangerous condition.

The best thing you can do is to build yourself up with Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron preparation without oil. It tones up the system and makes you strong and vigorous.

Read this letter from R. J. Lown, Oneonta, N. Y.: "I had an attack of grip last January which left me in a very badly weakened and rundown condition. Lately I began to take Vinol and I find it strictly all right. It began to help me from the very first and now I am as well as ever."

Remember, we guarantee Vinol to do just what we say — we pay back your money if it does not. McDermid and Jury, druggists, corner George and Charlotte streets; also Payne's drug store, corner George and Simcoe streets.

NO TYPEWRITERS IN CHINA.

Typewriters are now made for use in nearly a hundred different lanuages, and they are sold all over the world; but there is still one great nation which, for a very simple reason, has no typewriters that write its tongue. That nation is China.

VOYAGES BY AIRSHIP

It is understood that the Hamburg-Amerika Line intend shortly to purchase a number of airships and to organise an important service of aerial navigation in Germany. Sheds to shelter the dirigibles will be built at Wilhelmshaven, Heligoland, Hamburg, Kiel and Bremnn.

Teaching a Trade as Well as Euclid.

Sir Geo. H. Kenrick, in the course of his presidential address at the annual meeting of the Association of Technical Institutions, at the Goldsmiths' Hall, London, said that many men might be heard declaring that they did not know exactly how they got into their particular business, but that they did know that they meant to get out of it as soon as they could. Such people were no likely to do much good to any industry. He advocated the teaching of trades as well as academic subjects to young people.

Hymns to Lighten Their Task.

In order to lighten the task of the masculine members of the congregation of Blakeney Church, Norfolk, who were voluntarily engaged for several evenings in cleaning the building, the rector, the Rev. Lee Elliott, played hymns on the organ as the work proceeded. He was not in robust health enough to assist in the work himself, so his curate superintended operations.

NOSE-RINGS SUGGESTED

English Actress Thinks This Would Prevent Married Men Flirting

"The suggestion of labelling married men with some badge or button in order that young women may detect real from suspicious courtship and know with whom they are flirting, has aroused considerable interest in London, where many sad love stories told in court proves that deceitful married men sometimes masquerade as bachelors. An enterprising London daily has taken the trouble of interviewing the celebrated actress, Mrs. Kendall, on what she thinks of the idea. Mrs. Kendall admits that it will do for a starter, but that to be effective some far more drastic measure is needed. "What is the use of anything you can take off or put on?" she asked. "Look at the German men with their wedding rings. And, if the badge was made difficult to imitate by being of a prohibitive price, rich men who wanted them, and ought not to have them, would buy them, and poor men would have to go without. If you want to label single men, a nose-ring that they couldn't get off would be the only thing."

PRINCESS LOUISE, Duchess of Fife, eldest sister of King George.

LONG DEFERRED WEDDING

To Inherit a fortune a German Couple Waited Thirty eYars

If, as some people maintain, the period of bethrothal is the happiest known to mortal men, Hermann Hessberg, a slipper maker of Elbing, Germany, and she who has just became his wife, are greatly to be envied, for in their case the time of bliss lasted upwards of thirty years. When he was 38 years of age a marriage between the pair was actually arranged, but at the last moment an affluent aunt on whose fortune they had been counting interposed with the threat of disinheritance in case this particular union should take place. Accordingly the wedding was postponed till the obstacle should have been removed. It was not long before the aunt died, but when her will was opened it was found that she had bequeathed her possessions to her nephew only on condition that he did not marry the girl of his choice for at least another thirty years.

With a combination of fidelity and prudence which is deserving of wonder, if not of admiration, the couple calmly set themselves to wait out this term. It has at last expired, and they have become man and wife, though it should be added that the marriage ceremony had to take place in the house of the bridegroom, who is now confined to his room by a heart complaint.

SAILOR'S LOVE FOR A PET

A story of a sailor's love for a pet canary is being told in Portsmouth harbor. In the ship "Ruben," a cage was suspended from the bridge and in the cage was a pet canary of which all the sailors are very fond. One morning the bird was missing. The ship was at once searched, but in vain, till one of the crew noticed something fluttering in the water. It proved to be the missing pet, and without a moment's hesitation one of the sailors although fully dressed, jumped into the water, swam out to the bird and brought it back to the ship where it was dried and thoroughly resuscitated.

WAS A GREAT SUFFERER FOR FIVE YEARS FROM DYSPEPSIA.

Dyspepsia is one of the most prevalent troubles of civilized life, and thousands of people suffer untold agony after every meal, for nearly everything that enters a weak dyspeptic stomach acts as an irritant.

The long train of distressing symptoms, which render life a burden to the victim of dyspepsia, may be promptly cured by the use of Burdock Blood Bitters. Mrs. Wm. J. Boyne, Lepreau, N.B., writes:—"I thought I would write and tell you of the good Burdock Blood Bitters has done me and also tell you how thankful I am.

"For five years I had been a great sufferer from dyspepsia, and tried different doctors and proprietary medicines, but could get no relief. One day a friend told me to try Burdock Blood Bitters. I did not have much faith in it, but I thought I would give it a trial. To-day I am completely cured, and I will always recommend it."

Burdock Blood Bitters has been on the market for about thirty-five years and is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

NOT GETTING ITS SHARE OF IMMIGRATION

Ontario Away Behind Other Provinces in the Number of Newcomers

BUDGET DEBATE LIVELY

TORONTO, MARCH 14.— Acrimonious remarks characterized the continued Budget debate in the Legislature yesterday. Mr. Rowell and the Prime Minister had a tilt at the opening over the length of the sittings and the necessity of doing more work if prorogation was to be reached by Easter. Mr. G. Howard Ferguson (Grenville) made a personal attack on the leader of the Opposition, whom he called a "political Lilliputian" for not having taken a definite stand on any planks in the Conservative platform. In an able and forceful adress Mr. J. C. Elliott (West Middlesex) expressed satisfaction that Mr. Ferguson had not been out in the drifts of South Renfrew. He declared that Ontario was not getting a proportionate share of the immigration to the Dominion, and charged Sir James Whitney with failure to reorganize the Ontario Railway Board. He made a boomerang of Mr. McGarry's reference to "wolves" on Tuesday. The now famous Elk Lake telegram, Mr. Elliott said, constituted an offence so serious that Mr. Shillington (Temiskaming) had to place his denial of having any knowledge of it before the House, while the Prime Minister uttered not a word. Mr. W. S. Brewster spoke briefly, and will resume the debate to-day.

Not Getting Share.

Mr. Elliott at once took up the immigration policy of the Government, and quoted returns to show that during 1910 over 65,000 immigrants had been brought into the Province, of whom only 7,000 were due to Provincial auspices. Allowing for half as many more who were not recorded, Mr. Elliott showed that 54,201 settlers had been brought into Ontario that year by the Dominion immigration authorities, or about one-third of the total immigration of Canada for that year. Compared with the number that went to other Provinces, Mr. Elliott declared that "Ontario is not increasing her population in proportion to the general increase of the Dominion or in proportion to the increase of a majority of the other Provinces."

A Mixed-up Statement.

Criticizing the Budget address of Hon. Mr. Lucas, the member for West Middlesex went on to say that notwithstanding the animadversions of the Provincial Treasurer over the ambiguity of the public accounts under a former Administration, there was no improvement in them to-day. He complained that the Government had mixed up capital and ordinary expenditure, and seemed to be guided solely by the contingency presented when the expenditure on any account exceeded the revenue. "Where the revenue exceeds the expenditure it goes into ordinary account; when the expenditure exceeds the revenue it goes into capital account."

Mr. Elliott was severe on the Prime Minister's pre-election statement with reference to the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board. He read the criticism of Mr. W. K. McNaught, delivered to an audience in North Toronto, and proceeded to read a report from The Mail and Empire of November 18, in which the Prime Minister was reported to have said that the board would be reorganized.

Sir James interrupted with the remark that his statement that the distinguished Chairman of the board had only been reversed once in forty or fifty appeals was a matter of common notoriety. "The other statement about reorganization was never made by me or anything to that effect."

Mr. Elliott pressed that the report was from a newspaper friendly to the Government.

"It is a report that there is no foundation for at all," replied Sir James.

"Something was contemplated with reference to the board. Would the Prime Minister say if the board had improved any since December 1?"

Woollen Strikers Return.

Lawrence, Mass., March 15.—The strike at six of the textile mills in this city ended yesterday. It remains in effect at seven mills here and one mill in the adjoining town of North Andover. The Everett mill, which has kept its employes locked out since the strike started, is understood to be contemplating an early re-opening at an increased wage scale.

At a mass meeting on the common yesterday afternoon the strikers, who had assembled in thousands, voted to declare off the strike at the Washington, Wood, Ayer and Prospect mills of the American Woollen Co., the Atlantic Cotton Mills and Kunhardt Worsted Mills.

Medal for Roth's Rescuer.

Niagara Falls, Ont., March 15.—Documents in connection with the claim of Wildman Hill for the Humane Society medal for rescuing Ignatius Roth, Cleveland, from the fatal ice bridge on Feb. 4, have been forwarded to H. P. Dwight, chairman of the investigating committee, Toronto.

Another ice jam has been formed at Port Day, in the upper river, but serious results are not anticipated, beyond the trouble several powerhouses are experiencing.

SUFFERED With Biliousness and Sick Headache

Calgary, Alberta, July 8, 1911.

I was a great sufferer for a long time with Biliousness, Sick Headache and Liver trouble. Nothing seemed to do me any good. I had almost given up in despair when I decided to try

FIG PILLS

After taking about half a box the headaches stopped and my appetite improved. I have just finished the fifth box and feel as well as ever. I can heartily recommend Fig Pills for stomach and liver troubles.

Mrs. Mary Ellson.

Sold at all dealers in 25 cent and 50 cent boxes or mailed by the Fig Pill Co., St. Thomas, Ont. Sold in Peterborough by the Warne Drug Co. Ltd.

Naval Hero Killed by Wagon.

Paris, March 15.—Vice-Admiral Jules Marie de Cavelier de Cuverville died yesterday from injuries received last week when he was knocked down by a wagon. Admiral Cuverville was born in 1834. He was decorated in 1855 for bravery at Sebastopol, where he was seriously wounded. He took part in several campaigns, served for a time as naval attache at London and became a rear admiral in 1888.

Ladies of Culture and Refinement Use Salvia Hair Tonic. It makes the Hair Beautiful

At last a remedy has been discovered that will positively destroy this pest.

Dandruff is the root of all hair evils.

SALVIA will kill the dandruff germs and remove Dandruff in ten days, or money back.

McDermid and Jury guarantees it. It will grow hair, stop itching scalp, falling hair, and make the hair thick and abundant. It prevents hair from turning gray, and adds life and lustre.

SALVIA is a hair dressing that has become the favourite with women of taste and culture, who know the social value of beautiful hair. A large, generous bottle costs only 50c. at leading druggists everywhere, and in Peterborough by McDermid and Jury. The word "SALVIA" (Latin for sage) is on every bottle.

Also sold at Payne's Drug Store.

An Irish Victory.

Quebec, March 15.—Mr. Walsh's bill, providing that one of the three city councillors on the board of the Catholic school commissioners of Montreal, be an Irish Catholic, passed the legislation committee yesterday morning. So also did Mr. Walker's bill respecting the salaries of municipal councillors and that of Mr. Dupius respecting actions taken chiefly against the farming class with regard to sales on the instalment plan.

GROWING DEMAND FOR GIN PILLS

COCHRANE, ONT., Dec. 17th, 1910.

"Will you please let me know if GIN PILLS are on sale in England—and if so, where? I am anxious to know, so that I can inform my sister there, who is troubled with her Kidneys. While I was visiting England last summer, I recommended GIN PILLS and now my sister has written for me to send her a box and to find out if they are on sale in England". MRS. T. V. ANDERSON.

Hundreds of boxes of GIN PILLS are sold every year through the recommendations of those who have tried these wonderful pills and have been cured by them. If you suffer from Kidney or Bladder Trouble, Pain in the Back, Rheumatism or Lumbago, take GIN PILLS on our positive guarantee of relief or your money back. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50. Sample free if you write National Drug & Chemical Co. of Canada, Limited, Dept. B Toronto.

MANGA-TONE BLOOD AND NERVE TABLETS are a splendid tonic for women and young girls. They correct female troubles. 50c. a box. 101

Three Jailers Killed by Convicts.

Lincoln, Neb., March 15.—Warden James Delahanty, Deputy Warden Charles Wagoner and Guard A. C. Heilman of the state penitentiary were killed by convicts in a riot yesterday afternoon. Keeper Doody of a cell house was slightly wounded.

The convicts overpowered a guard, seized his gun and with it attacked the penitentiary officials. Delahanty, Wagoner and Heilman were fatally shot and died within half an hour.

When news of the murders reached the state capital call was at once sent to police headquarters and a squad of officers left for the prison. Company F of the National Guard was ordered out to quell the riot.

The convicts' insurrection started about two o'clock and was quelled at three.

Of the injured guards who survived at three o'clock one or more may die.

Chief Hunger of the Lincoln police department left for the prison a little before three o'clock, accompanied by patrolmen. Company F of the state militia was also called out.

Word was received early at the sheriff's office and Sheriff Hyers and his assistants left for the prison.

To Try For Conspi

London, March 15.—Mrs. Patrick Lawrence, joint editors of Votes for Women; Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst and Mrs. Mabel Tuke were brought up again yesterday at the Bow street police court on a charge of conspiracy in connection with the recent window-smashing campaign in the streets of London.

Archibald Henry Bodkin, counsel for the Treasury, produced a mass of documentary evidence which he declared unveiled such a mischievous, extensive and deliberate conspiracy as must ensure the committal of accused for trial at the Old Bailey sessions, under the criminal laws.

The defendants, he declared, were engaged continuously in inciting other persons in acts of violence and damage.

No less than $20,000 had been paid by them for the hire of halls for meetings, the sole object of which was to instigate so-called militant protests.

He estimated the funds of the Women's Political and Social Union, of which the defendants were the leaders, at $572,000.

Montreal Jews Up In Arms.

Montreal, March 15.—The Jews of this city have retained Mr. S. W. Jacobs, K.C., to look into the law to see whether the Queen's University bill cannot be upset on account of the clause in it which places Jews under a disability.

Mr. Jacobs says: "Within the last few days we have seen the Province of Quebec worked up over the Keewatin bill because 116 Roman Catholics will be deprived of certain rights claimed to have been granted to Roman Catholics by the act of 1875. Yet here we have an instance of a much more important character, where 100,000 Jewish citizens are publicly insulted, and no person seems to pay any attention to it outside of those directly affected. The absurdity of the bill may be seen."

Lloyd-George Must Go?

London, March 15.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Daily Sketch announces the information that Mr. Lloyd-George must go. There is a league in financial circles, it says, to obtain the resignation or dismissal of the Minister whose financial policy had already inflicted heavy losses on a large section of the community and for his attacks on capital.

His election speech, it is said, has done not a little to bring about the present state of unrest. The paper says the movement was organized by a serious body of business men who have had enough of it and want no more.

Riot at Cock Fight.

Kingston, March 15.—There was a stirring time at a cock fight pulled off at Gananoque and it is the talk of the town. Two mains were held, one on an island near the town. Several owners became so much excited over the affair and so proud of the fighting abilities of their pets that they made a trip across the ice at night to settle matters. A free-for-all fight occurred among the men afterwards. One man was so badly battered up that a doctor was called.

MARKET REPORTS.

Liverpool and Chicago Wheat Futures Close Higher—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, March 14.—Wheat prices here felt the effects to-day of a squeeze in the March delivery at Liverpool. Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, March 14.—A feature of the foreign demand to-day was the large number of orders received for Manitoba spring wheat for March-April shipment at a premium of 3c to 4c per bushel over May-June bids, but owing to the difficulty in getting wheat forward from Fort William and Port Arthur, exporters did not accept any of the bids made. The demand for May-June shipment was fair, and as bids were 1½d to 3d higher, sales of a few loads were made. A good steady business continues to be done in oats for local consumption. The foreign demand for spring wheat flour was better at an advance in prices, which resulted in some fair sized sales being made for shipment right up to June, and some of the large importing houses want to contract up to September.

Woman's Power Over Man

Woman's most glorious endowment is the power to awaken and hold the pure and honest love of a worthy man. When she loses it and still loves on, no one in the wide world can know the heart agony she endures. The woman who suffers from weakness and derangement of her special womanly organism soon loses the power to sway the heart of a man. Her general health suffers and she loses her good looks, her attractiveness, her amiability and her power and prestige as a woman. Dr. R.V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N.Y., with the assistance of his staff of able physicians, has prescribed for and cured many thousands of women. He has devised a successful remedy for women's ailments. It is known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is a positive specific for the weaknesses and disorders peculiar to women. It purifies, regulates, strengthens and heals. Medicine dealers sell it. No honest dealer will advise you to accept a substitute in order to make a little larger profit.

IT MAKES WEAK WOMEN STRONG; SICK WOMEN WELL.

Spied by Telephone.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 15.—Probably a dozen conversations between Clarence S. Darrow, chief counsel of the McNamaras, and John R. Harrington, a Chicago attorney associated with him, were taken down through the aid of a telephonic device, according to District Attorney John P. Fredericks.

The conversations which took place in Harrington's room in a local hotel, all occurred since the indictment of Darrow on a charge of bribery, said the district attorney. Several days ago it was announced by the district attorney's office that Harrington would be a witness for the state when the trial of Darrow is called.

District Attorney Fredericks stated that Harrington had secured a room at the hotel a month ago under an assumed name. The instrument was hidden behind a picture and stenographers in an adjoining room recorded the conversation, according to the prosecutor.

PETERBOROUGH FRIDAY MARCH 15 1912

THREE SUFFRAGIST MEASURES LIKELY TO BE INTRODUCED

Allan Studholme Has Comprehensive Bill to Bring Before the Legislature.

TWO OTHER PROPOSALS

TORONTO, MARCH 15—The women of Ontario cannot complain that the Ontario Legislature is denying them plenty of variety in schemes to get the franchise extended. There is now before the House practically every imaginable plan from unrestricted "votes for women' 'to a very carefully designed half measure that may squeeze through the members in spite of the prevailing "anti" sentiment.

First of all—and most sweeping — comes the A. E. Fripp measure, which came to an early and bitter end at last session. Undismayed by its precedents, Mr. Allan Studholme, of Hamilton East, has the bill in his pocket for this session. If he can get a seconder — in its goes. Otherwise it may have to slumber until another year.

Unrestricted Suffrage.

The Fripp measure was unrestricted suffrage for women, plus a lot of other things, like an eight hour day suggestion which the Prime Minister considered inopportune and therefore ruled out for the time being. Mr. Fripp championed the right of franchise for married or unmarried women, widows or spinsters in Provincial elections, and he reached his goal by the simple expedient of striking out the word "male" in the Ontario Voters' Act and inserting the word "persons."

Municipal Elections.

Of the two other bills dealing specifically with the women's suffrage question, one, introduced by T. R. Whiteside of East Toronto, affects the status of the sex in municipal elections only, but would confine its operation to cities of 100,000 or over, thus eliminating Hamilton, Ottawa and London and making provision for Toronto alone.

As the Ontario Voters' Act stands at present a widow or spinster owning sufficient property is qualified to vote at municipal contests, but a married woman owning property is denied the franchise.

To balance up what he and many other supporters in the Legislature regard as an inequality and an absurdity, Mr. Whiteside will try to force his measure through. In doing so he has the support of the City Council of Toronto, and, it is understood, most of the Toronto members.

Favour Whiteside Act.

Then comes a third bill. It seeks to appease all sections of the Legislature, all classes of womankind and all and sundry objectors by extending to spinsters and widows—but not married women—the right to vote in Parliamentary elections.

Mr. W. McDonald of Centre Bruce, is the father of this novelty and is confident of obtaining a favourable opinion of the House upon it.

Between the three, the official lobbyists of the suffrage associations support that of Mr. Whiteside, having comparatively little hope that Mr. Studholme will gain the day with his larger measure.

Miss Dorothy Williams, younger sister of Mrs. Joseph Leiter, and Major Archie Butt, aide to President Taft, whom rumour says will wed Major Butt, is one of the best known figures in Washington and represents the President at receptions to illustrious visitors, etc.

FIRE IN CANOE FACTORY

The excessive heat ignited the dust and other inflammable matter which had accumulated about the smoke stack and ran along between the double floors of the first storey. The Fire Department were telephoned for at 4.50 and on arrival of the brigade the employees of the factory were discovered to have partially overcome the threatened conflagration by chopping up the floor with an axe and using pails of water. The operation of extinguishing the fire, which was about finished when the brigade arrived, was soon completed by the men and very little damage resulted.

"PROTESTANT QUITTERS"

The Rev. W. C. Riddiford will take for his subject next Sunday evening, "Protestant Quitters," a message to men of to-day to be loyal to what they profess to believe, and to ring true.

Owing to the rush of work, Mr. Patrick Morgan has postponed his promised visit to Peterborough, for a little while at least, but the Rev. W. T. Graham, D.D., pastor of the First Ave. Baptist church, Toronto, has kindly consented to take Mr. Morgan's place, and will give a lecture in the Park street Baptist church on Tuesday evening, April 2nd, at 8.15, on "Ignatius Loyola," the famous founder of the Jesuit society.

Pitched Battle Between Sheriff's Posse and Allen Gang Results in Casualties on Both Sides

TROOPS CALLED OUT

Special to The Examiner:

HILLSVILLE, VA., MARCH 15.—There was a pitched battle this morning between the Sheriff's posse and the Allan Mountaineers, who yesterday shot and killed a Judge, Sheriff, and two other Judiciary officials, who were trying one of their number. There were casualities on both sides, it is stated here, although both parties are still intrenched in their mountain ridges. The Sheriffs people are being assisted by bandits of other clans who have life-long grudges against the murderous Allens. Troops are being sent here from Charleston. It is an unprecedented situation in the history of this State.

Died As Result Of Frost Bites

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, ONT., MARCH 15.—Corneill Smith, aged 50, a prominent Ekfrid farmer, is dead at his home, from the results of terrible frost bites. While out watering his stock during the zero spell, some weeks ago, his horses bumped into him, and threw him, head first, against a pump, where he lay unconscious for hours.

"Not Getting On At All"

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, ENG., MARCH 15.—While there was no joint conference of the miners and mine-owners, Premier Asquith met each section separately, and declared there were hopeful signs. On the other hand, Sir Hugh Bell, the leading Colliery owner said disconsolately: "We are not getting on at all."

DIES IN HIS CHAIR

LONDON, ONT., MARCH 15.—Mr. D. McIntyre, aged 84, who lived alone at Wyoming, was found sitting, dead, in his chair before the fire. His clothing was badly burned, apparently from hot ashes which had fallen from his pipe, which he still held in his hand. It is supposed he was stricken very suddenly with heart failure.

Anthracite Coal Miners of Pennsylvania and Ohio May Go Out on First of Next Month

NEGOTIATIONS ARE OFF

Special to The Examiner.

NEW YORK, MARCH 15.—John P. White, the president of the United Mine Workers of Amercia, stated this afternoon that all negotiations with anthracite coal operators were off. He said: "I look for a general suspension of work on April first."

This statement, made following the conference this morning, makes the situation more serious looking than heretofore anticipated. It means that the coal miners of Pennsylvania and Ohio, on which Ontario, as well as the States depends for coal, will probably go on a general strike next month.

New Finding In Fishing Statute

Examiner Special:

OTTAWA, MARCH 15.—That parties interested in fishing on Lake Erie have sufficient influence with the United States Senate to prevent the placing of a close season for fishing on these international waters, was stated by the Maritime Department to-day in answer to the protests of Game Warden Tinsley of Ontario, to the effect that Lake Erie was being depleted of fishing because there were no close seasons on either side. The Maritime Department said the close season on the Canadian side was removed because the United States Senate, as aforesaid, had held up the close season registration on the American side since nineteen hundred and eight. It will likely be made an international question.

DEBATE IN ST. PETER'S SCHOOL

"That Germany has prospects of a brighter future than England" was the subject of a closely-contested debate at St. Peter's School yesterday afternoon. The affirmative was upheld by Masters Harold White and Charlie Henry, the negative by Stanley O'Brien and Butler Hickey. The progressive policy of the German Government was ably presented by the affirmative, especially with regard to technical education and forestry. The negative pointed out England's advantage on account of her naval supremacy, mild climate, ad commanding commercial position.

The delivery of all four youthful speakers was excellent. The decision was given in favour of the affirmative.

"My boy Frank seemed weak-chested, and took a very severe cold," writes Mrs. D. Stevens, Nisga, Man. No treatment is so thorough and effective as a cure for croup and bronchitis.

C.G.E. COMPANY BUYS TEN ACRES OF LAND ON PARK ST. NORTH OF THEIR PROPERTY

LAND SPECULATORS TRIED TO BUY IT

The Canadian General Electric Company has purchased the ten acre lot immediately north of their present property, extending from Park street through to the boundary road. This fact, combined with the despatches to the effect that the company intends to expend a quarter of a million dollars on their plant in Peterborough and Toronto will be welcome intelligence to the citizens of Peterborough, as it is expected that Peterborough will receive a good share of this expenditure.

The property purchased here recently, fronts on Park street and is separated from the rest of the company's ground by what is known as the Edison Lane. It was purchased from the Chamberlain Estate, the reported price being in the neighbourhood of $12,000.

Mr. E. G. Patterson, general superintendent of the works here, simply corroborated the report, remarking that the company might need it in the future and purchased it now when a fair price was possible.

Ottawa Firm Wanted It.

It is stated by a gentleman interested in real estate that about six weeks ago an Ottawa man representing the P. McNulty company of Windsor and Ottawa looked over the land and made an offer of $10,000 with the intention of dividing it into building lots. In addition, several local gentlemen had practically decided to make an offer for it when overtures were opened with the C. G. E. Company, who closed the deal, it is stated, at an advance of $2,000 over the offer made by the Ottawa people.

It is thought that the company may in time secure the closing of the present Edison Lane and have a street opened at the rear of the lots that front on aPtterson street.

Real Estate Men Pleased.

Several real estate men expressed themselves as highly pleased with this move on the part of the company, and look forward to further developments and extensions to the present plant of the company at a future date, in addition to the work that will be begun this year, to which reference has already been made in the local press. The real estate men consider that this will mean additional interest being directed to property in the south end and will strengthen the confidence in the whole city's development.

Mr. Patterson stated that there was nothing new in regard to the use of this property, but there is no doubt that it will prove of value as the local works expand.

The company now can boast of a frontage on Park street from Albert almost to Patterson street. The new property has a frontage of 220 feet on Park street, according to one estimate. The company's big block of land extends half way along Albert street.

NO INCINERATOR THIS YEAR—COUNCIL WOULD HAVE TO GET PEOPLE'S ASSENT

Could Issue Debentures for $5,000 But This Would Not Pay Cost of Land and Plant—Property Committee Still Has Hopes.

SUGGESTION OFFERED

The solution of the garbage collecting scheme advanced a step at a meeting of the Property committee of the Council last night, which is more fully reported in another column. This has proved a knotty problem for the reason that Ald. Duncan has been unable to find a suitable place for the disposal of the city's refuse, and the cost of an incinerator exceeds the sum the Council could expend without going to the people. Mayor Bradburn attempted to find a way out by suggesting that tenders be called for the collecting of garbage from a defined district, with the contractor to find a place where the garbage may be dumped and thus disposed of.

A motion to this effect was carried last night and tenders must be handed in by Friday, March 29.

The method of collecting the money from those residents who benefit from the service is also to be determined. Thus far the committee has met nothing but difficulties in its endeavour to prepare a proposal to present to the Council. The latest suggestion may be productive of a solution.

The committee made no appointment of a sanitary inspector, but a meeting will be called in the near future for that purpose.

BAD STORM IS RAGING

Toronto Despatch Says the Whole Country Seems to be Paralyzed With Trains Stalled Everywhere

WIRES IN TROUBLE

Special to The Examiner.

TORONTO, MARCH 15.—Draw a circle of a two hundred mile radius, with this city as a centre, and you have a section of North America, that is veritably in the grip of one of the worst snowstorms of this winter. From Chicago to Montreal, and from North Bay to New York, the whole country seems to be paralyzed, with stalled trains and grounded telegraph and power wires. Trains from all directions are hours late. Very few wires are working. Observatory officials say it should be over to-night and a quick thaw will probably immediately follow.

Situation Is Serious In England

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, ENG., MARCH 15.—The situation is a serious one in some coal districts this evening, where the miners are riotous because of inadequate strike pay.

A Board Of Inquiry

OTTAWA, MARCH 15.—After a conference between Messrs. Murdock and Berry, the representatives of the trainmen and conductors, and Hon. T. W. Crothers, the Minister of Labour, this morning regarding the proposal of the Grand Trunk Railway to reduce the wages on the branch lines. It was decided that Messrs. Murdock and Berry go to Montreal immediately to get a statement from the company as to exactly what they would do. If the company persists, the government will likely appoint a Board of Inquiry.

FOR BALDNESS

This Treatment Costs Nothing if It Fails.

We want you to try three large bottles of Rexall "93" Hair Tonic on our personal guarantee that we will refund your money for the mere asking if it does not give you absolute satisfaction. That's proof of our faith in this remedy, and it should indisputably demonstrate that we know what we are talking about when we say that Rexall "93" Hair Tonic will grow hair except where baldness has been of such long duration that the roots of the hair are entirely dead.

We are basing our statements upon what has already been accomplished by the use of Rexall "93" Hair Tonic. We believe that what it has done for thousands of others it will do for you. In any event you cannot lose anything by giving it a trial on our liberal guarantee. Two sizes, 50c. and $1.00. Is Sickness A Habit?

With many sickness undoubtedly becomes to some extent a habit. They have "bilious spells," "sick headaches," "attacks of indigestion." Why not shake loose from these ailments and know once more the joy of good health?

It takes a little will power. You may have to deny yourself some luxuries which do not agree with you, but it is worth while to be well and to prolong life. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills will help you, because they act definitely and directly on the liver and thereby remove the cause of biliousness, headache and indigestion.

Stir up the liver by taking one Kidney-Liver pill occasionally at bedtime and you will free yourself of many annoying ills, the temper will be less irritable and you will find more joy in living.

THE MANITOBA ASSURANCE CO.

A good reputation is a good asset. A firm holding a good record in the community for a generation or so commands patronage, as the public know they can be absolutely relied upon. Just so in the insurance world. The Manitoba Assurance Company for twenty odd years (as the great Company behind it has done for generations) has settled and paid its losses and generally treated the public in such a way as to have earned a great and most enviable reputation, such as has made it a household word for honest and square dealing. Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unparalleled."

FRIDAY, MARCH 15, 1912

GREAT GROWTH.

The population of the three middle west provinces, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, have rapidly increased in the past ten years, and it is regrettable to say, considerably at the expense of Ontario. On April 1st, 1901, the population of these three provinces was 419,000 ;the next five years it practically doubled—808,843. On June 1, 1911, five years later, the increase had created a total population of 1,332,709. The wheat production of these three provinces has grown from a total 17 million bushels in 1895, to 194 millions of bushels in 1911. If this rate of increase is maintained, these provinces will, by 1915 or 1916, be producing 400 million bushels of wheat.

PROSPEROUS CANADA.

The budget presented in Parliament adds another chapter to the record of the extraordinary material progress Canada is making, and has been making for the past decade and a half. It shows a revenue for the past fiscal year of 136 millions of dollars, exactly a hundred millions of dollars more than the total revenue of 1896. It shows a surplus of 39 million dollars, or 3 million dollars more than the total revenue of the Dominion fifteen years ago. It is evident that the country is still benefitting from the results attendant upon, if not entirely due to, the Liberal administration, from 1896 to 1911. The record of this period is one to be regarded with satisfaction and pride. For the past sixteen years under Liberal administration, the total surpluses have amounted to 250 millions, an average of $16,600,000 per year. During that period, although the large sum of 250 millions of dollars had been expended upon capital account, there has been an addition of only 77 millions to the national debt. Fifteen years ago the total trade of Canada amounted to only 257 millions of dollars. For the calendar year, ended with last November, the total trade of Canada was 817 millions. Under the Liberal regime the exports of agricultural produce of Canada to Great Britain have increased from 13 millions to 61 millions, a nearly five-fold increase: and last year Canada's export trade to Great Britain alone was 136 millions, equal to our export trade to all countries in 1897. In 1896, Canada's exports of manufactories totalled 9 millions, as compared with an export of Canadian manufacturers last year of 35 millions. Not only in the purely material side, as revealed in the public administration of our affairs has Canada achieved remarkable progress, but also in every department of national activity. Canada measures greatly larger in every way to-day than she did fifteen, or even, ten, years ago. We have achieved larger things under Liberal administration, and there seems to be no surcease of progress under Conservative administration, especially in regard to revenue and trade. If there had been a falling off in these regards it could not be placed against the present Government, for it is too new to office to be responsible for a falling off, as it is too new to office to be given credit for the prosperous conditions in which it finds the country. The present Government deserves credit in this, that it has accepted the fiscal policy of the Liberal Government. It has not disturbed the tariff; it has accepted it as it has accepted the results of it. We do not expect wonders from the new Government, but the country will be well pleased if its administration, long or short, yields such splendid results as came from fifteen fat years of Liberal government.

The worst thing that can be urged against the French language controversy is that it is responsible for this Toronto Star atrocity: "There's one fine thing about Dr. Sproule's French prayers; they're always Hansard."

A NEW WHEAT.

The Canadian West is destined to take a leading place among the wheat-growing countries of the world, even in spite of the early frosts, which sometimes threaten crop failure, lesser or greater. But there are indications that a variety, which has been developed of such early maturing quality as to eliminate pretty thoroughly the danger of injury by frost. A Mr. Seager of Rosthern, Saskatchewan, has won a $1,-000 prize for the best wheat grown on the continent of North America, and the Ottawa Free Press remarks upon the significance of the fact that Canadian wheat lands, in the hands of comparatively few farmers, have surpassed the wheat lands of the western United States, backed by a whole generation of experience and unlimited capital. The Free Press says:

"But this is not the most significant feature of the competition. Its economic meaning is destined to be profound. The prize-winning wheat was a new brand, called "Marquis." No wheat grown will ripen so rapidly as this. At one test at Brandon it matured in 116 days. Another year it ripened in 99 days, the character of the season having everything to do with it.

"What does this mean? The Western farmers can best appreciate it. It means that a much shorter wheat season is possible, and yet with results of the most satisfactory kind. The danger from early frosts will be minimized, and this item bulks very large in the prospects of each season. It means further, that the wheat-growing area can be extended by millions of acres, and every agriculturist knows that only a fraction of the arable land he yet been touched by the plow.

The prize wheat, too, yielded at the rate of 80 2-3 bushels an acre. How many more millions of bushels, and consequently millions of dollars, would follow the general adoption of "Marquis" wheat can hardly be estimated.

It is matter for congratulation that the prize-winner ascribes the credit of his splendid venture to Dr. Saunders, of the Dominion Experimental Farm, both for the seed grain selected and for the up-to-date methods employed.

If what is claimed for the "Marquis" wheat is true, it will dislocate from first place the Red Fife wheat which owes its origin to a resident of Peterborough County. Red Fife has long been the general name of a specific type of wheat, the best in the world—"No. 1 Manitoba Hard". But we shall willingly see Red Fife take second place if the new wheat will, as it promises to do, if the claims made for it are justified, revolutionize wheat growing in Canada. The "Marquis" wheat may have the early ripening and heavy yielding qualities, but unless it has the milling properties of Red Fife, it will not easily displace it.

MAKING IT PLAIN.

(Woodstock Sentinel-Review.)

The Orangemen of Vancouver have cabled a message to Ulster in which these words occur:

"Canada taught the priestly machine-manipulators a lesson last September, and, if necessary, will give the hordes of Jesuits another and a more effective lesson."

The feature of this statement that is most notable is its unrestricted frankness. The issue last September was supposed to be the reciprocity agreement between Canada and the United States. What that issue had to do with priestly machine-manipulators or Jesuit hordes it is not easy to see. It was largely a matter of prices. The Liberals complained during the campaign, and since that their opponents did not play the game fairly, but that, while professing to decide one issue, they were really engaged in raising another. The Orangemen of Vancouver do not seem to make any bones about it. Their message may not have much effect on the fate of Home Rule, but it is important as a contribution to the history of Canadian politics.

EVEN $50 JOB IS WELCOMED

LONDON, ONT., MARCH 14.—Mr. Thomas Gillean, jeweller, was notified to-day that his services as caretaker of the tower clock at the London Custom House would no longer be required after March 31. Mr. Victor Ferris succeeds to ..e position, which carries with it the salary of fifty dollars per year.

An amusing and perhaps a significant, feature of Mr. Gillean's dismissal is that on the back of the letter from the Chief Architect of the Borden Government appears an extract from another letter, copied by mistake. It is as follows:

"For Mr. Geo. Howe—I am sure that you can often put small jobs in his way, or larger, as he can handle them. He is an old citizen, and deserves every consideration. It will be a personal favour to me.—Yours truly, R. Tripp."

HOW COMPLICATED ELECTION COMPLICATES ADMINISTRATION

(The Globe.)

The Right Hon. R. L. Borden and his colleagues are afraid to go home in the dark. At every rustle of the tree-tops, at every sound in the underbrush, at every turn in the road there is evidence of timidity and irresolution. Caution is a good quality in Governments new or Governments old, but it is not caution that sways the Borden Ministry; it is fear. The progress of the session now rapidly drawing to an end at Ottawa has been marked by example after example of the indecision and lack of driving power that must ultimately prove the undoing of the Government.

The ne cessere difficulty was temporarily disposed of by the device of an appeal for a judicial interpretation of the power of Parliament; the task of formulating a naval policy was put off till a more convenient season. The extension of the civil service rules to the outside service was deferred till the service had been purged of Liberals, a process that goes forward increasingly. The consumers of the West, who have been insistently calling for tariff reductions on agricultural implements; the manufacturers in certain lines, who have been demanding that the pledge of adequate protection be adhered to; the iron and steel interests, which have been making strong representations as to the necessity for the renewal of the bounties, have all been told that action has been deferred till the Tariff Commission is formed and gets to work.

In the few things undertaken there has been much trouble for the Government. On the boundary and Manitoba school issues seven of the Nationalist-Conservatives from Quebec bolted. Mr. Bourassa, who so recently as September was hailed as one of the leaders of the party, is denouncing the betrayal of the Nationalist cause by Messrs. Monk, Pelletier and Nantel, who were chosen to guard it within the Cabinet. The Grain Act also caused a bolt from the Government, two of the Eastern Conservatives voting against it. The measure has satisfied no one, and is likely to make active enemies among both farmers and dealers. The measure for the granting of aid toward road-building awakened no enthusiasm. Clause six ,which confers upon the Minister of Railways the power to build highways in any Province with the consent of the Provincial authorities, is to direct an intrusion upon the rights and powers of the municipalities and the Provincial authorities that the opposition to it in the Commons is certain to be continued, and perhaps more effectively, in the Senate and in the country.

It will be with a feeling of real relief that Ministers will hear the prorogation message. They have discovered that the alliance of the Big Interests with the Orange Imperialists and the anti-British Nationalists, which proved so effective in defeating the Laurier Government, was essentially a destructive force, and is of very little use in constructive political work .It is altogether likely that Mr. Borden and his colleagues will spend a large part of the summer in screwing up their courage to the point of defying the Quebec Nationalists on the navy issue as well as on the school question, and in determining whether tariff revision, when it comes, shall be planned for the benefit of the Big Interests or of the "clamorous consumers," who have earned the scorn of Messrs. Ames and Cockshutt and others of the high-protectionist wing. By November the Ministry may have mustered up courage to go forward confidently even in the dark.

W. H. DENHAM PRESIDENT OF PETERBORO' BALL CLUB

STOCK IS ALLOTTED

At a meeting of the provisional directors of the Peterborough Baseball Club, Limited, held last night, the election of officers for the year took place with the following result:

President—W. H. Denham.
Vice-President—E. G. Patterson.
Treasurer—E. C. MacLeod.
Secretary—W. S. Davidson.
Executive committee— E. Disautel, Dan. McCabe, Dr. Wightman and Secretary Davidson.

Stock has been allotted to the subscribers and notices will be sent out immediately. Payments may be made to the treasurer at the Bank of Nova Scotia.

The contract with Manager Curtis Templin was ratified and the report of the delegates to the Canadian League annual meeting received and approved.

WESTERBY AND RYAN TO HAVE BOUT HERE

It was announced to-day that Harry Westerby, the clever Toronto lightweight, and George Ryan, the well-known 126 pounder, of Rochester, have been matched to box 12 rounds, in the Grand Opera House, here, on Tuesday, March 26th. They will be the top-liners in a splendid programme of bouts, which have been arranged for this city. Efforts are being made to match Shaughnessy of Detroit, and Billy Jacobs, of Toronto, for 10 rounds, at 145 pounds as the semi-final windup and it is expected that this match will be arranged to-morrow, which will give local fight fans two international battles of importance. In addition, there will be two preliminary bouts between good boys.

Local followers of the game will be tickled at the chance to see the Westerby-Ryan go. Negotiations have been carried on for months to bring these boys together, and it should be a battle royal all the way. Both are clever, two-handed fighters, with good records, and the meeting between the two should prove about as interesting a fistic exhibition as has ever been staged in this city. Shaughnessy and Jacobs both have good reputations and a match between the two should be well worth seeing.

HOCKEY HAPPENINGS

The "We Never Sleep" crowd and the 'Hungry Seven' tried to settle their differences at Brock street last night and as a result there were two hungry sevens, instead of one, when it was all over. The reason was that the teams, who had played a 7-7 tie in the first game were playing last night for an oyster supper, the losers of course to finance the cost of the bivalve banquet. Unfortunately, neither team could score and as a result there was no supper. So evenly were they matched that they battled for the whole hour without a goal being scored on either side. Orville Kennedy refereed the battle satisfactorily. The teams were as follows:

"Hungry Seven."— Goal, 'Hunter' Henon; point, 'Tiny' Trotter; cover, 'Cannon-ball' Allen; rover, 'Alice' Davidson; centre, 'Giant' Bain; left wing, 'Chinaman' Brummell; right wing, 'Go-some' Gilgour.

TORONTO, MARCH 14. — Jas. T. Sutherland of Kingston, manager of the Frontenac Hockey Club, was in town to-day on his way back from London, Ont., with his full line of shoes, for, like President Wettlaufer of the O.H.A., James is a shoe traveler, when the hockey season is over. When asked by The News as to his opinion of the Winnipeg-Eaton games, the Kingston man said:

"As a member of the O.H.A. Executive, I regret very much that our champions met with such disaster in their quest for the Allan Cup. I cannot help feeling, however, that the Frontenacs would have been much more successful, due to the fact that they are a better "big ice" team than Eatons.

"The champions, to my mind, did not this year demonstrate their superiority as a 'big ice' team on any one occasion. At Stratford, on the large sheet of ice there, they just managed to win out by eight to six from a rather weak team. Their only other league game on big ice was at Kingston, when Frontenacs gave them a pretty fair trimming, the score being eight to three.

Weak on Large Ice.

"On the small Excelsior rink, Eatons are a great team, but on big ice Frontenacs outclass them greatly. The season's records of the two teams show that. Including the Cup games, Eatons have suffered four defeats. Frontenacs on the other hand, have met with defeat only once this season, on soft ice and a small rink.

"Next season the Toronto teams will have a big sheet of ice at the new Arena, and you will find that the O.H.A. winners will be more accustomed to the big sheet, and will therefore put up a better game when going after the Allan Cup.

"I do not wish to underestimate Eatons in the least, but I'm sure that had the senior O.H.A. games been all played on big ice this year it would have been a fairer test of real hockey ability all round. However, it's all over now for this season. May the best team win out in 1913—and may it be the Frontenacs.

There is another challenge in for the Clarke-Graham Junior Cup. Yesterday the Buckhorn team announced their desire to play off for the trophy and may be accommodated, if the necessary arrangements can be made. It looks as if the games will have to be pulled off on soft ice, unless the thermometer takes a sudden drop. The first games in the series will be played on Tuesday night, when the Midgets meet the Northern Lights, and the Thistles play Lakefield. The final game was announced for next Thursday night. But if Buckhorn is admitted, still another game will be necessary to decide the issue.

Jack Thirnbeck's Midgets had a lively workout last night with practically two full teams in line, and they will be in good shape when they meet the Northern Lights in the first game of the junior series on Tuesday night.

There is trouble in the hockey tournament for the Hughes Cup at Lindsay. It is alleged that Peter Thornton and Quinn Butterfield, of the Orillia Juniors played for the Lindsay C. P. R. team, and the Excelsiors whom they defeated by 5 to 3, have protested the game.

The Adamson and Dobbin team won the rubber from Parker's Dye Works, last night, when they defeated the Charlotte Street establishment for the second time this season, by 4 goals to 3, in a well-played and exciting game, in which the score was tied several times. Bill Short, for Adamson and Dobbin, was the best man on the ice, winning the game by his end to end rushes which resulted in scores. Nuttress, Patterson and Flowers of the champion Bell Telephone Mercantile League team, played with the losers.

At Syracuse on Wednesday night, Manager Shannon of Cleveland, declared that the Americas had violated their agreement in putting a team of Canadian cracks on the ice. He said: "We are not afraid of them, but go to Boston to-night to oppose the B. A. A. team for the championship of the United States. We are not at all pleased to be forced to contend with an all-star Canadian aggregation. We will not consider the team as opponents for the national title, as the men are not Americans, and because already we have played against pretically the sme team in several other cities." In summing up the all-stars as Canadians he omitted to tell how long his "Yanks" had lived across the broder. Looks like a case of squealing when the better team appeared.

Curling Notes

The local curlers went down to defeat by one shot at the hands of the Norwood organization, who invaded this city yesterday. They were here in the strength of five rinks, and the games which they played, while fast in spots, could not be designated as good curling by any means. The ice was in excellent condition and so were the local quartettes. But as they did not encounter very much opposition, they allowed their curling enthusiasm to cool considerably, with the result that the summary at the close of the games showed a deficit of one shot in favour of the visitors. As it was, the homesters grabbed three out of the five games that were played, but the marginal tally which they secured was not sufficient to counteract the slump which Skip Bowes' rink encountered. G. B. Stevenson's rink proved to be another Jonah, but no discredit is due him for the two shot lead which his opponent got away with. Neither side showed good curling form. In curling retrospect, the match might be classed as a friendly game and nothing more. It lacked the vim and dash which is usually associated with good curling, a circumstance which was superseded by joviality and happy-go-lucky style of play. However, there was no stake to figure on nor jewellery of any kind to contest for. They were out for a good time and they got it, even if they did have to divert from the path of good curling.

Following is the summary of the games:

Peterborough		Norwood
W. D. Campbell		F. Findlay
Skip	14	Skip	13

Majority for Norwood—1 shot.

Progress of the Bonspiel.

The progress of the bonspiel has been somewhat torpid the last few days, this fact being accounted for by the presence in the city of visiting clubs and also the absence of a number of the local rinks on a similar mission. All that remains now of the bonspiel are the semi-finals and finals of the Consolation event. These will in all probability be played this week. Skips. Read, Fitzgerald, Foote and Renwick are now in the fifth round of this fixture and there will be some strong rivalry for a place in the finals.

Baseball News

When the ambitious young bush leaguer says good-bye to his parents and walks to the depot with populace fighting for the honour of carrying his bag, he begins to feel the big league atmosphere filling his lungs.

Day by day the folks back home watch the papers waiting for the lad to break into the headlines.

Alas, the pity of it! How slender is that chance.

In the last ten years 3,200 bushers have been tried out at the spring training camps. Less than 200 have made good. Fifteen out of every 16 go trailing back to the minors, unhonoured and unsung.

It is a terrific game they go against, and although they get as fair a chance as the limited season permits, the difficulties they must surmount are numerous and formidable.

Of the 15 who go back, one gets another chance in some succeeding year. The rest remain or drop down in the scale.

And of 14 out of every 16 who never get another chance the managers say 13 failed for one reason alone — they couldn't think.

"Bunty" Coming To Peterborough

Local theatre-goers will be glad to learn that the famous Scotch comedy, "When Bunty Pulls the String" will be seen at the Grand Opera House here, on Wednesday, March 27th. This will be the same company as appears in Toronto next week, and the presentation will be one of the big events of the season.

"THE SECOND CHANCE" by Mrs. McClung, and "THE TRAIL OF '98" by Robert Service, are on sale at 50 cents each at TREBILCOCK BROS. Only a few copies of each book. dtf-57

PRESENTED WITH AN ADDRESS

The members of the Independent Order of Oddfellows residing in Peterborough, have sent the following address to Hon. W. H. Hoyle, P.G.M., and P.G.R., Independent Order of Oddfellows:

Hon. W. H. Hoyle, P.G.M. and P. G.R., Independent Order of Oddfellows:

Dear Brother,—The members of the Independent Order of Oddfellows in the City of Peterborough desire to congratulate you heartily and fraternally upon your elevation to the important position in the Government of the Province of Ontario of Speaker of the House of Assembly.

We are gratified with your appointment because we are pleased to see one eminently fitted for the position, and one in whom we feel a deep personal interest, selected for such an important post, and also because we are happy to see a prominent member of our beloved Order receive recognition from his fellow members in the Legislature.

You have given long, able and valuable services to our Order, and while we know that you take the same interest in its welfare that you always did, we are pleased to know that you have been enabled to give similar valuable services to our province, and that in your new office you will be in a position to render services still more valuable.

We hope you will be long spared to serve our country and our Order, and that greater opportunities and higher honours await you in the future.

Signed on behalf of the Oddfellows of Peterborough.

W. G. ROBINSON,
Secretary, Otonabee Lodge, No. 13.
J. M. WHITE,
Secretary Peterboro' Lodge, No. 111.
12th March, 1912.

OBITUARY

MRS. JAMES FARLEY.

There passed away last evening a very well known resident of the city in the person of Mrs. James Farley, relict of the late James Farley, who formerly resided on Simcoe street.

SECURED LARGER PREMISES

The large double store at the corner of Aylmer and McDonnel street, formerly owned by Messrs. J. J. Turner has been purchased by J. W. Boorman, the East City baker and confectioner.

Mr. Boorman's business has grown to such an extent that he has found it necessary to seek larger premises. The property is in every way suited for the business and being situated in the centre of a large residential section of the city, the dainty products that the firm handle should prove a boon to the citizens in that section.

The premises will undergo considerable alteration to meet the demands of the trade. An up-to-date oven with the necessary machinery for a modern bake shop will be installed.

The stores will be fitted up one for bread, cake and all kinds of confectionery, the other as a high-class ice cream parlour. The store in East City will be used as a branch store, the firm's trade in that section being so large as to make it necessary to keep it in operation.

The new stores will be open to the public on Saturday and should receive considerable patronage.

Collection Of Garbage And Duties Of Sanitary Inspector

Discussed by Property Committee —Mayor Suggests a Means of Solving the Difficulty of Disposal

SAFE FOR ASSESSOR

A meeting of the Property Committee of the City Council was held last night with Ald. Duncan presiding, and with Mayor Bradburn and Ald. Graham, Brown and Morgan present. Dr. McPherson was also present.

The question of securing a safe for the assessor, Mr. Henry, was introduced. Ald. Duncan said a safe was required by Mr. Henry, who had taken over the office of the former Industrial Commissioner.

Moved by Ald. Brown, seconded by Ald. Graham, that the matter be left with the Mayor and the chairman.—Carried.

Ald. Graham suggested that there was a safe in good condition in the Oddfellows' Hall. It is worth about $800 or $700 and is capable of holding large books. There is also a safe in the Peterborough Canoe Company's old building. These may be considered.

Sanitary Inspectorship

The Sanitary Inspectorship was next dealt with. An application from Mr. W. R. Turner was received after the appointed time, but it was decided to open it. He offered to accept the duties at $700 a year, or if the position were combined with that of Plumbing Inspector he quoted a salary of $900.

After a casual discussion of the Plumbing Inspector's duties and the manner in which they are performed this subject was dropped.

Garbage Collecting.

Mayor Bradburn: "What are we going to do about the collecting of garbage?

Ald. Duncan—We have the plans here of an incinerator, which will cost about $5,500 without the property on which it would be built.

Ald. Graham—"That would be well over $6,000?

Ald. Morgan—Have we made any definite advancement since the last meeting?

Ald. Duncan—No; Mr. Williams will not give us any definite word about his dumping ground. We went two years ago to try to buy the property and shortly afterwards he bought it himself. I cannot think of any place where we could put the garbage.

Ald. Brown—"Could we not buy a piece of ground instead of renting it?"

Ald. Duncan—"There is no place without going out some distance."

Mayor Bradburn—"Do you see any place here similar to the locations in Guelph?"

Ald. Duncan—"No."

Ald. Graham—"What about a corner of the Hilliard farm?"

Ald. Duncan—"If we ever build a bridge across the river down here we might dispose of it on one of the islands."

Numerous suggestions were offered, some of them as mere jokes. The question has bothered the Committee for some time and there seems to be no way out.

Let a Contract.

Mayor Bradburn—"How would it be to get some one to take over the collecting of garbage and let him find a place to dispose of it?"

Ald. Duncan—"It would probably cost us more than if we built an incinerator. We could, however, ask for tenders.

Mayor Bradburn — "To my mind that seems the best way of working it out for a year. At the next elections we could present a by-law, asking for the money to build an incinerator.

Then the discussion diverged to the character of the refuse to be collected. Dr. McPherson distinctly stated that the garbage must be kept as dry as possible. Kitchen "slops" will not be tolerated. The health laws decide this and with the institution of a collection of garbage in the city Dr. McPherson feels that it should be conducted along sanitary lines. In short, what is known as "slops" will be out of the question.

Mayor Bradburn—"They are going to legislate until they drive the people out of the city."

Dr. McPherson—"You might as well train them in the right way. The Board of Health will demand sanitary methods.

Mayor Bradburn—We had better let the Board of Health take this over themselves and see what they would do with it.

No Incinerator This Year.

Mayor Bradburn—"I would suggest that in face of the fact that we cannot build an incinerator without going to the people that we consider something along the line I have indicated.

Then came up the question of the collection of the money.

Ald. Duncan—"In Guelph, the Sanitary Inspector makes the collections from each tenant.

Ald. Brown—"You cannot combine the work of Sanitary Inspector and Plumbing Inspector at that rate."

Ald. Morgan—"Let the contractor do the collecting and the Sanitary Inspector see that the work is properly done.

Mayor Bradburn—(After consulting the statutes with the City Clerk)—"We could issue debentures up to $5,000 to buy land and build an incinerator, but that would not pay the expense. I think we should ask for tenders for the collection of garbage in the district already outlined, the collector to arrange for the disposal of it. We might find out the number of persons who will likely be included in the territory. In the meantime we can make up our minds how we are going to collect the money. We have three or four methods to choose from. Let us find out the cost of the work by tender, and if we can't get it done that way we will have to go out and get a place ourselves.

Ald. Morgan—"Why not let him make the collections himself?"

Mayor Bradburn—"How is he to know he is going to get his money?"

Dr. McPherson—"Give him the same support as if the city were doing the collecting.

In regard to the number of collections, Ald. Morgan said there should be two each week in the outskirts, during June, July, August and September.

A general discussion followed at this and was concluded by the chairman saying that the Mayor had a motion to move.

Ald. Graham—"What does he move?"

Mayor Bradburn—Hotels should have three collections a week."

Ald. Morgan—"You might as well cut out factories altogether. The collection from flats over stores was discussed and it was decided that those who desire more collections than those designated should make arrangements for the extra work. Printing offices, schools and churches will not be served, and there are no hospitals in the district outlined.

The district to be served has already been outlined as follows:

Smith street to the G. T. R. track to London street, to Reid street, to Dalhousie to the river.

The contemplated charges for collection will be as follows: For hotels, restaurants, fruit and fish stores, dry-goods, hardware and grocery stores, and boarding houses, 40 cents a month; for private dwellings, 15c. per month, the fees to be charged against owners lessees or occupiers of premises; the people served to provide their own boxes or barrels in which to keep garbage, refuse or ashes, and for each additional box or brrel over four collected at each round an additional 5c per box or barrel will be charged.

It was moved by Mayor Bradburn, seconded by Ald. Morgan, that the chairman be authorized to advertise for tenders for the collection and disposal of garbage, refuse and ashes, within the foregoing district, said garbage, etc., to be removed in vehicles approved of by the Sanitary Inspector, tenders to call for one year's service from May 1st, and will be received up to Friday, the 29th March.

The charges for collection of garbage, etc., herewith given may be amended when a tender for collection and disposal is accepted, and the number of premises to be served accurately arrived at.

Sanitary Inspector.

Ald. Duncan — "What about appointing a Sanitary Inspector?

Ald. Graham—"What are his duties to be?"

Dr. McPherson—"He would have to see that the milk by-law is carried out.

Ald. Graham—"That would mean that he would have to know something about cows."

Dr. McPherson—"Then there is the market, fruit stores, confectionery, and grocery stores, butcher shops, and slaughter houses. In brief all places where food is prepared and offered for sale. An inspection should also be made of premises from which milk comes."

Ald. Graham—"If those are his duties he should know something about the work.

Dr. McPherson—"You need a man who has good common sense. He could soon be instructed as to his duties and how to perform them.

Mayor Bradburn suggested that the appointment be deferred for a time, and no action was taken. The committee will likely meet again before the April meeting of the Council, to recommend one of the applicants for the position.

In Fear Of Consumption

To be entirely cured of a cold which threatened to become consumption naturally makes one think well of the treatment which helped to effect the cure.

In a letter just received from Mrs. Edson Brock, Trenholm, Que., the writer says: "I wish to tell you that I have used Dr. Chase's medicines with great success. I took a very bad cold and could not get rid of the cough. I felt so bad that I really thought I was going into consumption. I got well by using Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills also did me a lot of good. You may publish this if you wish, for many people already know what great good Dr. Chase's medicines have done. me."

To Speak In Buffalo

Rev. Canon Davidson, Rector of St. John's Church, will leave tomorrow for Buffalo, where he will assist in the special Lenten noon-day services all next week in St. Paul's church, under the auspices of the Protestant Episcopalian churches of that city. Services will be held each day throughout the week, and Rev. Canon Davidson is one of those chosen to give daily addresses. Owing to his absence from Peterborough there will be no services in St. John's church to-morrow, or on Tuesday and Thursday of next week. The pulpit of St. John's on Sunday will be occupied both morning and evening by Rev. Hornby of Trinity College, Toronto.

GEORGE ST. CHURCH CHOIR.

On the occasion of the first anniversary of the appointment of Mr. John H. Renwick and his lady as organist and soloist respectively of George Street Methodist Church, a little surprise was provided the members of the choir present at the weekly practise last night. At the close of the usual choral work, "the cup that cheers" was passed round, and a few complimentary remarks to the choir on the progress of musical study in the past year were indulged in by Mr. Renwick. The thoughtful act of Mr. and Mrs. Renwick was much appreciated by those present.

St. John's Choir Choral Recital

The last rehearsal but one of the series of rehearsals for the St. John's choir choral recital, to be presented in St. John's church next Tuesday, was held in the church last night. The singers acquitted themselves admirably, notwithstanding the strain of singing the many choruses from the "Messiah", Mendelssohn's "Come Let Us Sing" and Stainer's "Daughter of Jairus." The choir will be assisted by Miss Brock (contralto) and Dr. Park (solo violin.)

This event promises to be the great choral event of the season, and will appeal to all who are interested in oratorio works.

Peterboro' Men Buy Town Site

Messrs. Geo. Ruth, W. A. Austin, and C. H. Moore have purchased a townsite in Kerrobert, Sask., consisting of 160 acres. The town is 50 miles west of Saskatoon, and 93 miles from Calgary. It is on the C. P. R. line to Chicago. Mr. Ruth states that there are large numbers of men moving into the West, and nearly all of them are pretty well supplied with money. Some are out for speculative purposes but the majority are out to settle down and earn their livelihood by personal labour. The present rush of settlers is heavy and the movement this year from the east and south promises to reach record proportions.

Convert House Into A Store

Mr. H. C. Winch informed the Examiner, this morning, that his house opposite the Snowden House, and just west of the Green Music Company's building, will be converted into a store. It is not the intention to raze the present building, at present, but to renovate it and put in a window, for show purposes. It is understood that a clothing store will be opened in a short time in these premises, about the first of the month.

CHARGE WAS WITHDRAWN

The proceedings against James Mc Donald, who had a charge of non-support pending against him, was dropped. Both parties have agreed to settle the matter amicably between them.

The Lintonia On Scugog Water

Cottagers at Sturgeon Point, Pleasant Point and Sandy Point may look for an excellent boat service with good accommodation this year. A number of cottagers met yesterday afternoon at a meeting held in the Simpson House, when three different propositions were laid before them, the one presented by Capt. Gray, of the Str. Lintonia appearing to be the most favourable in every respect. The St. Lintonia is said to be a trim little steamer capable of carrying over 200 passengers. She is 83 feet long and has a 15 foot beam, and is cabaple of covering the distance between Lindsay and Sturgeon Point in an hour or less.

Mr. Wm. Flavelle, who was in attendance at the meeting urged upon Capt. Gray the necessity of giving good service and being courteous to passengers; also the advisability of having the boat always clean and tidy. It would greatly add to the appearance of the boat if a proper lighting system was installed.

The outcome of the meeting was that the cottagers assured Capt. Gray that he would have their support and patronage providing he gave first-class service. The rates and time table will be as far as possible the same as last year—Lindsay Warder.

HYDRANTS FREEZE UP.

The Recent Cold Snap Has Put a Number of Them Out of Business.

The Board of Works Department have been actively engaged during the past few days in the work of thawing out hydrants. The work is being accomplished by means of a steam engine. A number of the hydrants situated on George street and also a few in the outlying districts have succumbed to the evil effects of the recent cold snap. The hydrants as constructed, are of the self-draining type and are supposed to be immune from frost, but for reasons not expressly known, a number of them have failed to live up to their qualifications. The situation is not serious, however, and once thawed out, a recurrence of the trouble is not looked for.

PEOPLE OUTSIDE OF HASTINGS WANT ITS SHOP LICENSE CUT OFF

Some of the Hastings residents appear to be much incensed at the action of Norwood Council in memorialising the Provincial Government to have the shop license in that village cut off. This of course, was to be expected. People naturally resent any seeming interference with what they consider to be their own affair. And this perhaps is justifiable when it happens to be entirely their own affair. In this case, however, it is not. The matter concerns the entire district surrounding Hastings. Local option is now in force in all the municipalities adjacent, and it has been the opinion of temperance people for some time that this shop license should be removed. It was not, however, until the electors of Hastings voted upon the question and decided to retain the license system that the people outside decided to take action.

Read what The Campbellford Herald of the 29th of February had to say about the Hastings shop license:

"Rumours are afloat to the effect that a petition will be circulated in the district surrounding Hastings village and presented to the license commissioners asking that the shop license in that village be discontinued after the present year. Should the commissioners act in accordance with the petition there is no doubt that it would very materially work out to the interests of local option territory. If the petition is circulated it should receive the approval of all who wish to see the local option law carried out. Now that local option is law, let us endeavour to assist in maintaining it, and the removal of the Hastings liquir shop would be in the interests of the community."—Norwood Register.

"THE DOG IS NOT GUILTY" ASSERTED DEFENDANT IN POLICE COURT CASE

William Duncan Charged With Keeping Vicious Dog---Disclaims Ownership and a Broadside of Vocal Artillery Follows---Animal to be Destroyed.

Verbal fireworks featured the Police Court proceedings this morning the occasion being the presence in court of Mr. and Mrs. William Duncan. The former was charged with permitting a vicious dog to run at large. The latter, purporting to be the owner of the offender, was present, on behalf of the dog.

Miss Tumblyn testified to having been attacked by the animal while driving along Union street, in a cutter. The animal jumped into the sleigh, seized her furs, and wound up by absconding with two of the tails. She described the animal as being a white bulldog, but Duncan loudly asserted that it was a coach dog.

Refused to be Summoned.

Detective Newhall was next invited into the sanctum, especially provided for witnesses.

"Now, you know every dog in town," declared the Magistrate. "Tell us what you know about this one."

Detective Newhall—"No, I don't; but I do know that I have been after this dog for about twelve months," replied the sleuth.

The Detective's evidence proved to be detrimental to the dog's reputation. He asserted that it was dangerous to have the animal running at large. He was backed up in this by Chief Thompson, who affirmed that the canine offender had been responsible for several runaways, in addition to being a dangerous menace to pedestrians.

Duncan here interrupted the witness by declaiming his ownership of the dog. "My wife owns the dog," he asserted. At this juncture Mrs. Duncan stepped into the breach on behalf of the dog, and a wordy battle ensued.

Detective Newhall declared that he had tried to serve the defendant with a summons for two and a half days, and every time he went to the house they would put the lights out and turn the dog loose. One of the dogs was owned by William Duncan, and the other was supposed to be the property of Mrs. Duncan.

His Worship reserved judgment until to-morrow in order that Duncan may deliver the dog over to the police, who will dispose of it in the regular way. If he fails to do this a fine will result.

"The dog's not guilty and he won't be shot," asserted Mrs. Duncan, to the amusement of the Court.

Lindsay Man in Trouble.

James McFadden pleaded guilty to a charge of being drunk and disorderly. He claimed Lindsay as his home and attributed his downfall in the Electric City, yesterday, to the fact that he ran foul of a number of old friends, none of whom appeared in court. His disorderly conduct was confined to the Snowden House. It developed that McFadden is on the blacklist in Lindsay. He pleaded for leniency, mainly upon the grounds that five children were dependent upon him for support.

A fine of $2.00 and costs, amounting in all to $5.75, was imposed by the Court. He was give ten days to pay it in.

BEVERLY OF GRAUSTARK COMING

George Barr McCutcheon's novels are known to almost everyone, and their successful dramatization serves to present his beautiful heroines and dashing heroes in vivid living action, surrounded by all the accessories of picturesque scenes and handsome dressing. Add to those equivalents, good-looking women and men, and energetic action, with plenty of comedy and the average theatregoer has about all he wants to afford a perfectly satisfactory evening's entertainment.

All of these conditions exist in "Beverly," which is to be presented for the first time in this city at the Grand next Wednesday, March 20. The plot is well known. It tells of a principality not known in Geography, and of the men and women who are its history makers with an occasional American girl who goes on a visit to the Princess Yolive of Graustark, mixes herself up inextricably in affairs of state and ought is rewarded by winning the man she loves, the poor lowly mountaineer, to be punished with banishment, but Baldoe, who, it later transpires, is the exiled Prince Dantam of Dowsbergen, in disguise.

The production, which will be seen in this city, is the one from the Studebaker Theatre, Chicago, where it had a long spring engagement and met with an enthusiastic reception. It is now en route to a long engagement in New York, at one of the Broadway theatres.

Zam-Buk Does Cure Piles

Mrs. C. Hanson, wife of the proprietor of the Commercial Hotel, Poplar, B.C., suffered from piles for years. Went to doctor after doctor in vain. Finally went to Spokane and had an operation. Twelve months afterwards she was as bad again. She says, "One day I read about Zam-Buk and thought I would try it. The first one or two boxes gave me more ease than anything else I had tried, so I went on with the treatment. In a short time I began to feel altogether different and better, and I saw that Zam-Buk was going to cure me. Well, I went on using it, and by the time I had used six boxes I was delighted to find myself entirely cured."

If you suffer from this painful ailment, or from eczema, ulcers or any skin disease, don't waste time. Try Zam-Buk. 50c. all druggists and stores.

ECZEMA AND SORE EYES
"My daughter suffered from inflamed eyelids and eczema on her head," writes Mr. H. W. Lear, Port Planford, Nfld. "The child was in a bad state and suffered greatly. The doctor failed to help her, and on recommendation of a friend, I used Dr. Chase's Ointment, which made a complete cure. With a grateful heart I write you this letter."

Rev. F. J. Sawers' Lecture Enjoyed

A most enjoyable lecture, which was all too short, in the opinion of those present, was given in the Studio of the Women's Art Association, in the Public Library building, on Thursday evening, by the Rev. F. J. Sawers, Rector of St. Luke's church.

The subject chosen was "Turner, the Man, and His Art." Both sides of the question were dealt with in a most interesting manner, and the glimpses of the personality of the great artist were much appreciated. Reference was made to some of Turner's most famous pictures, particularly the "Fighting Temeraire" and the "Burial at Sea."

The chair was taken by Sheriff Hall, at the request of the Executive. Mr. Sawers announced that Mr. Dobbin was to give a talk on the "Making of Books" on Friday, March 22, at 3.30 p.m. Also that on Thursday, April 4th, His Honour Judge Huycke had kindly consented to give his lecture, "The Holy Grail." Both these lectures will be given in the Studio.

Mention was also made of the Twilight Musicale, to be held in the Conservatory of Music Hall on Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock, to which the public are invited.

Tell a mother or her daughter the plain truth, namely, that all her efforts are directed to the one end of catching a husband. Heavens! what an insult that would be!—Count Lyof N. Tolstoi.

NEGOTIATIONS HAVE FAILED

Government's Efforts to Secure Conciliation Have Fallen Through

IS FORCED TO LEGISLATE

London, March 16.—The Government's efforts to secure to settlement of the coal strike by effecting an agreement between the coal mine owners and their employes have failed. After three days of joint conferences the negotiations were broken off last evening and legislative action now will be invoked to secure a minimum wage for all the underground coal workers.

In making this announcement to the conference yesterday Premier Asquith said:

"The Government have done all in their power to secure a settlement of the controversy by an agreement and they have come to the conclusion, with great regret, that this is impossible and that other measures must therefore be taken."

The official account of yesterday's conference, issued last night, says that Premier Asquith pointed out that the stoppage of work in the coal mines had now lasted more than a fortnight and was producing incalculable inconvenience and loss, and in some parts of the country actual suffering, though happily it had not been attended by disorder, the Premier added. Considering the number of persons directly or indirectly affected by the dispute, the situation was growing every day more serious and would continue a menace to the well-being of the country as long as it lasted.

After reviewing the abortive attempts to secure a settlement of the strike by an agreement between the interested parties, the official report continues:

"The Prime Minister stated that the Government would ask from Parliament a legislative declaration that a reasonable minimum wage, accompanied by adequate safeguards for the protection of the employer, should be made a statutory term of the contract of employment of people engaged in underground coal mines."

After the adjournment of the conference the miners' federation issued a statement to the effect that they have been empowered by their executive committee to consider the Government's bill in order to safeguard the interests of the workmen. The statement declared that the federation would advise a resumption of work until a satisfactory bill is passed by Parliament.

The miners' delegates express satisfaction at the turn affairs have taken.

Absolute Deadlock, Says White.

New York, March 16.—"All negotiations with the anthracite coal operators are off," declared John P. White, president of the United Mine Workers of America, at the adjournment of the meeting yesterday afternoon, between miners and operators, in which the miners declined the operators' counter-proposition. "I look for a general suspension of work on April 1," he added.

The miners, in their reply, said: "Now, firmly believing that as public servants we have done more than our full duty during all these years when anthracite operators enjoyed unprecedented prosperity, we feel that the responsibility which must follow failure to reach a satisfactory settlement of the questions at issue, when weighed by a discriminating public in the light of what we have herein set forth, cannot be placed upon the anthracite mine workers."

Horses Poisoned; Rival Suspected.

Kingston, March 16. Charged with poisoning three horses belonging to Ernest Babcock, stage driver at Perth Road, a rival driver, was placed under arrest yesterday. Three weeks ago Babcock's horses died from strychnine. Provincial detectives, with local police, worked on the case. Babcock's neighbors felt so sorry for his misfortune that they presented him with a purse to replace his loss.

Talc Find Near Madoc.

Belleville, March 16.—A valuable deposit of talc has been discovered on the farm of Charles Conley within two miles of Madoc Village. The mine is situated almost due east of the old Henderson mine, from which the finest talc in the world is now being taken. It appears to be a continuation of the same vein, being only three hundred and fifty feet from the drifts of that mine.

DEMANDS OF LABOUR

LOW GRADE IMMIGRANTS

Toronto, March 16.—The working man had his innings in the Legislature yesterday and public ownership and tax reform came in for exposition.

From the labor point of view, Allan Studholme, East Hamilton, spoke for three hours, taking up the entire afternoon session of the House, and flailing both the Government and Liberals in his characteristic style. He talked like a perfect automatam, his range of subject stretching from rural Ontario to the House of Lords. He attacked the Government's immigration policy, gave a few sidelights on the servant problem, and touched upon the eight-hour-day question.

That Ontario was not getting the right class of immigrants was his opinion. He referred to "indiscriminate immigration," and declared that the Government was not getting proper results from its endeavors. And immigrants came here on misrepresentation, he said.

Hon. James Duff spent $800 of the Government's money on his trip to the old country last year, said the speaker, who laid stress on this item in the public accounts and wanted to know what benefit accrued to Ontario by the visit of the Minister of Agriculture.

"Fifty-five acres for every human being in Canada and yet people are dying in the streets and little children are dying in the slums," he said. He wondered what the Government was doing to alleviate these conditions. He told of how people are working in sweatshops, in badly lighted buildings with long hours of labor. He contended that "he that earns should get more and a larger share of what he produces, and he that does nothing shall get less."

"We own the waterways of the country," he declared, "and we should own the railways, telegraphs, telephones and all other public commodities."

"People are talking public ownership everywhere," he added, "and on that question the labor party is as solid as the rock of Gibraltar."

In commenting on the favorable reception that avowed public ownership candidates would get if they came out forcibly on that question, the labor member said that if they did so "they would make the welkin ring."

"The hon. gentlemen opposite," added Mr. Studholme, pointing to the Treasury benches, "would then have to sit up and take notice."

"Free education," he declared, "should be provided for the children from the cradle to the University, for labor believes that nothing is too good for the child of the present and the man of the future."

"With tax reform we need not be anxious," remarked Mr. Studholme, "for even the Premier is beginning to see the public demand that there is for this reform."

The consideration, clause by clause, of the bill respecting the Joint Stock Companies Act, occupied the attention of the House in committee nearly two hours afterwards, and the bill was finally given its second reading.

To supersede the Nickle Bread Act, which caused such a lot of discussion after it was introduced a session or two ago, S. A. Ellis, member for East Ottawa, has introduced an amendment respecting the manufacture of bread, aiming at the abolition of the twelve-ounce loaf, and substitute therefor the sixteen-ounce loaf.

To provide that all married or single women or widows over the age of 21 years may vote at municipal and provincial elections, a bill to amend the Ontario Elections Act was introduced by Allan Studholme. On Monday, Mr. Studholme will introduce an eight-hour bill to provide a working day of eight hours, and a working week of forty-eight hours. All extra time put in must be paid for at a fifty per cent. increase.

W. Proudfoot, Centre Huron, introduced a bill to give the Ontario Railway Board jurisdiction over the construction by municipalities of bridges, culverts, tunnels, etc., with a 20-foot span.

Deluge at Rhode Island.

Newport, R.I., March 16.—Newport was cut off from all railroad communication by a three-inch rainfall yesterday. A washout on the tracks of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad stopped all train service between Newport and Middletown. Electric car service has been temporarily discontinued.

Passengers on stalled electric cars were brought to the city in automobiles.

Colonies as Gift to John Bull.

Lisbon, March 16.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—A movement is on foot for the purpose of handing over the African colonies to the protection of Britain. This measure is urged by a committee of senators, deputies and proprietors of African concerns presided over by the Minister of the Colonies. The formation of this body is but increasing anxiety as to the position of the Portuguese colonies.

Grant of $100,000 to Amundsen.

London, March 16.—The London Daily Telegraph has a despatch from its Copenhagen correspondent saying that a Cabinet Council will be held in Christiania next week, with a view to granting Amundsen a state subvention of $100,000 for the benefit of his polar trip.

Pelletier Will Not Resign.

Ottawa, March 16.—Official circles are not at all disturbed over the reports of the Opposition press to the effect that Hon. L. P. Pelletier, Postmaster-General, intends to resign his portfolio.

The Minister stated emphatically last night that there is no truth in the statement that he intends to throw Quebec County open to test the people on his attitude on the Keewatin school question. He finds he has so much work to do that rumors do not affect him.

Cable Broke, Six Men Injured.

Regina, March 16.—Six men were injured, one fatally, in an accident on the new Leader Building here yesterday afternoon. The men were going to work on the ninth storey of the building, being taken up by a steam hoist. The cable broke and all fell to the ground.

The injured are: Wm. Morley, Jas. Sandbrook, Fred. Thompson, Wm. Shewcross, Wm. Ashwell, all bricklayers; and a Syrian helper.

Sugar Bill Passes.

Washington, March 16.—The Democratic free sugar bill passed the House yesterday, 198 to 169. Its passage was helped by 24 Insurgent Republican votes, although this was offset by the defection of seven Democratic votes against the bill by members from Louisiana and Colorado.

Another Lesson
From
J. W. BROWETT Optometrist

YOU are a parent. Your child is in school a certain number of hours each day, using the eyes constantly. Each year the lessons become harder, books are taken home, studies are continued in the evening, the eyes are being overtaxed, the delicate muscles are strained; yet perhaps no thought is given to helping the eyes. We know that injury results from this neglect. We must realize that, if there is a cause for eye strain, there must be a remedy; the remedy most naturally would be rest for the eyes; this rest can be obtained by wearing resting Glasses. Come and let me explain to you scientifically why resting Glasses should be worn.

We believe that parents are wise in caring for their Children's eyes, the remedy is simple and the cost is slight.

TRIBUTE TO HERO

Proposal is Made to Help Family of Inspector Fitzgerald

TO AMEND SHIPPING ACT

Ottawa, March 16.—Eloquent tribute was borne in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon to the heroic sacrifice of Inspector Fitzgerald and his three companions of the Northwest Mounted Police, who lost their lives on the Dawson trail under tragic circumstances early in 1911.

The matter was brought up by A. K. MacLean (Halifax), who urged on the Government the propriety and desirability of making a financial recognition to the mother and sisters of the late inspector, who are now living in Halifax. Inspector Fitzgerald, he said, had intended, if he had lived, to retire from the force this year when he would have been entitled to a superannuation of $1,000 a year.

Alfred Thompson (Yukon) declared that the suggested grant would be a fitting recognition of the services rendered to Canada and the Empire in the sacrifice of Inspector Fitzgerald and his party. The Royal Northwest Mounted Police were doing a splendid and often a heroic work in the patrolling of the far north.

Sir Wilfrid Laurer and W. H. White (Victoria, Alta.), who had been for a number of years a member of the R.N.W.M.P., also added their tributes. Inspector Fitzgerald, said Premier Borden, half stood a big part in that tragic march to death in a way that should inspire the respect and admiration of every citizen of Canada. He assured Mr. MacLean that he intended to give the proposed grant to the widow and orphans his earnest attention before the end of the present session.

Hon. J. D. Hazen introduced a bill to amend the Canada shipping act by providing (a) that certificates shall not be required for masters and mates upon sailing ships of not more than 100 tons registered tonnage, propelled by auxiliary power other than steam, employed partly in fishing and partly in the carriage of freight, and (b) that the Minister of Marine and Fisheries may fix the fee for replacing lost certificates.

Mr. Hazen explained that there were 4,500 gasoline fishing boats on the Maritime Provinces and that there were no such number of certified masters. In answer to David Henderson (Halton) he said that the proposed amendment would apply equally to gasoline boats on the great lakes. As to the second portion of the amendment on the fees, which at present, if a certificate is lost, the owner or master would be called on to pay half the original fee, a great hardship in many cases.

Caught In Belt.

Brantford, March 16.—George Jordan, an employe of Massey-Harris Co., received terrible injuries here yesterday afternoon while attempting to put a belt on a revolving pulley. Jordan wore a long apron, and had to climb into a long passageway in order to reach the pulley. The apron caught and he was wound around the pulley. His scalp was practically taken off and the base of his skull fractured. He was reported still living at the hospital, but the doctors stated that recovery was impossible.

Officials at the factory state that Jordan's attempt to put the belt on was the height of folly.

New Regulation at Bisley.

London, March 16.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—A new Bisley regulation says that no part of the wrist hand or rifle may touch the ground. The council regrets that owing to lack of funds it will be unable to send a team to Australia this year.

Eastern Ontario Orangemen.

Kingston, March 16.—The Grand Orange Lodge of Eastern Ontario will open here Tuesday. On Wednesday a big parade will be held to St. Paul's Church, when Rev. W. F. Fitzgerald will speak on "The Anglican Position."

SHE GOT WHAT SHE WANTED

This Woman Had to Insist Strongly, but it Paid

Chicago, Ill.—"I suffered from a female weakness and stomach trouble, and I went to the store to get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, but the clerk did not want to let me have it—he said it was no good and wanted me to try something else, but knowing all about it I insisted and finally got it, and I am so glad I did, for it has cured me.

"I know of so many cases where women have been cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that I can say to every suffering woman if that medicine does not help her, there is nothing that will."—Mrs. JANESEWSKI, 2038 Arch St., Chicago, Ill.

This is the age of substitution, and women who want a cure should insist upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound just as this woman did, and not accept something else on which the druggist can make a little more profit.

Women who are passing through this critical period or who are suffering from any of those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not lose sight of the fact that for thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which is made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills. In almost every community you will find women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

BY ANNA KATHARINE GREENE

The Inspector smiled.

"You are a man of considerable analytic power, as I take it, Mr. Brotherson. You must have decided long ago how this woman died."

"Is that a question, Inspector?"

"You may take it as such."

"Then I will allow myself to say that there is but one commonsense view to take of the matter. Miss Challoner's death was due to suicide; so was that of the washerwoman. But there I stop. As for the means—the motive—such mysteries may be within your province, but they are totally outside mine! God help us all! The world is full of misery. Again I wish you good-day."

The air seemed to have lost its vitality and the sun its sparkle when he was gone.

"Now, what do you think, Gryce?"

"This: That I'm up against the hardest proposition of my lifetime. Nothing in the man's appearance or manner evinces guilt, yet I believe him guilty. I must. Not to, is to strain probability to the point of breakage. But how to reach him is a problem and one of no ordinary nature. Years ago, when I was but little older than Sweetwater, I had just such a conviction concerning a certain man against whom I had even less to work on than we have here. A murder had been committed by an envenomed spring contained in a toy puzzle. I worked upon the conscience of the suspect in that case, by bringing constantly before his eyes a facsimile of that spring. It met him in the folded napkin which he had opened at his restaurant dinner. He stumbled upon it in the street, and found it lying amongst his papers at home. I gave him no relief and finally he succumbed. He had been almost driven mad by remorse. But this man has no conscience. If he is not innocent as the day, he's as hard as unquarried marble. He might be confronted with reminders of his crime at every turn without weakening or showing by loss of appetite or interrupted sleep any effect upon his nerves. That's my opinion of the gentleman. He is either that or a man of uncommon force and self-restraint."

"I'm inclined to believe him the latter."

"And so give the whole matter the go-by?"

"Possibly."

"It will be a terrible disappointment to Sweetwater."

"That's nothing."

"And to me."

"That's different. I'm disposed to consider you, Gryce—after all these years."

"Thank you; I have done the state some service."

"What do you want? You say the mine is unworkable."

"Yes, in a day or in a week, possibly a month. But persistence and a protean adaptabiliyt to meet his moods might accomplish something. I don't say will, I only say might. If Sweetwater had the job, with unlimited time in which to carry out any plan he may have, or even for a change of plans to suit a changed idea, success might be his, and both time, effort and outlay justified."

"The outlay? I am thinking of the outlay."

"Mr. Challoner will see to that. I have his word that no reasonable amount will daunt him."

"But this Brotherson is suspicious. He has an inventor's secret to hide, if none other. We can't saddle him with a guy of Sweetwater's appearance and abnormal loquaciousness."

"Not readily, I own. But time will bring counsel. Are you willing to he'p the boy, to help me and possibly yourself by this venture in the dark? The Department shan't lose money by it; that's all I can promise."

"But it's a big one. Gryce, you shall have your way. You'll be the only loser if you fail; and you will fail; take my word for it."

"I wish I could speak as confidently to the contrary, but I can't. I can give you my hand, though, Inspector, and Sweetwater's thanks. I can meet the boy now. An hour ago I didn't know how I was to do it."

CHAPTER XV.

THAT'S THE QUESTION.

"How many times has he seen you?"

"Twice."

"So that he knows your face and figure?"

"I'm afraid so. He cannot help remembering the man who faced him in his own room."

"That's unfortunate."

"Damned unfortunate; but one must expect some sort of a handicap in a game like this. Before I'm done with him, he'll look me full in the face and wonder if he's ever seen me before. I wasn't always a detective. I was a carpenter once, as you know, and I'll take to the tools again. As soon as I'm handy with them I'll hunt up lodgings in Hicks Street. He may suspect me at first, but he won't long; I'll be such a commended good workman. I only wish I hadn't such pronounced features. They've stood awfully in the way, Mr. Gryce. I don't like to talk about my appearance, but I'm so confounded plain that people remember me. Why couldn't I have had one of those pretty faces which don't mean anything? It would have been a deuced sight more convenient."

"You've done very well as it is."

"But I want to do better. I want to deceive him to his face. He's clever, this same Brotherson, and there's glory to be got in making a fool of him. Do you think it could be done with a beard? I've never worn a beard. While I'm settling back into my old trade, I can let the hair grow."

"Do. It'll make you look as weak as water. It'll be blonde, of course."

"And silky and straggling. Charming addition to my beauty. But it'll take half an inch off my nose, and it'll cover my mouth, which means a lot in my case. Then my complexion! It must be changed naturally. I'll consult a doctor about that. No sort of make believe will go with this man. If my eyes look weak, they must really be so. If I walk slowly and speak huskily, it must be because I cannot help it. I can bear the slight inconvenience of temporary ill-health in a cause like this; and if necessary the cough will be real, and the headache positive."

"Sweetwater! We'd better give the task to another man—to someone Brotherson has never seen and won't be suspicious of?"

"He'll be suspicious of everybody who tries to make friends with him now; only a little more so with me; that's all. But I've got to meet that, and I'll do it by being, temporarily, of course, exactly the man I seem. My health will not be good for the next few weeks, I'm sure of that. But I'll be a model workman, neat and conscientious with just a suspicion of dash where dash is needed. He knows the real thing when he sees it, and there's not a fellow living more alive to shams. I won't be a sham. I'll be it. You'll see."

"But the doubt. Can you do all this in doubt of the issue?"

"No; I must have confidence in the end, and I must believe in his guilt. Nothing else will carry me through. I must believe in his guilt."

"Yes, that's essential."

"And I do. I never was surer of anything than I am of that. But I'll have the deuce of a time to get evidence enough for a grand jury. That's plainly to be seen, and that's why I am so dead set on the business. It's such an even toss-up."

"I don't call it even. He's got the start of you every way. You can't go to his tenement; the janitor there would recognize you even if he didn't."

"Now I will give you a piece of good news. They're to have a new janitor next week. I learn that yesterday. The present one is too easy. He'll be out long before I'm ready to show myself there; and so will the woman who took care of the poor washerwoman's little child. I'd not have risked her curiosity. Luck isn't all against us. How does Mr. Challoner feel about it?"

"Not very confident; but willing to give you any amount of rope. Sweetwater, he let me have a batch of letters written by his daughter which he found in a secret drawer. They are not to be read, or even opened, unless a great necessity arises. They were written for Brotherson's eye—or so the father says—but she never sent them; too exuberant perhaps. If you ever want them—I cannot give them to you to-night, and wouldn't if I could—don't go to Mr. Challoner—you must never be seen at his hotel—and don't come to me, but to the little house in West Twenty-ninth Street, where they will be kept for you, tied up in a package with your name on it. By the way, what name are you going to work under?"

"My mother's—Zugg."

"Good! I'll remember. You can always write or even telephone to Twenty-ninth Street. I'm in constant communication with them there, and it is quite safe."

"Thanks. You are sure the Superintendent is with me?"

"Yes, but not the Inspector. He sees nothing but a strange coincidence in Orlando Brotherson."

"Again the scales hang even. But they won't remain so. One side is bound to rise. Which? That's the question, Mr. Gryce."

OPPOSED

There was a new tenant in the Hick street tenement. He arrived late one afternoon and was shown two rooms, one in the rear building and another in the front one. Both were in the fourth floor. He demurred at the former, thought it gloomy but finally consented to try it. The other, he said, was too expensive. The janitor—new to the business—was not much taken with him, and showed it, which seemed to offend the new comer, who was evidently an irritable fellow owing to ill health.

However, they came to terms as I have said, and the man went away, promising to send in his belongings the next day. He smiled as he said this and the janitor who had rarely seen such a change take place in a human face, looked uncomfortable for a moment and seemed disposed to make some remark about the room they were leaving. But, thinking better of it, locked the door and led the way downstairs. As the prospective tenant followed, he may have noticed—probably did—that the door they had just left was a new one—the only new thing to be seen in the whole shabby place.

The next night that door was locked on the inside. The young man had taken possession. As he put away the remnants of a meal he had cooked for himself he cast a look at his surroundings and imperceptibly sighed. Then he brightened again, and sitting down on his solitary chair he turned his eyes on the window, which, uncurtained and without shade, stared open-mouthed as it were, at the opposite wall rising high across the court.

In that wall, one window only seemed to interest him and that was on a level with his own. The shade of the window was up but there was no light back of it and so nothing of the interior could be seen. But his eye remained fixed upon it, while his hand, stretched out towards the lamp burning near him, held itself in readiness to lower the light at a minute's notice.

Did he see only the opposite wall and that unillumined window? Was there no memory of the time when, in a previous contemplation of those dismal panes, he beheld stretching between them and himself, a long low bench with a plain wooden tab upon it, from which a dripping cloth beat out upon the boards beneath a dismal note, monotonous as the ticking of a clock?

One might judge that such memories were indeed his, from the rapid glance he cast behind him at the place where the bed had stood in those days. It was placed differently now.

But if he saw, and if he heard these suggestions from the past, he was not less alive to the exactions of the present, for, as his glance flew back across the court his finger suddenly moved and the flame it controlled sputtered and went out. At the same instant the window opposite sprang into view as the lamp was lit within, and for several minutes the whole interior remained visible—the books, the work table, the cluttered furniture, and, most interesting of all, its owner and occupant. It was upon the latter that the newcomer fixed his attention and with an absorption equal to that he saw expressed in the countenance opposite.

But this was the absorption of watchfulness; that of the other of introspection. Mr. Brotherson — (we will no longer call him Dunn even here where he is known by no other name)—had entered his room clad in his heavy overcoat and, not having taken it off before lighting his lamp, still stood with it on, gazing eagerly down at the model occupying the place of honour on the large centre table. He was not touching it,—not at this moment—but that his thoughts were with it, that his whole mind was concentrated on it, was evident to the watcher across the court; and, as this watcher took in this fact and noticed the loving care with which the enthusiast finally put out his finger to re-arrange a thread or twirl a wheel his disappointment found utterance in a sigh which echoed sadly through the dull and cheerless room. Had he expected this stern and self contained man to show an open indifference to work and the hopes of a lifetime? If so, this was the first of the many surprises awaiting him.

He was gifted however with the patience of an automaton and continued to watch his fellow tenant as long as the latter's shade remained up. When it fell, he rose and took a few steps up and down, but not with the celerity and precision which usually accompanied his movements. Doubt disturbed his mind and impeded his activity. He had caught a fair glimpse of Brotherson's face as he approached the window, and though it continued to show abstraction, it equally displayed serenity and a complete satisfaction with the present if not with the future. Had he mistaken this man after all? Was his instinct, for the first time in his active career, wholly at fault?

He had succeeded in getting a glimpse of his quarry in the privacy of his own room, at home, with his thoughts and uneasiness of any essence, and how had he found him? Thoughtful and natural in all his movements.

But the evening was young. Retrospect comes with later and more lonely hours. There will be opportunities yet for studying this impassive countenance under much more telling and productive circumstances than these. He would wait these opportunities with cheerful anticipation. Meanwhile he would keep up the routine which he had planned for this night. Something might yet occur. At all events he would have exhausted the situation from this standpoint.

And so it came to pass that at an hour when all the other hard-working people in the building were asleep or at least striving to sleep, these two men still sat at their work, one in the light, the other in the darkness, facing each other, consciously to the one, unconsciously to the other, across the hollow well of the now silent court. Eleven o'clock! Twelve! No change on Brotherson's part or in Sweetwater's room; but a distilled one in the place where Sweetwater sat. Objects which had been totally indistinguishable even to his penetrating eye could now be seen in ever brightening outline. The moon had reached the open space above the court, and he was getting the full benefit of it. But it was a benefit he would have been glad to dispense with. Darkness was like a shield to him. He did not feel quite sure that he wanted this shield removed. With no curtain to the window and no shade, and all this brilliance pouring into the room, he feared the disclosure of his presence there or, if not that, some effect on his own mind of those memories he was more anxious to see mirrored in another's discomfiture than his own.

Was it to escape any lack of concentration which these same memories might bring, that he rose and stepped to the window? Or was it under one of those involuntary impulses which move us in spite of ourselves to do the very thing our judgment disapproves?

No sooner had he aproached the sill than Mr. Brotherson's shade flew away up and he, too, looked up. Their glances met, and for an instant the hardy detective experienced that involuntary stagnation of the blood which follows an inner shock. He felt that he had been recognized. The moonlight lay full upon his face, and the other had seen and known him. Else, why the constrained attitude and sudden rigidity observable in this confronting figure with its partially lifted hand? A man like Brotherson makes no pause in any action however trivial, without a reason. Either he had been transfixed by this glimpse of his enemy on watch, or—daring thought! had seen enough of sepulchral suggestion in the wan face looking forth from this fatal window to shake him from his composure, and let loose the grinning devil of remorse from its iron prison house? If so the moment was a memorable one, and the hazard quite worth while. He had gained—no! he had gained nothing. He had been the fool of his own wishes. No one, let alone Brotherson, could have mistaken his face for that of a woman. He had forgotten his newly-grown beard. Some other cause must be found for the other's attitude. It savoured of shock if not of fear. If it were fear then had he aroused an emotion which might rebound upon himself in sharp reptisal. Death had been known to strike people standing where he stood; mysterious death of a species quite unrecognisable. What warranty had he that it would not strike him, and now? None.

Yet it was Brotherson who moved first. With a shrug of the shoulder plainly visible to the man opposite, he turned away from the window and without lowering the shade, began to gather up his papers for the night, and later banking up his stove with ashes.

Sweetwater, with a breath of decided relief, stepped back and threw himself on the bed. It had really been a trial for him to stand there under the other's eye, though his mind refused to formulate his fear, or to give him any satisfaction when he asked himself what there was in the situation suggestive of death to the woman or harm to himself.

Nor did morning light bring counsel, as is usual in similar cases. He felt the mystery more in the hubbub and restless turmoil of the day than in the night's silence and inactivity. He was glad when the stroke of six gave him an excuse to leave the room, and gladder still when in doing so, he ran upon an old woman from a neighboring room who no sooner saw him than she leered at him and eagerly remarked:

SAVED FROM THE SURGEON'S KNIFE

Hawkesbury, Ont., Feb. 15th, 1910.

"Last August, a year ago, our daughter Ella (fourteen years) was taken with terrible pains in the right side. We at once gave her some of a remedy called "Fruit-a-tives" and continued to give it to her for a few days. She was then taken to Kingston where she was again thoroughly examined by an eminent specialist. He said she had Appendicitis and must be operated on at once, if we wanted to save her life.

"Luckily for us and for her, an uncle came in with some 'Fruit-a-tives' and insisted on Ella taking them. Good results were apparent almost from the first dose, and the treatment cured her.

'Fruit-a-tives' saved our daughter from the surgeon's knife and to-day she is enjoying the best of health".

The Toppy, Tasty Toast

Food science has taught us that there is much body-building nutriment in the whole wheat grain which we do not get in white flour. The only question is how to make the whole wheat grain digestible. That problem has been solved in the making of the shredded whole wheat wafer.

It is the whole wheat, steam-cooked shredded, compressed into a wafer, and baked—the maximum of nutriment in smallest bulk. Many people prefer it to ordinary bread toast. Heated in the oven to restore its crispness it is delicious for luncheon, or for any meal, with butter, potted cheese or marmalades.

THE FAMILY HEARTH

Let us take time to speak sweet, foolish words to those we love. By-and-by, when they can no longer hear us, our foolishness will seem more wise than our best wisdom.

* * * *

The home should be found the most delicate and refined society, as here it is that we receive our first and most influential lessons in the great school of life. These lessons should partake of perfect honesty, truthfulness, manhood, heroism, patriotism, and all things that tend to elevate the human character.

* * * *

The father returns to his home after a weary day at business. He is tired in body and mind. Coming back, as his latchkey turns in the home door he throws off care; he is joyous at the thought of the dear ones he will meet after hours of absence. His young daughter, in a pretty gown, with the bloom and freshness only girlhood wears, should be ready to give him the attention he loves—the kiss, the cheery word—to help her mother and the rest in letting her father see how much he is loved at home.

* * * *

A true marriage is the soul's Eden. It is the visiting place of angels. It is not given to words to express the refinement of pleasure, the delicacy of joy, and the abounding fullness of satisfaction that those feel whom God hath joined in a high marriage of spirit. Such a union is the highest school of virtue, the soul's convent where the vestal fires of purity are kept continually burning. May only such happy unions attend the young men and maidens of our vicinity who may even now be planning their wedding garments.

* * * *

Let a wife and mother love her home and her children with the most absolute unswerving devotion, and serve them with the most unselfish fidelity, there are nevertheless times when she is weary. She knows better than anyone else the steps and the stitches, the same things done over and over, and the pettiness of the trials that come to the nursery and kitchen. They are so insignificant that she is ashamed to talk about them, and we fear she sometimes forgets to tell her Saviour how hard they press her; and so, bearing her cross all alone, its weight becomes crushing.

* * * *

Boys, as well as girls, should be taught to help in the house. How often we have been disgusted to see that the girls are made to help with the housework while the boys are allowed to play checkers, or sit at the fire toasting their toes.

* * * *

The boys on the farm are better off if they only knew it, than thousands of the boys who are at large, wandering hither and thither, searching and looking for "rich bonanzas" to turn up. There is nothing like being practical and there is but one way to be so. Acquire business habits and train yourself to do good, honest, hard work. Don't waste your time learning to tie a cravat. You can buy cravats already tied.

Good housekeeping has more to do with domestic happiness than young lovers dream of. We believe these times need women whose most beautiful work will be done inside their own doors. Without good housekeeping, the romance will soon go out of marriage.

* * * *

We have seen little children while running at play, or perhaps on an errand for their parents, get a fall and bump a head or skin a finger, and when they would go to their parents for a kind word of comfort they would say: "Well, next time, look where you are going and don't be so awkward; go long now and hush." That child will certainly find out sooner or later that its parents have no love or sympathy for it, and it will grow up without any kind feeling toward that parent. But on the other hand, let the child come to the parents for advice, and if kind words are spoken the child will never forget it, and will always look with respect on that parent.

* * * *

To make home happy is an art—an art a good many people have either lost or never found.

* * * *

If you want to give a little boy from six to ten years old, a start for the penitentiary, just allow him the privilege of running on the streets past late bedtime.

* * * *

No one wants an impertinent, swaggering, cigarette-smoking boy about an office, or as a clerk, bookkeeper, or stenographer. Girls do not encourage these detestable habits, and are, therefore, getting the places.

* * * *

A boy can help clear away after a meal, sweep the floor, polish the stove, or wash the dishes, just as effectively as a girl. He, as a rule, is stronger. He will love his home more, and when he becomes a man, and has a home of his own, he will respect his wife all the more for having been taught to respect his mother and sisters.

* * * *

It is nice to be handsome, but it is a good deal handsomer to be nice.

* * * *

The street corners is the best place in the world for teaching vice, profligacy, and crime, nearly all the bad language and idle, vicious habits of boys are taught on the street at late hours of the night.

Why Nature Has Placed Different Colours In Fruit

A learned scientist, Professor O. N. Witt, has been studying the problem: Why is the water-melon red? He points out that science has found a purpose for many of the brilliant colours in nature.

The naive point of view of past ages, according to which a well meaning Providence has adorned the world about us in order to minister to our pleasure, has had to give way to the inquisitive gaze of modern scientific investigation.

We now know that the refreshing green of the woods and meadows is not provided for our enjoyment, but for the serious and practical purpose of plant nutrition; the flowers display their bright colours to attract the insect that carries the pollen from stamen to stigma; the Alpine hare is snow coloured so as to be hidden from the sight of the enemy, while the lion is tawny and the tiger striped in order that they may be undistinguishable from the natural background as they lie in wait for their prey.

The attractive and appetizing outward appearance of most fruits is generally explained by supposing that its function is to attract animals, which eat the fleshy portion and carry the seed away from the parent plant, thus aiding the distribution of the species. The red cheeks of a peach are so enticing that this explanation will probably be readily accepted. But why that brilliant red colour where the flesh meets the kernel? The bird that picks at the flesh of the fruit does not strike this coloured layer until the work is practically accomplished.

Why is the red beet deeply coloured, while its close congeners have a white juice? After all, neither, under normal circumstances, sees light of day, so that it is problematical what useful function the colour can possibly serve. Then again, why does the madder root contain quantities of alizarine and allied dye stuffs that in the past have been of such great value, while in modern times we have learned to manufacture them by artificial means?

We now come to the consideration of the water-melon, an extraordinary fruit, which has a dull, dark green outside, a delicious pink interior and black seeds. Scientists have argued that the dull, hard exterior has been developed to drive away the larger animals, which might devour the melon entire and thus prevent propagation of the seeds. As it is, the melon may decay, and the seeds be distributed by the birds and insects, the seeds in turn are protected from these little animals by their hard, black character.

The delicious pink appearance of the hidden interior remains the most puzzling problem. The only reasonable inference up to the present is that it serves to attract the small animals after the rind has decayed, and thus aids in the distribution of the seeds. This scientific view leaves the Afro-American's cultivated taste out of consideration.

WHAT KIND OF WOMAN SHOULD A MAN MARRY?

What kind of woman should a man marry?

"A person with real values," answers Mrs. Mary Austin, dramatist. "A woman characterised by truth, charity, efficiency. A woman who is not a coquette."

A woman, it would seem, who not only spells her duty with a capital D, but does it. Yet somehow the "stern daughter of the voice of God" has never been exactly popular with men. Maybe they should marry her, but they generally don't.

It is safe to say that the wifely qualities suggested by Princess Troubetskoy, whose other name is Amelia Rives, will appeal rather more strongly to the average man.

"The woman a man ought to marry," said the Princess at New York, "is the woman who is in the same key with him, the woman, in short, whose tastes most nearly agree with his own.

"The saying, 'Many men, many minds,' may be truthfully written, 'many men, many wives.' It is just exactly as foolish to pick out one feminine type and say, 'Let all men seek her!' as it is to select one system of religion or philosophy and say, 'Let all men follow it!' One man's ideal wife would be another man's torment.

Neither Would be to Blame.

"Suppose, for instance, that a man in whom sporting tastes predominate should marry a woman whose greatest pleasure consists in travelling about through Italy and Greece and Spain, and lingering in all the beautiful quiet corners of the world. That man would not be happy with his wife, but it wouldn't be her fault or his, either. Simply, they would not be so constituted that they could share one life in common.

"The other day I heard an engaged girl say, 'Oh, I'm tremendously in love with Tom, but he doesn't speak my language!' And I couldn't help thinking, 'My child, don't you see that your future life with your husband is bound to be unhappy? How can you two draw close together when even now you do not understand each other's speech?'

"The ideal wife for the sportsman is a woman who is herself devoted to athletics and who has a keen personal understanding of the furs of the game. The ideal wife for the plain, unimaginative business man is a woman who is not visited by imaginative flights."

Beauty Not Essential.

"Do you think that the ideal wife must possess physical charm?"

Almost indignantly she repudiated the idea.

"It is of the very least importance!" she cried. "I should almost say that a man who married a woman because he is entranced by her beauty is bound to be unhappy.

"Take that literary masterpiece of marital misery, Tolstoi's 'Kreutzer Sonata.' Why did that man marry the woman he ended by murdering? Simply because she had yellow curls and wore a jersey. Of course, their union was utterly unsympathetic and wretched. Of course, it ended the way it did end. Some sort of tragic termination is inevitable for such an ill-assorted couple."

"If beauty is unessential, do you think a man should always choose a woman who has the domestic virtues?" she was asked.

"But that goes without saying, because all nice women have them," protested the Princess. 'She who paints or writes or sings is just as womanly, down in the bottom of her heart, as the woman who is womanly and nothing else. I think what we may call the home attributes are as much a part of almost ay woman as her nose or her eyes. I can cook and keep house, even if I do write stories. So many professional women have homes of their own, and attend to their management.

"People seem not to understand that a woman with a talent is simply a woman plus, not minus, a woman.

"After all, we can't worship every likely infant we happen to see across the street, but a real, lovable, human baby, whether it's a little ragged dweller in the streets or an expensive chrysalis in lace and ribbon, never fails to creep into our hearts.

Yearning for Cradle.

"I think, as I say, that a man may assume that all the nice women he knows possess these really prehistoric predilections for a fireside and a cradle. Only it seems to me that a man and the woman he marries must have an individual and not a merely racial meeting ground.

"Perhaps," she added thoughtfully, "I have put too much insistence upon a community of working interests. The ideal wife must comprehend and sympathise with her husband's main business in life. But her sympathy ought not to stop there."

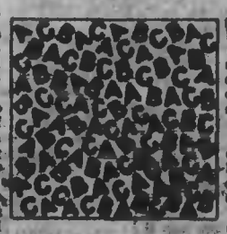
For correct solutions of A.B.C. Puzzle.

Read Carefully if You Wish to Win a Money Prize.

"Simple as A.B.C." the old saying is. This puzzle may look simple, but try it, and you will find it puzzling enough.

The puzzle is to count the number of A's, B's, and C's in the square. State how many of each letter you find.



To the person who sends in the highest correct count we will give the sum of Fifty Dollars ($50.00).

To the person who sends in the second highest correct count we will give the sum of Thirty Dollars ($30.00).

To the person who sends in the third highest correct count we will give the sum of Twenty Dollars ($20.00).

To the person who sends in the fourth highest correct count we will give the sum of Twenty Dollars ($20.00).

Should two persons send in equally correct answers for the first prize, the first two prizes will be divided between them, each receiving the sum of Forty-five Dollars ($45.00). Should three persons send in equally correct answers, the first three prizes will be divided between them, each receiving the sum of Thirty Dollars ($30.00). Should four persons send in equally correct answers, the whole sum of Two Hundred Dollars ($200.00) will be divided between them, each receiving Fifty Dollars ($50.00). And so on in like proportions.

DO NOT SEND ANY MONEY

We mean exactly what we say. We do not ask you to send us any of your money. There's only one simple condition (which does not involve in the spending of any of your money) to be complied with.

If you think you can correctly count the A. B. C's, write to-day, as this advertisement may not appear again. We will reply at once, saying whether your solution is correct or not and will send you a full prize list, together with particulars of the simple conditions mentioned above.

The Quest of Gentle Hazard

Being the Adventures in Love and Chivalry of Lord Richard Jocelyn.—By H. M. Egbert

A Matrimonial Disentanglement

(Illustrations, etc., by W. G. Chapman in [illegible] and Great Britain.)

"Will you honor me by becoming my wife?" said Lord Richard Jocelyn. Then he removed his hands from his pockets and stood up to receive the verdict, looking about as disinterestedly as a soldier in the face of a firing squad.

They were standing in the conservatory of the Squires house at Newport, under a frond of a large palm tree that drooped over a romantic rockery. They were entirely alone. Yet each of them was aware that the entire setting of the scene was for them; that the musicians, playing the latest waltz in the big ballroom beyond, the palms that overshadowed them, the splendid draperies and the beeswaxed floors were, actually, a portion of the trap they had been baited for them. And outside a hundred eyes were watching for their appearance.

"You speak almost sincerely," she said, flushing a little with vexation.

"I am as serious as I ever allow myself to be," Lord Jocelyn answered.

"Sit down," said Evelyn Squires. "Before I answer you, Lord Jocelyn, and thank you for the honor you propose to confer on me, let us be plain with one another. Perhaps this will be our last opportunity. It is, I think, admitted that you do not love me."

"I esteem you more than any lady I have ever known," Lord Jocelyn observed.

Evelyn inclined her head. "And that I do not love you," she continued. "It is, then, a transaction purely commercial on either side."

Lord Jocelyn was silent. He did not know what to say, and so took refuge in the sanctuary of the wise man.

"Let me account to you my position," Evelyn went on remorselessly. "[illegible] I have been trained with one object in view—to make a successful marriage—that is to say, to exchange my wealth for a title. If you be young, passably good-looking, and clean of life, so much the better for me. But these are not essentials. A title is.

"I was educated at the most expensive schools and under the best governesses and professors. At the age of twenty I was taken through European exhibition. In London you met me and admired me. My parents saw in you a possible husband. You have an ancient name and one that has never been tarnished. It is my duty to repay the money that has been spent on me by obedience to my parent's wish rather than by shirking my responsibilities."

"But I—" Lord Jocelyn protested.

"Yes, now for you, Lord Jocelyn. You are one of an ancient house which, like so many in these days, has come to financial ruin. You owe it to your family to make a wealthy marriage. You were sent to America by your father, the fourth viscount, for that purpose. You knew me; I was, then, naturally, the first objective. It is a fair bather, unalloyed by sentiment. If you claim me as your bride in that frank spirit I will accept you in the same way."

"I hope in time," he said, "that love may come to us."

She suddenly grew pale and began trembling; his words affected her where her own had left her unmoved. Then, placing her hand upon his arm, she suffered him to lead her into the drawing room. And, all the remainder of that evening, some subtle sense told each of the that the guests knew, that even now looks and words were being interchanged among them, that her parents, the varnish king and his stout wife, were busily receiving the congratulations of their associates.

On the next day the news was formally announced. Lord Jocelyn went to town and sent a brief cable dispatch to his father announcing the event.

"I shall need a couple of thousand more for preliminary expenses," he wrote in a letter. "Everything is arranged, and the Sowry will more than refit and furnish Doublewith Manor. Squires has lent us his yacht for the honeymoon. The lady is charming and I think we shall both be happy."

Then, leaning back in his armchair in his modest apartment on Madison Avenue, he said to himself:

"How can it be that duty sometimes turns decent fellows into muckers and cads?"

He tilted up the photograph of his betrothed so that the light shone full on it. Then he hit his table a resounding thump with his fist.

"God grant," he cried, "that I may make her happy."

"The greatest to you, Richard," said Evelyn, on the following week, "is going to be—guess what?"

"Two thousand shares in Steel," he said bitterly, and regretted it the moment afterward.

"No," she said. "It will be your portrait, Richard."

"And who is going to paint my features, Evelyn?" he asked.

"Torelli—Marco Torelli. You've heard of him?" she asked, with a swift glance. Then her eyes dropped and a slight flush overspread her features.

"Never heard the chap's name before," said Jocelyn.

"He's a young Italian," said Evelyn, in some confusion. "He's a genius, a real genius, and he was starving in a garret in Washington Square until some friends of mine found him recently. And he's the finest painter in America, the critics say, although he's hardly known yet. You don't mind being painted by an unknown genius?"

"I'd let a bricklayer paint me if it would please you, Evie," answered Lord Jocelyn gayly.

He wondered afterward why this short interview had left Evelyn so strangely confused. After some cogitation he set it down to his blundering remark about Steel.

"I can't see why you want to have Richard's portrait painted by that Vermicelli man, Evelyn," her mother lamented. "You're always so queer, and so decided when once you get a notion into your head. He's cheap, of course, but I should think that you'd want to give Richard the best there was to be had."

Her protest was not carried to the ultimatum point. Mrs. Squires was not a woman of persistent force of character, and she always stood rather in awe of her accomplished daughter, mingled with pride at the finished product of her husband's purse. She had never altogether ceased to feel that the up-bringing in her native village still hampered and confined her actions; she was never wholly at home in the magnificent mansion on Fifth Avenue, or the "cottage" at Newport, and the shameful memories of those days when she was a simple farmer's daughter, far more intimate with "setting" hens than Persian rugs and Watteau pictures, were an abiding humiliation. Her mood was still resentful, however, when, on the following morning, she stepped into her automobile with Jocelyn and Evelyn and suffered herself to be borne southward into the unfamiliar regions of Washington Square. She sniffed in disdain when the chauffeur stopped in front of the squalid tenement house in which Torelli had his studio.

"Evelyn, my dear, if you say it's chic to come to these places I suppose you're right," she said doubtfully. "I can't see, myself, how anybody can work in them, let alone live in them. If Mr. Vermicelli's such a fine painter as you say, why don't he begin on the outside?"

She seemed terrified by the darkness of the hall and of the stairway and held tightly to Jocelyn's arm as they ascended. The artist's room, however, was suffused with light, spacious and clean, though bare. Along the base of the walls numerous pictures, finished and incomplete, were laid. Jocelyn surveyed them with agreeable surprise; even his own amateurish taste told him that these were excellent. The pleasant impression was not diminished when he turned to bow to the painter—a clean-looking, youngish man, with handsome features and a crop of black hair brushed back off a high forehead.

After the preliminary introductions, which Mrs. Squires, on her part, disposed of with the stiffest bow, Lord Jocelyn suffered himself to be posed in a chair by the window, and soon the artist was busy sketching his preliminary outline.

"How much are you goin' to pay for this, Evelyn?" asked Mrs. Squires, breaking the silence.

"Hush, mother," said the girl, flushing in embarrassment.

"But I want to know, Evelyn. Five hundred, did you tell me? Five hundred? Why, it won't take more than four or five sittings if he goes on at this rate, and it can be delivered inside of a couple of weeks. Look, he's finished Richard's head. And I declare, it looks just like him!"

Torelli lost his self-control for a moment.

"Madame forgets that the cost of paints and varnishes has been increased under the new tariff," he said in a low voice; then bit his lip in humiliation.

The remark was lost upon his auditor.

"Well, if Miss Squires is willing, it ain't up to me," she answered.

But she became aware of the increasing coldness and sense of embarrassment in the studio. Presently Torelli threw down his brush. "No more today," he announced. Mrs. Squires rose stiffly and asked Lord Jocelyn to assist her down the steps to the automobile.

"Really, Richard, the smells in these places are almost unbearable," she said. "The atmosphere seems full of turpentine."

Lord Jocelyn, having assisted his future mother-in-law into her seat, finding that Evelyn lingered, went back in search of her. He had ascended to the head of the flight on which Torelli had his studio, when he was suddenly rendered dumb by what he saw through the half-opened door.

For Evelyn Squires lay like a dead weight in the painter's arms, and he was showering kisses upon her cheeks and lips.

"I cannot bear it, Marco," he heard her say in a low voice, as she struggled out of his arms. "I thought our meeting would give us a few more moments together. But I now see that this interview must be our last."

"Why should it be our last?" he whispered. "Come with me, Evelyn; I am known now. I can earn a living with my brush. In a year I shall be famous. I am rich already. I have money in the bank—five hundred and fifty dollars. We could live—"

Even as he turned away Lord Jocelyn could not help smiling. Five hundred and fifty! And Evelyn paid that for a single gown.

He descended softly and then came noisily upstairs again. At the head of the flight Evelyn stood waiting. She smiled at Lord Jocelyn pathetically and they went down once more to the automobile.

"How long you've been, Evelyn," said Mrs. Squires petulantly. "Where have you been?"

"I stayed to chat with Signor Torelli," answered the girl lightly.

And on the way back it was Jocelyn who was the most embarrassed of the party.

"The question before the committee," he soliloquized to the photograph that evening, as he sat back in his chair, "is this: Whether it is consistent with a chap's sense of honor to marry a party of the second part when said party of the second part is in love with a party of the third part—by name, Torelli; nationality, Italian; occupation, artist."

He paused and meditated, puffing at his pipe. "The sense of the committee is that it is not honorable for the said party of the first part to do any such thing," he said in conclusion.

He sighed a little, for he had come to love Evelyn just a little during their engagement.

"The question now is, how is the said party of the third part going to make enough money to supply the party of the second part with gowns, not to speak of bread and butter," he said fiercely to the photograph. He went to bed and dreamed over his problem.

The result of his cogitations was a round of visits that he paid to as many of the Squires' friends as he thought would serve his purpose.

"Evelyn," he said a day or two later, "I have some good news for you. It's about that painter fellow. I've been talking to old Bross, the beer magnate, and he's going to pay him a couple of thousand to paint his wife and daughters."

Evelyn paled; then her eyes flashed angrily.

"Why do you call that 'good' news, Richard?" she demanded feily. "What possible interest do you suppose that it can have for me?"

"Why—er—I thought you might be interested to know," he answered lamely. "It was just a stray thought of mine," he stammered.

And, seeing that she was disposed to accept his explanation, he continued:

"Evie, wouldn't it be nice to get him to finish my portrait here, in this drawing room? It would save your mother from making that journey to Washington Square that she hates so much, and I'm sure she'd never let you accompany me there without her chaperonage."

He broached the plan to Mr. and Mrs. Squires that evening. Mrs. Squires was at first disposed to offer objections.

"It isn't done," she declared emphatically. "Of course, some painters are different: a man may be a painter and yet be a gentleman, but I'm told that this Vermicelli fellow came over in the steerage with a lot of low immigrants only a year or two ago."

"I should have liked to be painted in these surroundings," said Lord Jocelyn meekly, looking in admiration upon the Louis Quinze furniture, embellished by Elizabethan tapestries.

"And think how much trouble it would save you, mamma," Evelyn added.

He carried his point and felt that the first portion of his scheme was satisfactorily concluded. If he could bring Evelyn and Torelli into this propinquity, surely he could wear down those secret scruples which, he knew, would chain her to duty, save under some overmastering emotion.

He contrived that the lovers should be left to themselves for a few moments on each occasion, and, though he was too much of a gentleman to eavesdrop, he noted with secret satisfaction that they were not without effect upon the demeanor of Torelli and his fiancee.

After the third sitting even Mrs. Squires became enthusiastic.

"Really, he's a positive genius," she declared, watching the likeness of her future son-in-law growing upon the canvas. "I wonder whether he would paint me," she continued, glancing at her reflection in the glass over the mantel.

A little judicious maneuvering on Lord Jocelyn's part clinched the proposition. Torelli was to paint both Mr. and Mrs. Squires, for a thousand dollars apiece. "And cash in advance," said Jocelyn, smiling. He had secured for Torelli commissions amounting to ten thousand dollars, and always cash in advance. "It's the thing," was all he deigned to advance as his explanation. But in each instance he stipulated that Torelli should not be told that he was acting as his agent in these matters. The commissions appeared to flow in spontaneously, for Lord Jocelyn's recommendation was accepted as the last word in aesthetics.

"If I don't watch the chap he'll spoil everything by eloping," he said to himself during one of his evening communings. "The party of the first part will play this game off his own bat." And thenceforward he kept the lovers religiously apart.

One week before the date fixed for the marriage, Jocelyn's picture being completed and universally praised, he surprised his father-in-law by insisting that Torelli should make a series of sketches of the Squires' yacht, on which the honeymoon was to be spent, that he might send them to his father in England. The vessel lay at anchor off Newport—a sailing craft, with auxiliary steam, and Jocelyn had taken up his residence in that fashionable resort in order to be near his betrothed, for it had been decided that they should be married there. Torelli was furnished with quarters in the cabin of the yacht, which had already been manned and equipped for the voyage to the Bermudas. Jocelyn had engaged the captain, an old English seafarer of his acquaintance, to whom he disclosed a portion of his design. A chaplain, also, was secured—a college chum of Jocelyn's, whom he had discovered officiating in a little Brooklyn church during one of his rambles. But his existence was not disclosed to any member of his fiancee's family.

The day before the wedding arrived and a strange calm had descended over all, such as that atmospheric quietude which is to be observed immediately before a thunderstorm. Everything was ready. The church at Newport was being decorated with flowers; the members of the Venetian band had learned their pieces; the clergyman, the Rev. Gracchus Hayes, who had married so many pairs of Newport's scions, was smiling benignantly in anticipation of the celebration on the morrow. Evelyn had nerved herself for this ordeal. If her nerves gave way, at least it would not be until after the ceremony. And then—when all was over, why—

She fled to her room and, taking the photograph of the young artist from the locked drawer in which she kept it, she kissed it passionately and tore it into a dozen pieces. Then, having bathed her eyes and composed herself, she joined her parents in the drawing room.

Meanwhile Lord Jocelyn, aboard the vessel, was giving his final instructions to the captain. These ended, he went to the cabin door and knocked. Torelli opened, and seeing his visitor, glowered at him.

"Mr. Torelli," said Jocelyn, "have you finished the sketches?"

"Not now. I shall finish tonight, maybe," Torelli answered. "It will mean working till midnight."

"I want you to stay," Lord Jocelyn answered. "I must have these sketches ready to send to my father before leaving on my wedding trip tomorrow. By the way, Torelli," he continued, carelessly, "I hear you have received quite a number of commissions recently."

"Well, sir?" said the painter angrily.

"And your patrons have paid you cash in advance, I believe?"

"That, Lord Jocelyn, is my own business," the painter answered.

"Pardon me, Mr. Torelli, it is very distinctly my business," replied Lord Jocelyn, smiling. "Because—I obtained them for you; likewise the advance fees. You will need them in the near future."

"You—you," muttered the painter, staring at Lord Jocelyn in astonishment. "I cannot take them. You would never have befriended me if you knew. I must tell you something. I—"

"Tush, man! This is no time for confidences. Don't you see that I have weightier matters on my mind?" Lord Jocelyn answered. "It isn't the easiest thing to get married, let me tell you that, Torelli."

He hurried away from the insistent artist and went up to the captain once more.

"You understand that you are to have the anchor weighed and be ready with steam up to cast off and leave the harbor?" he said.

"Aye, sir," the captain answered.

"You will make for Jacksonville, and on no account, unless restrained by physical force, will you put into land until Jacksonville is reached—a five days' run."

"Lord Jocelyn," said the captain, "I understand what orders mean. I don't pretend to understand them—that ain't my business. My business is to obey them, and that you can reckon on my doing."

"Good—very good, said Jocelyn, and he left the vessel and betook himself to the Squires' mansion.

"The party of the first part having disposed of the party of the third part," he mused, "it now remains only to dispose accurately of the party of the second part." And, arriving as dinner commenced, he suggested to Evelyn that she should stroll down to the yacht with him afterward.

"Evelyn, my dear," her mother said, when she protested, "we'll all go. I declare, Richard, I'm crazy to see the new paintings," she continued. "Now, Evelyn, I must insist that you do not disappoint Richard on this last evening of his single life. Go and put on your wraps, child."

They strolled down to the harbor together, Lord Jocelyn and Evelyn in advance, Mr. and Mrs. Squires behind them. And, as the inevitable hour approached, Lord Jocelyn felt a curious and unwonted sense of contraction in his throat.

"Evie," he said a little huskily, "do you remember our conversation in the conservatory that evening when I asked you to be my wife?"

"Yes, Richard," she answered, steadily, facing him.

"I told you then that I esteemed you more than any woman in the world. I think I would have learned to care for you very much."

"Would have learned?" said Evelyn, in astonishment.

"You do not repent your bargain, Evelyn?"

"No," she answered bravely, and he felt something splash upon his hand that pressed her arm.

Jocelyn loked back. Far, far behind him waddled the varnish king with his amiable spouse. "Evelyn," he said, "you did not tell me that there was another."

He felt her shake from head to foot. She raised her tear-dimmed eyes and loked into his own.

"No, there was no need of that," she answered simply. "Tonight I put all memory of him aside. You need not fear my loyalty," she ended.

"But you still love him?" asked Lord Jocelyn, and, somehow, try as hard as he might, he had a distinct feeling that her denial would relieve that strange, suffocating sensation.

"I have put love out of my life," she answered. "Richard, you will find in me a faithful and devoted wife."

"That's not enough," he answered gayly. "Suppose, Evie, I were to relinquish you to Signor Torelli?"

"Ah!" she exclaimed, as though he had stabbed her. They were now upon the pier at whose end the yacht was anchored. She turned her eyes upon him in anguish. He said no more, but, taking her by the arm, led her aboard. He advanced to the cabin door, opened it, and ushered her in. Then he closed it softly and waited.

It did not reopen.

He counted thirty seconds upon his watch. Then he stepped off the boat and, looking toward the bridge, waved his handkerchief.

Simultaneously two men cast off the ropes; the vessel trembled and then began to recede from the pier. The foot of open water had grown to a hundred yards before he saw a woman emerge from the cabin and wave her arms to him and study the space of water as though she meditated a plunge into its depths. Lord Jocelyn looked back. Two waddling figures were approaching the pier entrance.

"A narrow escape for the parties of all the three parts," he murmured.

Then, as the vessel receded further into the distance, he saw the figure of a painter emerge from the cabin and stand by Evelyn's side. He made a trumpet of his hands and called over the waters:

"Good-bye. Good luck to you!"

And, as he turned, he ended his soliloquy.

"I've shut them up aboard and put a clergyman to keep them company, and if that don't contrive to turn the trick before the ship puts into Jacksonville, why—I'll marry her myself," Lord Jocelyn said.

PRINCE MIGHT GET SHOT.

But Mrs. Pattison Was Willing Her Husband Should Face the Burglar Alone.

Mr. and Mrs. Pattison awakened suddenly. Both thought the noise came from the basement.

"Better go and see what that is," said his wife uneasily. "It may be a burglar!"

"Oh, I hardly think it's a burglar," Pattison said as he turned over in bed.

"Yes," his wife returned, "but then it might be. Oughtn't you to go and investigate?"

Pattison never had gone in much for burglar chasing, but he wasn't afraid of a burglar. Or if he was he wasn't going to let his wife know it. He arose from his bed and strode bravely forth, stubbing his great toe as he did so.

Then he paused to think what would be the best way to approach the burglar. He thought and thought and by and by a thought came out. He would call little Prince, Mrs. Pattison's pet dog, and have him go on ahead and bark an occasional bark. "Then," thought Pattison, "if there really is a burglar in the basement like as not he'll run before I get there."

Prince up to that time didn't know there was a burglar around.

Pattison called the dog softly: "Heah, Prince," he whispered, "heah! heah!"

Mrs. Pattison heard the hoarse whisper for the dog. "Why, George," she exclaimed in alarm, "you're surely not going to take Prince down with you after the burglar!"

"Why, er—ah—the fact is," bluffed Pattison, "I thought if I took the dog along he might help me find the burglar."

"Yes," retorted his wife, "but Prince might get shot!"

Mechanical Lightning Calculator.

The clerical staffs of many of the big insurance companies have of late years been considerably reduced by the employment of mechanical calculators.

One of these, the invention of a German, is a compact little affair resembling a music box. It may be made to perform almost instantaneously the most portentous sums in addition, subtraction, multiplication by one or two factors, division, squaring and cubing. It is required, for instance, to multiply 531,975 by 824. The first factor is set by touching little knobs representing 531,975.

To multiply by the other factor you turn a handle four times, push along a slide one place and turn the handle twice, then push the knobs also times. The slong multiplication is now done, without the possibility of error so far as the machine is concerned, and the dial shows 491,544,900. In the same mechanical way may be done all the other arithmetical processes.

A Blind Baroness.

A short time ago the Baroness von Kranlschfeld (Miriam Gardner) an English woman, died in Bucharest. The baroness, who was one of the queen of Roumania's personal friends, was writing a poem one day when a mist suddenly spread over her eyes, and she thus became, in her fiftieth year, totally blind. In spite of her age, however, the baroness attended an English school to learn the alphabet and the use of the typewriter, and in the end triumphed over her affliction to the extent of being able to make her own clothes and hats without any aid whatever.

Making Records at Home

a great feature of the

Edison Phonograph

The ability to make and reproduce your own records in your own home—the songs and stories of every member of your family and all your friends—in addition to all of the greatest entertainment of every kind

THINK what that means! The Edison Phonograph—the instrument that you would choose anyway, because of the purity and sweetness of Edison tone; because its volume of sound is exactly suited to your home; because it plays both Edison Standard and the long-playing Edison Amberol Records; because it has the sapphire reproducing point that does not scratch or wear the records, and lasts forever—gives you this great home-recording feature besides! And this feature doubles the pleasure of owning a sound-reproducing instrument.

Most Edison styles are regularly equipped to make records at home. Recording equipment for styles not so equipped can be purchased at slight additional cost. When you go to your Edison dealer to pick out your Edison Phonograph, be sure to ask about this home-recording feature, and to get recording equipment with the instrument you buy.

There are Edison dealers everywhere. Go to the nearest and hear the Edison Phonograph play both Edison Standard and Edison Amberol Records. Get complete catalogs from your dealer or from us. Edison Phonographs, $16.00 to $240.00. Edison Standard Records, 45c. Edison Amberol Records (play twice as long), 65c. Edison Grand Opera Records, 65c. to $2.00.

DRIVING AND GEAR SHIFTING NOTES FOR AUTOISTS

The proper method of driving and gear shifting was the subject of a lecture delivered last Friday night by William H. Stewart, Jr., in which the lecturer offered many valuable suggestions to the driving novice. In part Mr. Stewart said:

"The most difficut task for the driving novice to master is gear shifting. The disengagement of the cutch together with the speed ever movement is quite as difficut at first as patting the head with one hand and rubbing the chest with the other. If there were not so many things to do a at the same time, the beginner would be ess confused. However, driving is a simpe art, when once it is mastered.

"Preparatory to starting the engine, one shoud always be cautious. First note that the gear lever is in neutral position; then set the emergency brake. This accomplished, the danger of being run over by one's car is eliminated. The next important step is to fully retard the spark lever. With this in a safe position to avoid the fatal 'kick-back,' and the throttle partially open, the engine is ready for the switch and cranking. Assuming that the engine is now started, advance the spark to the normal position on the quadrant, and adjust the hand throttle until the motor runs smoothly and without racing.

"The driver, hten ready, takes his position behind the wheel. Since most operators use the foot accelerator in preference to the hand throttle, let me assume its use in the present instance. Before starting the car, it may be well to note a few 'don'ts'":

Don't place the hands above the centre of the steering wheel at any time.

Don't race the motor.

Don't move the gear lever without disengaging the clutch.

Don't let the clutch in fast, especially when starting from a standstill.

Don't move the feet away from the clutch pedal when the car is moving; it should always be in position.

Don't start car on any other than first speed.

Don't slip the clutch too much, as it will burn or wear beyond repair.

Don't watch the fellow behind, as he is watching you.

Don't tae your eyes off the road for any reason whatever, while the car is rolling.

"With the engine started, and bearing these don'ts in mind, I will proceed to start the car. First, throw the clutch, release the emergency brake, and place a gear level in first speed. Then let the clutch come back easily, accelerating engine as it takes the load. When the car is rolling, release the clutch again and shift from first to intermediate gear. This operation must be accomplished before the momentum aready gained is lost, or it will be necessary to start all over again on the first speed.

"Having gained the interediate speed and assuming the next to be the high, one should accelerate considerably, and then repeat the former clutch and lever movement. At first it wi bel lfound difficult to judge the proper time when to shift the gears quickl yand noiselessly, but with a little practice it will soon be mastered."

BABY'S OWN TABLETS CURE CONSTIPATION

No ailment causes more suffering to little ones than does constipation. Hardly a little one escapes this trouble—many of them suffer from it continually. The surest cure and safest remedy—one that is absolutely guaranteed to be free from harmful drugs—is Baby's Own Tablets. They never fail—they have cured thousands of cases. Concerning them Mrs. Lep. Blanchet, St. Racine, Que., writes: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets for constipation and vomiting and have found them an excellent remedy, and I have recommended them to several of my neighbours." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

High Society Pair Dances Turkey Trot

SAN DIEGO, CAL., March 15.—Lord Reginald Herbert, captain of the Roya lHorse Guards, an intimate of King George V., and Miss Eleanor Sears, member of one of Boston's proudest families, danced the turkey trot in the bowling alleys of the Hotel Coronado until they were summariy ordered out of the place by the manager of the alleys.

The terpsichorean event was the finale of the banquet given by John Dupee of Chicago to the polo players and their particular friends to celebrate the end of the polo season in Southern California.

Dupee had imported some dancers. The hired talent proved most entertaining, and was forced to repeat the turkey trot over and over again. During the dancing Lord Herbert and Miss Sears disappeared. At the bowling alleys the music from the banquet hall was plainly heard.

The sporty young Briton and the Boston girl turkey trotted down the nearest alley and back again. Just as they were about to start on another round a harsh voice broke in with: "Cut it out; get out of here." It was the manager of the alleys, and he had mistaken the society folks for hired performers.

Miss Sears whispered: "You don't know who we are. That is Lord Herbert and I am Miss Sears."

"Haw, haw," roared the alley manager. "Yes, and I'm President Taft, and that (pointing to his pet dog) is the Prince of Wales. Now, beat it."

Special Tax On Unmarried Men

BOSTON, MASS., March 15.—The bill providing for a tax of $5 a year upon unmarried men over 35, the proceeds to be used for the benefit of "improvident spinsters," came before the Committee on Taxation of the Legislature at the State House the other afternoon.

Mrs. Charlotte Smith, the author of the measure, speaking in its favour, said that the purpose of the bill is to compel men to abandon the unmarried state and to furnish homes for "some of the 12,000 girls who are not married each year."

"There are too many men," she said, "unwilling to settle down and make a home, and the number should be decreased." She also suggested that it would reduce the number of "bachelors who go around making love to young girls."

Miss Farrar, proprietor of the Farrar School, said she finds great difficulty in securing positions for the older girls because the demand of the business world is for young girls. She thought the passage of the bill would reduce the number of women now compelled to earn their own living.

Mrs. Susan E. Stevans, who stated that she is in the real estate business, thought the bill would encourage home-making ,and consequently improve the real estate business.

Representative Alfred Tewksbury of Winthorp said that old men who failed to marry now find themselves dependents of the city or town in their old age, whereas had they married, there would be someone to take care of them.

MODEL HUSBAND DOES NOT MEAN MUCH

Wife Receives Lesser Share of the Matrimonial Bargain

"Did you ever think," said the hermit, turning around in his chair, "what a terrible responsibility that is, and how invariably it is thrust, unshared, upon women? I never heard a man complained of because he did not make his wife very happy. If he does not beat her, or come home drunk habitually, or starve her, he is very generally considered a good husband. But think what a task a woman has to face. It is a difficult matter to make any mortal very happy. Happiness is, after all, not so easy for anyone. I think a woman accomplishes a good deal if she manages to keep herself fairly happy. Now take that husband in question. I'd hate to have to invent his happiness myself. In the first place, he has none of the tastes that give a man of very moderate means happiness. He does not care for books and never reads anything but a newspaper—a pursuit which, while apparently satisfying in a quiet way, cannot be said to make for riotous joy. Then he hates travel and does not know how to look at pictures or scenery. He does not care for the theatre, and when his wife wants to go he always looks like a martyr and groans. 'Oh, of course, if you want to go, I'll have to take you.' Then when he gets there he goes to sleep. And yet I never have heard a breath of blame attached to that man. He stands there in the public eye as a model husband. Yes, I'm heartily glad," ejaculated the hermit, "that I am not a woman. I'm not fit for their responsibilities."—Buffalo Express.

CAUGHT A BAD COLD.

DEVELOPED BRONCHITIS. SHE COULD HARDLY SPEAK.

Bronchitis begins with a tightness across the chest, difficulty of breathing, hoarseness, and there is a dry, harsh, croupy cough.

After a few days mucous begins to be raised. This is at first white, but later of a greenish or yellow color and is occasionally streaked with blood.

Cure the first symptoms of bronchitis by the use of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup and thus prevent it becoming chronic and perhaps turning to consumption.

Mrs. Edward Travers, Campbellton, N.B., writes:—"I thought it my duty to write and let you know what your wonderful medicine has done for me. I caught a very bad cold which developed into bronchitis. I was so choked up I could hardly breathe. I tried many medicines but they did me no good, and I had almost given up in despair. A friend advised me to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, so I got a bottle and felt much better, and by the time I had taken four I was completely cured, and I can assure you I cannot say too much in its praise, as it is all you claim for it, and more."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25 cents.

Here is a New Kind of COFFEE

And We Give You A Pot To Make It In—Free

To get to the heart of the coffee question, you must do as we did—get to the heart of the coffee berry. The coffee berry is protected by Nature from the insect world, by a tough inner shell or coat. This shell contains tannin and other bitter substances.

It is this shell, roasted and ground up with ordinary coffee, that causes indigestion, headaches and other ill-effects so common with coffee drinkers.

Yet there is no other beverage in the world so thoroughly wholesome healthful and delicious as good Coffee when properly made.

Dalton's French Drip Coffee

In the finest, wholesome, delicious coffee. It contains no chicory and by our special process of grinding, every particle of the bitter tannin-bearing shell is removed. We take out all the injurious parts. We leave the meat—the heart—the flavor—the aromatic essences that mean so much to coffee-lovers.

The Percolator, or French Drip Process, is the only way to make really good coffee. We have secured sole rights at last for a practical, economical, reliable French Drip Coffee Pot.

We will give it to you free so that you can try Dalton's French Drip Coffee as it should be made. Read our offer. We have put up Dalton's French Drip Coffee in two Blends

This is the Coffee Pot we are giving away with 2 tins of Coffee at 60c. per tin.

—MILD and STRONG. You don't know which one you will like best until you try both. Dalton's French Drip Coffee is better and costs less than any other if made in Dalton's French Drip Coffee Pot. That is why we make this special offer.

SPECIAL INTRODUCTORY OFFER

We have authorized your Grocer to give you one of these handsome pots (worth $1.50) absolutely Free with your first purchase of a tin EACH of Mild and Strong Blend at 50c. per tin. You buy two tins of our Coffee—one of each blend—to give it a fair trial and we give you the means of making it FREE, satisfied that you will use nothing but Dalton's French Drip Coffee thereafter.

W. H. Hill, Esq.,
Manager,
Sun Life Assurance Co.,
Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Sir,— I wish to thank the Sun Life Assurance Company, through you, for the prompt and very satisfactory settlement of my 15 year Endowment Policy, No. 64345, which matured and was paid me to-day.

I have also a 15 year Endowment maturing to-day in another ——— Company.

The contrast, in the results, is favour of your Company is so marked that I want you to know it, but I am at a loss to know how such a difference could honestly occur. When I tell you that the profits in your Company are three and one-third times the profits in the other Company referred to, and this too notwithstanding I paid the other Company $1.15 per year more per $1000 than I paid you, you will realize my inability to comprehend the cause.

This is surely a tribute to the management of the Sun Life, and I am so well pleased I have applied for further insurance with you.

Incidentally, I would like to say a word for your loan privilege. As you are aware, I borrowed some money on my policy, a little over a year ago, which enabled me to obtain a substantial interest in a town site in the Northwest, and you will be pleased to learn that it has already yielded substantial gain and gives promise to pay hundreds per cent., so that it is impossible to fully realize the value of that Policy to me.

I thought as an old Peterborough boy you would be pleased to know I am delighted with the result.

Yours truly,
(Signed) ROBERT E. DOLAN.

WIFEHOOD IS WOMAN'S BEST PROFESSION

"Women's colleges of the future will train their students to become wives and mothers—not merely teachers and bookworms. Domestic science courses and household economy will find a place in the curriculum. And rightly so. We know that nine-tenths of all the young women in this country are certain to marry and we must prepare them for their vocation in life."

President Jacob Gould Schurman of Cornell University leaned forward from the big arm-chair in his office on the campus as he spoke. His action emphasized the earnestness of his convictions.

Rarely has the president of Cornell permitted himself to be interviewed on the subject of higher education for women.

It was Robert J. Sprague of Amherst College who the other day coined the phrase "Old Maid Factories" for women's colleges. Dr. Sprague, after an exhaustive study of the subject ,declared that it is not the millionaires or the very poor people who fail to have children, but the great well-to-do middle class. He even went so far as to say that college women have a wholly wrong attitude on the marriage question and that their attitude is the most significant cause of the often-discussed "shortness of the baby."

"College education for women is undergoing a great change, and greater changes are soon to come," said President Schurman. "The problem of college education for the man is entirely different. A boy makes a guess as to the profession he wants to follow. He takes the prescribed course, and if he makes the most of his time he finds himself fairly well fitted for his life work, whether it is law, medicine, or engineering.

"Wifehood and motherhood and home-making is the greatest profession of women. Nine out of every ten young women are destined to follow it. Isn't it the duty of educators to train them for it?

Courses for Girls.

"I believe that women's colleges in the future will have courses especially adapted for girls. In the past the colleges have compelled their women students to take the same courses that were prescribed for men for the reason that the college authorities didn't know what the women students wanted and needed, and also because the women students wouldn't accept anything else.

"Of course, for the one-tenth of the women who do not intend to marry or who expect to become teachers, the present courses are satisfactory, but for all the others the training of good home-makers is paramount.

"With these courses in domestic science and household economy there must be a certain amount of culture. I do not mean that everything that is being taught in women's colleges today must be sacrificed for them. But the emphasis must be placed on those courses that will best fit the students to run their homes intelligently, make them attractive, and bring up strong, healthy children.

Decrease in Art Students.

"There is already a noticeable falling off in the number of women students in the arts and sciences at Cornell University, and within the past two years there has been a marked increase in the domestic science and household economy courses. It is one of the most significant trends of the times.

"Quite as important as this change in the education of women is the great demand for agricultural education at the present time," continued President Schurman. "The agricultural department of Cornell University is growing faster than any other department, and it may become the largest in the institution.

"All over the country the agricultural colleges are growing with leaps and bounds. There are several reasons for this. In the first place, practically all our virgin soil is gone. We used to have all the markets to ourselves—now Argentina, Canada, and Russia are competing with us.

"A few years ago there was bread to spare—now the problem of feeding the millions in the country creates a serious situation. This is why agricultural education has come to be such a tremendously important, practical and vital thing in the last few years.

"The so-called learned professions are terribly overcrowded. If the medical schools didn't turn out any doctors for two or three years there would be enough doctors to look after all the sick. Farmers are beginning to realize that their sons are better off on their farms than seeking their fortunes in the cities."

FRANCE TO HAVE GREAT AIR FLEET

PARIS, March 14.—French Army authorities will concentrate their efforts upon the development of an aviation branch. The War Minister has asked the French Senate for a total grant for this year's military aviation expenditure of $4,800,000 for aviation and $1,600,000 for airship purposes, a total of $6,400,000. It is also intended to spend $5,080,000 yearly on the fifth branch of the service. This enormous sum is intended to cover the expenses of material, aero stations, and construction of dirigibles.

A certain number of airships are to be kept in commission and fifteen aerial cruisers are to be constructed, but the special services which aeroplanes alone are capable of rendering on mobilization have been considered paramount in drawing up the organization of the aeronautic arm. For administrative purposes the aeronautic corps is to form a special section under the director of engineering at the War Office. Commanders of army corps are to be kept informed of the progress of military aeronautics and all officers are to be given opportunities to make themselves familiar with the use of avions, as French military aeroplanes are now called.

Position of Eight Airships.

The aviation unit is to be a flotilla of eight avions, six of which are to be in full commission and two in reserve. The six machines in full commission are to be divided into three sections—first, two monoplaces (not monoplanes), or machines to seat one person; secondly, two biplaces, or machines to seat two persons; and, thirdly, two multiplaces, or machines to seat more than two persons. The reserve section is to consist of one monoplace and one biplace. Each flotilla is to be provided with its own automobile transport and field repairing gear. The personnel of each flotilla is to consist of seven pilots, including the commander of the flotilla, a quartermaster, four non-commissioned officers, including a chief engineer, and forty-four men.

With two hundred and eight avions now in commission the French Army can already constitute thirteen of these flotillas, eight of which are designed for the field and five for garrison duty. Each flotilla knows what it would be expected to do on mobilization.

Total of 334 Machines.

At the end of this year the French Army will be able to mobilize twenty-seven field flotillas and five garrison flotillas—a total of 334 machines. A special flotilla composed of the most powerful machines is to be attached to each of the field armies in time of war for long distance reconnaissance work.

Special arrangements likewise are to be made in the case of artillery avions on a plan which is to be drawn up after the manœuvres that are to begin next month under the direction of a member of the Army Council.

The personnel of the aeronautic corps is to be recruited from all arms of the service. The provisional establishment is to consist of 234 officer pilots, 210 observers, forty-two engineers of non-commissioned rank, 110 non-comissioned officers, and 1,980 trained men, together with forty-two surgeons and forty-two not specially trained non-commissioned officers and 660 not specially trained men.

This force is to be formed into an aeronautic regiment seven companies strong—four airship companies and three aeroplane companies—each of which is to number three officers, twelve non-commissioned officers, and ninety-six men. The aeronautic regiment is to be distributed in the thirty aeronautic centres which are being created throughout France. Each of these centres is to be self-contained, with sheds and workshops.

JILTED GIRL LOSES HOPE, KILLS HERSELF

ALLENTOWN, PA., March 15.—After a visit to a fortune-teller, who could give her no encouragement toward effecting a reconciliation with her lover, with whom she is said to have quarreled four years ago, Miss Mary A. Nagle, aged 28, a silk winder, committed suicide by taking carbolic acid.

Miss Nagle had for years lived with Mr. and Mrs. Victor Kramer, who regarded her as a member of the family. On returning home last evening the girl was greatly depressed, and told what the fortune-teller said, intimating that she might drown herself. Mrs. Kramer tried to cheer her up, but during the night, when sounds of distress from Miss Nagle's room were heard, the door was broken open and she was hurried to the hospital, where all efforts to save her proved futile.

Sorest Corn Removed Without Pain, Quickly

No wonder Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor sells so well. You see it is different from any other remedy you have ever used. Does not merely relieve the pain temporarily, but is guaranteed to remove the meanest, sorest corn or callous no matter how long it has bothered you. Get a 25c. bottle of "Putnam's" to-day and prove it. The name tells the story — Putnam's Painless Corn and Wart Extractor, which is sold by druggists.

SUGAR-MAKIN'

"Now the muskrats are a-movin',
Hikin' up the river so.
See the buds out yonder breakin',
Bet you there'll be no more snow.
Birds are busy chirpin' gaily—
Hear the blackbirds and the crow,
In th woods down nex' the valley?
Winter's surely on the go.

"Sap's a-runnin' sure's you're livin'—
Get the buckets, pots, and pans;
William, go tell old John Grivvin,
That we need a couple vans!"
Mercy, who'd 've ever tho't it—
Almost burstin' through the bark!
Boys, get busy with your gimlet,
This ain't goin' to be no lark.

Gatherin' sap! Gee, I like watchin'
Pailsful dumped into the vats;
Perhaps if we're not very busy,
I go shootin' water rats.
Squirrels are thick down by the camp-house,
Fishin's good down in the creek.
Foxes, too, sneak roun' the camp-house,
But for me they are too quick.

Boilin' down! Say, but, it's funny
Settin' here some nights alone;
Couldn't coax me 'way with 'money,
And I tell you I'm no drone.
But there's somethin' fascinating
'Bout this old ramshackle place.
Somethin' that's impersonating,
Somethin' nothin' can e'er efface.

Sugar off! Go blow your bugles,
Tell the people far and near.
Yes, tell old Teacher Scroogies,
And all his tribe to come over here.
This is where we shine—in makin' taffy.
You sure can taste it for a week.
Cram it down until you're daffy,
It will never make you sick.

Nothin' slow 'bout sugar makin',
It's the best time of the year.
And I'm glad that winter's leaving,
So that spring will soon be here.

A Valuable Aid in Fighting Tuberculosis

The modern weapons against the "White Plague" are fresh air and nourishing food. For years Cod Liver Oil has been recognized as probably the best form of nourishment.

The difficulty has been with its nauseating taste and its tendency to upset the digestion. In the nasty taste and the indigestibility have been done away with entirely. The Compound is very agreeable both to the palate and the stomach. At the same time it retains the nutritive and curative properties of the pure Norwegian Oil, strengthened by the addition, in just the right proportions, of Extract of Malt, Wild Cherry, and Hypophosphites of Lime, Soda, Potassium, Manganese and Iron.

When a cold or cough "hangs on", particularly with a child or growing boy or girl, don't take chances. Start right in with a bottle of Na-Dru-Co Tasteless Cod Liver Oil Compound—it will quickly build up the strength to throw off the cough or cold.

Ask your druggist about Na-Dru-Co Tasteless Cod Liver Oil Compound. He has it—or can get it—in 50c. and $1.00 bottles. 103

LOVE OF FINERY LEADS GIRLS INTO TROUBLE

ROCHESTER, March 15.—When Julia Nowack and Agnes Trayford, both 16, left a Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburg train here, wo detectives took them into custody. Miss Nowack was charged with grand larceny, second degree, while the other girl was held for vagrancy. They were taken to Perry.

Two months ago the Nowack girl ran away from her home in Amsterdam with a young man. They went to Perry, where they obtained work in a knitting ill. On Sunday the girl decided to return to her home. She is alleged to have stolen a suit, a gold watch, a white beaver hat, and some money belonging to Miss Dora Pink. The property is valued at more than $80.

Miss Nowack induced the Tyarford girl to run away from home, it is claimed, and together they started for Rochester. They remained in Silver Springs over night. The Trayford girl will not be prosecuted, as she ins a mere schoolgirl. Miss Nowack was arrayed in the other girl's finery when arrested.

A certain lawyer has a tongue that frequently travels faster than his brain when he makes a speech.

In a recent case, in which he was defending a man charged with theft, he brought down the court, jury and spectators by saying excitedly:

"Gentlemen of the jury, you have heard me demonstrate the utter innocence of my client. You have also heard the testimony of the prisoner's own boy in corroboration of what I have stated, and now, gentlemen of the jury, let me remind you of that old Scriptural saying that 'fools and children speak the truth.' What more convincing proof do you require?"

KIT'S COLUMN

Little Nellie Cassidy has got a place in town.
She wear sa fine white apron,
She wears a new black gown,
And the quarest little cap at all, with straymers hanging down.

I met her one fine evening stravagin' down the street,
A feathered hat upon her head
And boots upon her feet.
"Och, Mick," says she, "may God be praised that you and I should meet."

"It's lonesome in the city with such a crowd," says she;
"I'm lost without the bog land,
I'm lost without the sea,
And the harbour an' the fishing boats that sail out fine and free.

"I'd give a golden guinea to stand upon the shore,
To see the big waves lepping,
To hear them splash and roar,
To smell the tar and the drying nets, I'd not be asking more:

"To see the small white houses, their faces to the sea,
The childer in the doorway,
Or round my mother's knee;
For I'm strange and lonesome missing them—God help them all!" says she.

Little Nellie Cassidy earns fourteen pounds and more,
Waiting on the quality,
And answering the door—
But her heart is some place far away upon the Wexford shore.

—W. M. Letts.

It is about this time every March that some of us who have "come across" from the land of potatoes and politics begin to feel like Little Nellie Cassidy, "a thrifle lonesome." The sea surge comes lilting inland, and every now and then the kindly winds of spring bring to the exile a whiff of turf smoke, and the faint perfume of bog roses. Over beyant it is raining, I know—soft, warmish rain, stirring the shamrocks that grow so thick in a spot I know on the edge of a fairy wood. I keep wondering what sort of children are rolling down the gentle slopes of the long green hill behind the house, and if they, like the children of long ago, will go on down to the river afterwards, and pick the early primroses under the bank, and wade with sturdy little legs into the "whirlypool" where the little ass was caught, and held till he drowned. Is the stone with his epitaph scratched on it yet lying at the door of the cave farther down where those children used to store stolen packets of brown sugar and sweeties with "Pickwick" and the Scottish Cavalier, or has it, too, been washed away by the years? And the old mill. Does it growl softly through the night and still send the chaff flying through the wind-bag in the small side window? And is the Miller a man who "goes in the Fairies" regularly every six weeks? Does the headless coachman still drive his shocking pair up to the hall door whenever a "death in the Family" is expected, and what of the Banshee crying up in the great chestnut tree that taps, taps every windy night upon the pane in the children's room? Perhaps the old clock on the stairs knows. Perhaps he is there yet, an erect and stately old figure, ticking out his story—the story of life:

All are scattered now and fled;
Some are married, some are dead;
And when I ask, with throbs of pain,
"Ah, when shall they all meet again?"
As in the days long since gone by,
The ancient timepiece makes reply—
"For ever—never!
Never—for ever!"

Anyway, "Saint Patrick was a gintleman." And his Day is at hand. A good many Canadians will wear the shamrock—or what passes for the little plant—in sympathy and comradeship with a race whose sons have helped to clear many a Canadian acre whose descendants are to-day living, in Canadian farms in prosperous circumstances they would never have known had not their ancestors left the sad shores of Erin for this radiant and hopeful land. Ireland, like England Scotland, has a stake in this country. She has been no inconsiderable contributor to the laying of the foundation of this young nation. Some of Canada's greatest sons had their origin in the land of the shamrock. Only the other day the grave closed over one of these—Canada's great commoner who came of stock Irish of the Irish—a man whose name is on the roll of the Immortals—the men who live in history for ever. That his life was not rounded by seeing the adoption of his favourite cause is to some of us a heartbreak, but he at least saw the sun rising on Ireland's day of liberty. For a new era for that country is dawning, and it may be that when another St Patrick's Day comes round, Ireland will have some measure of that self-government for which she has so long struggled. It would seem (I touch wood as I write), that the days of rack and ruin are fading, and that the beloved country of one's birth, and of one's ove is coming into her own at ast.

In view of what occurred at Dotheboy's Hall, Mimico, it made one feel rather ashamed of having written so strongly the other week in regard to cruelty to dogs. Not that those poor chaps do not need a defender every now and then ,but that the cruelty to boys seems so much more shocking. In fact, between reading the Mimico atrocities, and the account given in the current American of the fearful cruelties practised upon prisoners in certain prisons of the United States, one felt that the cause of the animals might well be deserted in order that one might plead for the humans. It sounded perfectly incredible that such conditions as those revealed at the inquiry into the Mimico Industrial School affair could exist in Canada, and in this year of progress in civilization. Boys in leg irons, boys flogged in inhuman fashion, boys neglected and half-starved because—like unforunate Smike, in Nicholas Nickleby—they had run away! Incredible is not the word. I was stunned. It did not seem possible that such things could occur anywhere today, and least ofall here! I hope those who deserve it wil lbe sharply punished. I wish that thedoors of every Government institution in this country were opened wide for inspection at any and all times. These places should not be covered up. If jails and asylums adn reformatories and homes were obliged to adopt the Open Door policy there would soon be a stop to the oppression, the horrible cruelty and degradation that seem to be going on all the time in some of these places. "The public would interfere," said one awmaker, when I argued the question. "It would not do at all. There would be no system. People would be all the time complaining." Nor could he see any other side of it. Why shouldn't the public interfere to prevent cruelty? Why should not complaint be made when necessary? Why should boys be placed amid surroundings which tend to degrade them, to make them lying and deceitful and servile, and even bestial? Will the plant you set out to grow thrive in the darkness without sunight or water or care? Are we not dependent on our surroundings, the atmosphere in which we live, for our conduct, our views on life, our development. Whatever else is evanescent—our ambitions, dreams, politics, humanity is immortal. But what can we expect of human beings who are raised in such an atmosphere as that revealed by the Mimico investigation?

It is to be hoped thatc onditions in Canadian prisons in no way resembles those shown in Julian Leavitt's articles in the American. You know the expression, "It made my blood boil to hear it." Not that, but it actually makes you physically ill to know that somewhere in God's world men are being tortured as described in these authorized articles. It is the reaction from that feeling that leaves you with the one that makes your "blood boil." Refractory prisons in the Michigan and Kansas jails were treated to such Tower of London tortures as being stretched taut on a barrel wrapped in a wet salted sheet, and flogged with a leather flail; being cuffed up by the wrists to the upper bars of the cell door continuously for a period of fifteen days and longer, being tied in a knot, hands and feet curled, up on the back and thrust into a "coffin" face downwards for six days an dreleased only to die; being—but why go on? I even owe an apology to the Tower of London with its Little Ease Hole an dits Scavenger's Daughter.

And as the author says these wretched convicts are only the men who failed in crime. They were unable to make good—to use a paradox even in a criminal career. They are the spiritless, broken failures of "the great army of lawbreakers," the men who never figure in the sensational "scareheads," the weaklings and dullards. The greatest evil of prison rule seems to be the contract system whereby men are "let" to sweating firms at so much per head, and are asked to perform impossible feats of work, and are punished in the above manner when their human nature fails. Imagine the hopeless degradation of it! Imagine the latent cruelty which is born in every one of us—developed to excess in the nature of the men who do the torturing and those who stand by to see it done! Writing and striving against capital punishment as I have been doing, I almost come to believe it preferable, and more humane in its most revolting form than life as it is lived in the water hole in Kansas prison, or under the leathern paddle in Michigan. It is bad enough that society is obliged to cage men for its own preservation. That it should also torture them is surely past all bearing!

Seeing the day that is in it, an Irish story or two may not come amiss, although it is my private belief that every story that could be mothered or fathered on my country was told long ago. You may or may not have heard of the Rev. M. B. Keogh, surnamed "the Irish Marrisson," a delightful type of the old school of Irish priesthood, hospitable to a fault, keen of wit, and endowed with a gift of irony as nimble as it was sharp. When it is added that the good clergyman frequently suffered from dyspepsia you can imagine what an edge would be given to his sarcasm when he was in ithe mood to wither you. A priest who had formerly been a Jesuit was ionised at a dinner when Father Keogh was present. "I think sir," said the latter from the end of the table, "you were a Jesuit." A stiff bow was the reply. "Judas was also in the society of Jesus," pursued his tormentor, "but he took the cord and died a Franciscan." Perhaps not everyone may see the point of this, which is not for me to explain.

Like Curran, Moore, and other great contemporaries, Keogh's origin was humble. And like all great men—who are likewise simple—he was never ashamed of it. His father was a coffin maker in Cook Street, Dublin. A friend asked him one day, "How is your father?" "Oh," replied Keogh, pulling a long face, "I left him working for death."

And to the last he had his joke. A fellow clergyman, famous for following the hounds, came to see him when he was at the last gasp. "Oh, Father John," muttered the dying priest, "you were always in at the death." And he went away.

"Pat," said a landlord to one of his tenants whom he met on the roadside, "is this true that I hear?" "An' phwat's that, yer honner?" "That you are going to be married again." "Oh, that's so, sir." "But your first wife has only been dead a week!" "An' sure, she's as dead now as she ever will be, yer honner," was Pat's feeling reply.

A pretty Irish maid, who had got married, called to see her mistress. "I hear you are going out to Canada, Kitty," she said. "Aren't you afraid of the voyage?" "Well, ma'am," said Kitty, "that's his lookout. I belong to him now, an' if anything happens to me, sure 'twill be his loss, not mine."

Some years ago as the mail boat from Dublin was entering Holyhead Harbour, a lady fell into the water. An Irish sailor jumped after her and brought her out. The lady's husband handed him a shilling. The spectators did not hesitate to express their indignation of the man's meanness, but this was the view Paddy took of it. eH said, out loud enough for the husband to hear: "Arrah, don't be blamins the gintleman. He knows best. Maybe if I had let her dhrown 'tis a half-crown he'd be afther givin' me."

Some years ago an Irishman came into the bank and asked to see the manager. "What is it?" asked the latter who was busy. "A deposit note, sir," said the countryman, handing him the paper. "One hundred and twenty pounds," said the manager looking at the note. "Your wife must sign it, for it is in your wife's name." "She's dead, sur," said the man. "When did she die?" "Ere yestherday, yer hanner." "Faith, you haven't lost much time," said the banker. "And now I come to think of it, didn't you bring me another deposit note of your wife's about a year and a half ago?" "Thrue for you, sir, I did," said Patrick. "That was my first wife. 'Tis the way wid me, savin' your presence, that I do be very lucky wid the wimmen, sir!"

WAS TROUBLED WITH

Weakness and Palpitation OF THE HEART.

Through one cause or another a large majority of people are troubled, more or less, with some form of heart trouble.

Little attention is paid to the slight weakness of the heart, but when it starts to beat irregularly or intermittently, palpitate and throb, skip beats, beats fast for a time, then so slow as to seem almost to stop, then it causes great anxiety and alarm.

To all such sufferers Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills can and will give prompt and permanent relief.

They do this by their restorative influence on every organ and tissue of the body.

Mrs. John J. Downey, New Glasgow, N.S., writes:—"Just a few lines to let you know what your Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have done for me. I was troubled with weakness and palpitation of the heart, would have severe choking spells, and could scarcely lie down at all. I tried many remedies, but got none to answer my case like your Pills. I can recommend them highly to all having heart or nerve troubles."

Price 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

MARCH WEATHER RHEUMATISM WEATHER

Victims Can Cure Themselves With Dr. Williams' Pink Pills

With the coming of March people who are afflicted with rheumatism begin to have unpleasant reminders of their trouble. The weather is changeable — balmy and springlike, one day, raw cold and piercing, the next. It is such sudden changes of weather that sets the pangs and tortures of rheumatism, lumbago and sciatica going. But it must be borne in mind that although weather conditions start the pains, the trouble is deeply rooted in the blood and can only be cured through the blood. All the lotions and liniments in the world can't cure rheumatism. Rubbing may seem to ease the pain while you are rubbing, but there its value ends. Only through the blood can you cure rheumatism. That's why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have so many thousands of cures of this trouble to their credit. The new, rich blood which they actually make drives out the poisonous acid, and rheumatism is vanquished. Here is an example. Mr. W. C. Douglas, Webbwood, Ont., says: "I was attacked with inflammatory rheumatism, which spread through my entire system. For two months I was not able to go about, and seemed to be hovering between life and death. My joints were swollen and my legs and arms twisted, until I expected that they would never return to their normal shape. The doctor seemed to help me, but not to cure me, and I would be better one day and worse the next. At this time a friend strongly urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I got a dozen boxes. Soon after beginning the pills there was a change for the better and I continued using the pills until I was quite well again The swelling disappeared from the joints. My limbs returned to their natural shape, and I feel as if Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have saved me from being a rheumatic cripple. I hope my experience may prove a blessing to some other sufferer."

If you suffer from rheumatism, or any other disease of the blood, begin to cure yourself to-day with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co. Brockville, Ont.

The Paralytic Forgiven and eHaled. —Mark ii., 1-12.

Golden Text—Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits, who forgiveth all thine iniquities, who healeth all thy diseases.—Psalm ciii., 2-3.

1. Verse 1—How olng will an earnest Christian be in a shop, store or community before it is "noised that he is in the house?"

2. Verse 2—Was it Christ's person, his teaching, or his miracles that attracted the crowd?

3. What are the attractions in this community which draw the biggest crowds?

4. If a preacher lives in close contact with God will he be certain in a populous community to attract the crowd? Why or why not?

5. If Jesus were to come here to reside and preach the same doctrine as in those days would he be popular with the average church member? Why?

6. Verse 3—Of how much benefit is it in these days to bring our sick ones to Jesus?

7. How would you characterise one who did nothing to comfort the sick, relieve the poor, or help people in their trouble?

8. Which more nearly imitate Jesus in caring for the sick, the churches or the societies? Give your reasons.

9. Verse 4—If we are fuly determined to have the members of our families saved by Jesus what can prevent us?

10. What qualities do you most admire in these four men for their insistence in bringing thei rsick friend to Jesus?

11. Verse 5—Which is the more caamitous and why, a palsied body or a palsied soul?

12. What relation had the faith of these four men with the forgiveness of the sins of the sick man?

13. How long does it take God to forgive the sins of a man who is really penitent?

14. Verses 6-7—Does Jesus here state that he forgave this man's sins or that God had forgiven him?

15. If any man of God is assured that a seeker of salvation is truly penitent, why may he not pronounce to him that his sins are forgiven?

16. Verse 8—Was mind reading peculiar to Jesus, or have others a similar gift? Give your reasons.

17. Verses 9-12—The healing of this sick man was clearly a miracle. Was the forgiveness of his sins also a miracle?

Life at the Institute was not all sunshine, however, at least so it proved to a little blind boy, six years old, who was sent from a New Jersey town. Coming from a home where everyone petted him, into an abode of strangers, he became very sad and homesick and cried day and night. He kept calling incessantly for the loved ones at home, especially for his grandmother.

It occurred to Miss Crosby that a little harmless deception might serve to make the child more contented. So, writing to his home, she told them of her plans and asked for any information which would help along the impersonation.

When the time of the next "heart-break" Fanny was carefully "made up" in veils, bonnet, and talking material, for the part of a grandmother of his own flesh and blood. Hearing him calling she rushed into his room exclaiming, "My dear little boy, Grandma has come! She wanted to see you so bad she couldn't stay away another minute!"

"O Grandma, Grandma, Grandma!" the poor little fellow shouted, rushing into her arms, sobbing, "I thought you would never come!"

He made an elaborate series of inquiries; not only the human friends and relatives, but every hen and chicken had to be accounted for. The recent behaviour of several babies, cats, and a dog, for all of which he had pet names, was subjected to strict inquiry, and, aided by the long letters she had received, Miss Crosby was able to give considerable information on a variety of subjects.

She kept up the little masquerade for about three months, and while telling him of it years after, when he had become a teacher himself, he laughed and thanked her from the bottom of his heart for the little strategy. "Otherwise they might have had to send me back," he remarked, "and then I should probably have lost my education."

The honour of being poet-laureate of the Institution was not without its disadvantages. Whenever anything unusual happened Miss Crosby was expected to embalm the occasion in rhyme.

One attempt which had a rather abrupt ending occurred one evening as she was going through the streets of New York with a party of friends; they heard newsboys announcing the death of Daniel Webster. Knowing she would be expected to write a poem she went to her room and commenced her mournful task. She succeeded in planning the first stanza thus:

"A casket has broken—a jewel has fled—
The mighty has fallen—the peerless is dead!
And the heart of the nation is bleeding once more,
For her eagle lies low on her desolate shore!"

She was in the act of repeating this to one friend when another entered and inquired the cause of all the sorrow. On hearing the "news," he laughed outright, much to their astonishment, and informed them that it was not true, and added, "Don't let the poem go any farther; you might kill him yet."

The institute was favoured with a large number of notables among its list of visitors. Eminent statesmen, soldiers, and scholars graced its halls by their presence, but none appealed to the sympathetic nature of Fanny Crosby more than the short visit of Laura Bridgman.

At the age of two years she had lost her sight, her hearing, and her speech; and the senses of touch and smell were also considerably impaired. She was given her first instruction at the age of eight by the well-known Dr. Howe. He could communicate with her only by the touch of the fingers. When she found she could converse with her friends her happiness is said to have been pathetic. One of Miss Crosby's sweetest recollections of her was while little Laura was sitting upon her knee spelling out "Little Fan" to distinguish her from another friend who bore the same given name, but who was larger in size. But words were scarcely needed, for they could almost understand each other's thoughts by the personal magnetism that flowed between them. Miss Crosby does not remember a sweeter personality than Laura Bridgman's.

Another visitor who caused a flurry of excitement and admiration was Jenny Lind, who had already conquered Europe with the melody of her voice and the goodness of her heart, and all America was wild to hear her. The first concert at which she appeared in New York netted her $10,000, and she immediately donated the entire sum to charity. This made her popular from the very first, for there are few things that people like better than to get value received for their money and then have it paid back to them.

Another sweet memory of the past is that of Alice Carey, the English poet, with whom she corresponded for a time, and from whom she received many a pleasant word of cheer.

She used also to have letters of comfort from Frances Ridley Havergal, who composed a beautiful poem as a tribute to her memory. The last stanza is as follows:

"Dear blind sister over the sea,
An English heart goes out to thee!
We are linked by a cable of faith and song,
Flashing bright sympathy swift along;
One in the east and one in the west,
Singing for Him whom our souls love best;
'Singing for Jesus,' telling His love.
All the way to our home above,
Where the severing sea, with its restless tide, never shall hinder and never divide.
Sister, when shall our meeting be,
When our hearts shall sing and our eyes shall see!"

During the fifties and sixties, she wrote the words to several songs, which became popular and continued so for many years. One of these was "Rosalie, the Prairie Flower," another "There's Music in the Air." These, as well as a cantata entitled "The Pilgrim Fathers," were set to music by George F. Root, and thousands of copies sold throughout the country.

But in 1864 came the real and most important step in her political career. In that year she met William B. Bradbury, who was already famous as a writer of hymn music.

"For many years I have been wanting you to write for me," he said, "but somehow could not get an opportunity to talk with you on the subject. I wish you would begin right away."

This seemed to her as if the great work of her life had begun; and she commenced the delicious toil which, with an occasional pause for rest, she has continued ever since.

The first one she wrote for Mr. Bradbury was the hymn that begins:

"We are going, we are going,
To a home beyond the skies,
Where the roses never wither,
And the starlight never dies."

Mr. Bradbury was not strong physically, and in 1865 he died. "I know I am not going to live very long," he used to say; "but, Fanny, you must take up the work where I leave it."

At his funeral, which was one of the tragedies of her life, the first hymn sung was the one quoted in part above. As she stood beside the casket which held the honoured dead, she could not refrain from sobs and tears; but, all at once, she heard a voice from the assembled throng, saying:

"Fanny, pick up the work where Mr. Bradbury leaves it; take your harp from the willow, and dry your tears."

The number of hymns she has written are almost without number. Her publishers, Messrs. Bigelow & Main, claim they would total about seven thousand. There are a great number which never appeared under her name, having been written and dedicated to some friend, and never saw the printing press. Then again she has used various nom de plumes, about one hundred and five in all, because, as some say, her publishers did not want the same name appearing opposite every hymn in the book.

The Canadian Hymnal contains over forty of her hymns, under the following names: "Fanny Crosby," "Jennie Garnett," "Grace I. Frances," "Mrs. Knapp," and "Mrs. Van Alstyne." Other sobriquets which have been used extensively are: "Mrs. E. A. Andrew," "Ella Dale," "Julia Stirling," "Victoria Francis," "Victoria Stewart," "Lyman Cuyler," "Charles Bruce," "Lizzie Edwards," "Sally M. Smith," "Henrietta Blain," "Myra Judson," "Charles Burns," "Alice Monticth," "James M. Black," "Frank Gould," "Victoria Stirling," "Carrie M. Wilson," "Maud Marion," etc.

Ira D. Sankey was a great friend of Fanny Crosby and has set many of her hymns to music. While visiting Edinburgh, an old Scotch woman came to him to thank him for writing "Safe in the Arms of Jesus." "But I didn't write it," replied Mr. Sankey; "that was Fanny Crosby." And he sat down and told her all about the blind hymn-writer.

"Weel," said the old lady, "when ye gang back to America, gie her my love, an' tell her an auld Scots woman sends her blessing. The last hymn my daughter sang before she died was that one."

Another acquaintance which Miss Crosby formed at the Institute remains as a cherished memory to this day. In 1858, the head teacher, Professor William Cleveland, was called to New Jersey by the death of his father, a Presbyterian clergyman. After a few days' absence he returned, bringing with him his brother, Grover, a youth of sixteen, who seemed to feel the death of his father very keenly.

"Grover has taken our father's death very much to heart," said the Professor the next morning, and I wish you would go into the office once in a while, Miss Crosby, where I have installed him as a clerk, and talk with him."

Miss Crosby was introduced to the young man, not dreaming, of course, that she was conversing with one who was destined to be twice elected to the highest position in the gift of the United States.

He seemed a very gentle but intensely ambitious boy. He very seldom wasted his time as other young men were wont to do, but remained at his books. It was this faculty for hard work that proved one of his most valuable aids in his great career. Another very pleasant characteristic which Miss Crosby noticed in him was a disposition to help others. Knowing that it was a great favour to have her poems copied neatly and legibly, he offered to perform that service for her, and she several times availed herself of his aid.

Many people being curious to know how she works have asked her to explain the methods she employs in producing such beautiful lines.

She explains that in the first place she must be in the "mood" to write. There are days, or at least hours, when she could not compose a hymn if the world were laid at her feet. "Fancy writing verses when one has the toothache," she says, "the silent cry of the suffering molar would run through it all." Fortunately she has always enjoyed good health. She never undertakes a hymn without first asking the good Lord to be her inspiration. (Little wonder they all seem inspired.) Having settled on a thought she takes some well-known tune as a model and works to it. This does not imply that the tune will ultimately be chosen as the companion of the words.

Sometimes the tune is furnished her for which to write the words.

"Blessed Assurance" was written in this way for Mrs. Joseph F. Knapp, a well-known writer and singer, who had composed the tune, which, to Fanny Crosby, seemed one of the sweetest she had heard. She was not long in assembling the words, and the hymn was first used at the opening of a great Y.M.C.A. convention in New York City.

After Mr. Bradbury's death, she wrote many hymns for W. H. Doane, who composed much beautiful music. One day he ran into her home hurriedly, and exclaimed: "Fanny, I have just forty minutes to catch the train for Cincinnati; during that time you must write me a hymn and give me a few minutes to catch the cars." He hummed over the melody, and in fifteen minutes she completed the words and he started away. Upon his arrival home he published them, and as a result the world received one of the sweetest and most cherished hymns, "Safe in the Arms of Jesus."

What bereaved soul has not received balm for the bleeding heart as those beautiful words are sung?

"All the Way My Saviour Leads Me" was the result of a bit of personal experience. One day she needed five dollars for a special purpose and needed it in a hurry. Naturally her first impulse was to pray for it. Not long after, a gentleman friend called for a few minutes and in departing shook hands with Fanny, and after the friendly salutation she found in her palm a five dollar bill. The thought that first came to her was: "In what a wonderful way the Lord helps me! All the way my Saviour leads me!" She immediately wrote the hymn and Dr. Robert Lowry set it to music.

Moody and Sankey have converted their thousands, but Fanny Crosby has garnered in her tens of thousands and will continue to do so as the centuries go by.

What soul has not been helped heavenward by the singing of such hymns as: "Jesus is Tenderly Calling Thee Home," "A Better Day is Coming," "Rescue the Perishing"?

What Christian has not had his spiritual strength renewed by lisping such lines as: "Jesus Keep Me Near the Cross," "I am Thine, O Lord," "Hide Me, O My Saviour, Hide Me," "Not Far from the Gates or want Beautiful City"?

And what mourner has not been comforted in her hour of trouble by such hymns as: "Safe in the Arms of Jesus," "Mourner Whereso'er Thou Art," and "Some Day the Silver Cord Will Break"?

Is it any wonder that people the world over continue to take such an interest in such an interesting personality?

Not having seen anything in the press recently regarding her, I sent a letter to her address at Bridgeport, Conn., where she went shortly after her husband's death to live with a widowed sister, inquiring after her health, and received the following reply:

P.O. Box 840,
Bridgeport, Ct.,
February 16th, 1912.

Mr. Roy Gilray,
Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Mr. Gilray,

Replying to your letter of January 26th regarding my health. You may inform my friends that I am unusually well this winter, and busy as usual, writing hymns.

Sincerely yours,
(Signed) FANNY J. CROSBY.

In concluding the contemplation of a life so sublime, we could not sum up the admiration of her countless friends better than by quoting the last part of a poem dedicated to her on her eightieth birthday by the author, Will Carleton, of Brooklyn:

"Years on, O lofty soul,
Though voices from the song-land intercede thee!
Spurn not this earth's control
Yet many years; our suffering mortals need thee.

"But when at last the King
Shall bid thy friends above to cease their waiting,
The angel-choirs will sing
To welcome thee, some hymn of thy creating.

"And Christ will be thy guide,
Confirming, step by step, His wondrous story;
And seek the Father's side,
And say, 'She taught the world to sing Thy glory.'"

TIRED-OUT KIDNEYS

Kidney troubles are so frightfully common that a sound kidney is a rarity. Food I was in a terrible condition. soon because the kidneys are so easily upset by overwork or symptoms of eating and drinking. Cure is effected part by stopping them on to renewed efforts, but by awakening the action of liver and bowels by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This sends the kidneys and bladder clean out. Backache and urinary disorders then disappear.

Deathly Cramps, Stomach was Bloated

A Bad Case That Proves Cramps and Stomach Disorders are Cured Fast by Nerviline.

"The distress I suffered from cramps last summer was so severe I thought it meant death," writes P. R. Emerson, of Guys Hill, P. O. "I was doubled up with pain and in such bad shape I couldn't walk a hundred feet. I remembered having Nerviline on hand and took half a teaspoonful in sweetened water. In five minutes I was well and my stomach derangements disappeared entirely."

NERVILINE

AN INSTANT RELIEF

For cramps, flatulence, diarrhoea and disorders of the stomach and bowels, Nerviline knows no equal—one million bottles used every year—fifty years on the market, that's proof enough of its merit. Large bottles, 50c., trial size, 25c. All dealers or The Catarrhozone Company, Kingston, Ont.

Great Suffering in England on Account of the Coal Strike—Hundreds of Thousands More Out of Work

SHEFFIELD PARALYZED

Special to The Examiner

LONDON, ENG., MARCH 16.—The failure of the settlement of the coal strike has placed Great Britain in a worse position than ever. Hundreds of thousands more men and women will be laid off by Monday through the inability of industries to get coal. The Great Western Railway Company shut down its construction works this morning, laying off ten thousand skilled mechanics as have many other lines and factories.

Bad at Sheffield.

SHEFFIELD, MARCH 16.—Twenty-five thousand men were discharged this morning here, and by Monday it is feared every factory in town will be closed.

Warning From Le Devoir Is Sounded

Special to The Examiner:

MONTREAL, Q., MARCH 16. — Quoting a prominent Canadian civil engineer who has something to do with the plans of the Quebec bridge, Le Devoir says to-day that unless immediate corrections in the plans are directed, there will be a second calamity. "The government should stop all work at the bridge and appoint a commission of competent experts," says the engineer. "The situation is very serious."

HUNDREDS OF THOUSANDS MORE OUT OF WORK

PETERBORO' EMERGES FROM THE GRIP OF A TWENTY-FOUR HOUR BLIZZARD AND IS UNSCATHED

Over 16 Inches of Snow Fell—Storm Was Accompanied by a Biting East Wind of Cyclonic Proportions.

EFFECTS SCARCELY FELT

Sixteen inches of snow, that wet, heavy, disagreeable kind that seems to get down inside your collar and is altogether but little removed from rain—sixteen inches of this white "beautiful" was the amount registered in yesterday's storm. Just when spring seemed to be coming on nicely, showing signs of returning consciousness, Old Props had a fit of the tantrums, not an unusual thing with him, and handed out one of the heaviest storms of the winter.

Street Commissioner Evans' work was practially undone. The trenches that had been made for the carrying away of water that was beginning to collect on the sidewalk and streets, were nearly all filled in, and the family snow shovel that was beginning to get rusty in disuetude, was again called into action.

The street railway battled bravely against the storm king's spleen, and Inspector McCann provided a service without any incommoding delays.

Some of those who have been in the country state that the roads are almost as bad as they have been at any time this winter. In any case there is a great deal of snow in the country and a prolonged soft spell should create a good demand for rubber boots.

This city did not feel the effects of the storm as did some of the towns near Toronto and in western Ontario, where the disturbance was more central. But as it was, it favoured the city with its presence for over twenty-four hours.

HOUSEHOLDERS SNOWED IN

The snow came in the night before last accompanied by a driving east wind and continued all day yesterday, finally abating at midnight. At times yesterday it was almost impossible to see a hundred yards ahead The snow was wet and heavy, making conditions under foot disagreeable. Telegraph and telephone wires were heavily coated, as also were the projections of buildings which were loaded down with tons of the concentrated flakes. The householder who was in the inside looking out yesterday, found a formidable proposition awaiting him this morning, especially if he failed to respond to the call of duty yesterday. In some places the snow was piled up three and four feet deep. "The worst I have struck this winter," exclaimed one East City resident in disgust this morning. With that he unbuttoned his coat and again put his shoulder to the task.

VILLIERS DAIRY CO. WAS ORGANIZED

Mr. Geo. A. Gillespie is Managing Director—Factory Will be Equipped With Modern Machinery

CAPITALIZED AT $10,000

The Villiers Dairy Company was formed on Thursday to take over and operate the Villier's cheese factory. In the charter that has been applied for the capitalization is placed at $10,000 and the provisional directors are Messrs. Frank Elmhurst, president, Thos. Shearer, Alex. Wood, A. Harris and Thos. Fox. Mr. Geo. A. Gillespie of this city has been appointed managing director for the time being. It is the intention of the company to make the factory modern in every particular. All the latest machinery in dairying will be installed this spring and a cool curing room will be added.

The Villiers factory is not far from Keene and has always been known for the quality of the cheese produced, it being regarded one of the best offered on the local board. Under the new management the factory should attain a high standard. Mr. Gillespie while interested in a business way is also influenced by a certain amount of sentiment in what he has done toward the organizing of the compay and securing new equipment. Villiers was the scene of his birth and he still retains a deep interest in the affairs of that community.

COAL STRIKE IN STATES ALTOGETHER PROBABLE

President of Standard Fuel Company Says the Situation is Very Serious Especially as Regards Soft Coal—Will Last at Least Two Months

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, ONT., MARCH 16. — Noel Marshall, president of the Standard Fuel Company and one of Canada's biggest coal barons, returning from an investigation of the coal situation in the States this morning gave a most important interview to your correspondent. "The situation is very serious," he said, "and I am convinced there will be a strike shortly that will last for at least two months." New York, Pittsburg and Chicago brokers are now offering all prices for coal. However, the hard coal situation is not as serious as the soft. I think it will be possible to effect a compromise with the anthracite miners. But Ontario manufacturers must get a full supply of soft coal or shut down and very few store any quantity. They get a car every day or two. This situation is made a great deal worse by the fact that the railway companies are now holding up coal in transit with a view to seizing it for their own use when the strike is actually declared. The coal companies at present have enough on the way from the mines to run businesses for months, but we may not get more than a few cars because of the legalised piracy of the railways. Where we were getting twelve cars now we are only getting one or two. The Grand Trunk has not delivered coal for three days and the Canadian Pacific is still attempting to get coal through."

DEATH OF DR. BOUCHER

Well Known Resident of Peterborough Passed Away at Five O'clock This Morning—Lived Here Over Fifty Years

Peterborough lost one of her best known and most highly respected residents this morning in the death at 5 o'clock at his residence, 196 Brock street, of Robert Penniel Boucher, M. D., who for fifty-four years had lived in this city. Few Peterborough people had a wider circle of friends and acquaintances than had the deceased, and the intelligence of his death, although not unexpected in view of his serious condition for the past two weeks, will come as a shock and bring regret to all who knew him. In his professional career he had earned not only the respect and admiration of his fellow practitioners, but also the esteem and affection of those to whom his skill brought relief. As a citizen of Peterborough he was one who took a deep interest in the affairs of the city and who did his utmost for the welfare of his fellow citizens and of Peterborough as a whole. He took a keen interest in amateur sports and always lent a hand in any movement along these lines. His genial qualities, and sterling worth as a man, a physician and a citizen made him a resident whose death leaves a vacancy that will indeed be hard to fill.

The late Dr. Boucher was of English descent. His grandfather was born in Kent in 1778 and emigrated to Canada in the early part of the last century, settling at District Court House, now a suburb of the town of Cobourg. Dr. Boucher's father was Judge R. M. Boucher, judge of the united counties of Peterborough and Victoria, who passed away in 1869.

Dr. Boucher was born in Colborne in 1848 and at ten years of age came to Peterborough with his father's family. He received his preliminary education at the Public school here and in 1865 commenced the study of medicine at Victoria College, Toronto. After taking the regular course there he spent a term at Belleview Hospital, New York, before graduating in 1870. He subsequently practised two years in the State of Missouri before returning to Peterborough and entering into partnership with the late Dr. George Burnham. This partnership was dissolved in 1880 and for the past thirty-two years the deceased had carried on an independent practice with much success.

For some time Dr. Boucher was a member of the Provincial Board of Health, an appointment that was a tribute to his skill as a physician. He served the city faithfully as a member of the Board of Education, on which body he proved very useful. His interest in athletics is shown by the fact that he was at various times president of the Peterborough Curling Club and president of the Peterborough Lawn Bowling Club. He was one of those most interested in the formation of the Peterborough Club, of which social organization he was a past president. He was also a past president of the Medical Society. He was a member and a past master of Corinthian Lodge, A. F. and A. M. In religion the late Dr. Boucher was an Anglican and a faithful attendant of St. John's church, where he had served as church warden and as a lay delegate to the Synod. In politics he was a Conservative.

Dr. Boucher was married to Miss Burnham, daughter of his former partner who, with five children, survives him. The children are Mr. George Boucher of the Hudson Bay Company, Dr. Beachamp Boucher of Vancouver, B.C., Mr. Arthur Boucher of Montreal, Que., Mrs. Jas. H. Hudson of Montreal and Mrs. T. Bevington of Winnipeg, Man.

The funeral will take place on Monday at 2 o'clock. Rev. Archdeacon Warren will conduct a service at the late residence of the deceased after which the funeral cortege will proceed to St. John's church. Interment will take place in the Little Lake cemetery.

As a mark of their respect and esteem for Dr. Boucher, the members of the Peterborough Medical Association will close their offices on Monday afternoon and will attend the funeral.

BIG INCREASE IN C.G.E. CO. PROFITS

Report for 1911 Shows Profits 54 Per Cent. More Than in 1910—Business Increasing

INTERESTING FIGURES

The annual report of the Canadian General Electric Company, for the year ending December 31st, 1911, was issued to-day. The balance sheet shows current assets of $7,928,840, against current liabilities of $3,947,845, leaving a working capital of approximately $4,000,000. The total profits for the year are $1,495,899, the largest in the history of the company, and an increase of 54 per cent. over 1910, which year in turn showed a gain of 45 per cent. over 1909. This is considered a splendid showing and should be most satisfactory to the shareholders. The net earnings were $899,745. Dividends of 7 per cent. on both comon and preferred stock were paid, totalling $525,109.

Real estate, buildings, etc., is carried on the books at $4,239,894, and machinery and tools at $2,252,989.

Orders received to date in 1912 are in excess of those for the same period a year ago, so that the prospects for the current year are bright. Unfinished business at the end of 1911 amounted to $3,300,000.

During the past year the company acquired the property and assets of the Sunbeam Incandescent Lamp Co. of Toronto, and contracts have been let for additions to the building and equipment which will double the capacity of the plant, while at the Peterborough works a new stores building, 225 feet by 80 feet is in course of erection. A new ornamental bronze and art metal building is to be erected in Toronto during the year. With these extensions and additions production will be materially increased.

INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION DIRECTORS DISCUSS IMPORTANT QUESTIONS RELATING TO ANNUAL FALL FAIR

Regular Monthly Meeting Was Held in Hooper's Palm Parlours Last Evening—Amusements Provided For.

WILL HOLD THREE DAY FAIR

The regular monthly meeting of the Peterborough Industrial Fair Directors was held last evening in Hooper's Palm Parlours. The affair which was of an informal nature was featured by considerable discussion, pertaining to the interests of the 1912 Fall Fair. There were present Messrs. J. H. Gasbutt, President; J. J. Turner, Sr., Treasurer; F. J. A. Hall, Secretary, and the following Directors: Messrs. W. E. Conway, F. Wise, G. A. Gillespie, R. M. Glover, E. Neil and S. Redmond.

Mr. J. J. Turner, chairman of the Amusement Committee, gave a brief resume of the work which had been accomplished by that body. Several feature productions had been secured consisting of a musical act, presented by five ladies and one gentleman, in which several musical instruments were introduced. The costumes used in connection with this act were gorgeous and costly. A comical skating act and a series of knockabout tricks performed by four people, composed the second act, while the third consisted of a special feature of physical culture art, given by Miss DeLeo, an adept in that art. The first act is headed by Miss Cora Youngbody, and the second is designated as the Maros, sisters. The entire bill, which promises to eclipse anything that has ever been put on here in connection with the exhibition, has been secured, at an expenditure of $275, or $1,650 for the circuit, which incorporates five towns, namely, Peterborough, Collingwood, Barrie, Lindsay, and Oshawa. Belleville had dropped out of the circuit this year, explained the speaker, owing to the presence on their exhibition board, of a member who objected to shows of this nature. There was nothing offensive about the performance, and he believed that the committee had acted wisely in the selection.

P. H. O'Donnell, the Chicago lawyer, who will be chief counsel for the labour leaders accused of dynamiting when they are placed on trial at Indianapolis.

Will Confine Fair to Three Days.

The question of a four-day versus three-day fair was also briefly discussed. As the majority favoured a continuance of the usual three-day fair, the latter will prevail for this year at least. The matter was thoroughly gone into at the February meeting, when it was shown that prolonging the Fair from three to four days, would conflict with the dates of the Belleville Fair, and a great many of the exhibitors would be unable to make connections. It was moved by Mr. Conway and seconded by Mr. Glover, that the Fair be confined to three days.

A letter was read from Mr. Peck, M.P.P., in which he announced his intention of favouring the retention of the maximum grant of $800 for Fall Fairs. A movement was on foot in the Provincial Legislature to have this reduced to $600. A letter was also read from the Secretary of the Lindsay Fair directors, in which the writer stated that the member for Victoria County, Mr. Vrooman, would also oppose the reduction of the grant.

It was moved and seconded that Messrs. Conway and Neil act as a committee to interview Mr. Peck, personally, upon the matter.

Mr. Hall, secretary, was given authority to confer with Mr. Quartermaine, with a view to having a suitable memorial caused to present to Mrs. Leary, in recognition of the services rendered by her late husband, Mr. Robert Leary, who was Presi-

Oceana Collides with German Bark and Four Passengers and Several Sailors Are Drowned

BULLION ON BOARD

Special to The Examiner.

NEWHAVEN, ENG., MARCH 17.—The Oriental liner Oceana and the German bark, Pisagua, collided in the English channel this morning and four passengers and several sailors were drowned while being taken off in life boats.

The Oceana sank almost immediately and her forty-one passengers asleep in their berths when the smash came had to wade through water up to their waists to the life boats. Twenty-eight passengers landed here and nine at East Bourne. The Oceana had five million bullion aboard.

Says 25 Drowned.

NEWHAVEN, ENG., MARCH 18.—It is persistently rumoured that twenty persons were drowned from the lifeboat which capsized going off from the Oceana. The Company officially denies this. Another rumour says the Pisagua has foundered with all hands. This is not confirmed.

THE FIRST GRAY HAIR SIGN OF AGE

A harmless remedy, made from common garden sage, quickly restores gray hair to natural colour. The care of the hair, to prevent it from losing its colour and lustre, is just as important as to care for teeth to keep them from discolouring. Why spend money for cosmetics and creams to improve the complexion and yet neglect your hair, when gray hair is even more conspicuous and suggestive of age than wrinkles or a poor complexion? Of the two, it is easier to preserve the natural colour and beauty of the hair than it is to have a good complexion.

All that is necessary is the occasional use of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, a preparation of common garden Sage and Sulphur, combined with other valuable remedies for dry, harsh, faded hair, dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair. After a few applications of this simple, harmless remedy, your hair will gradually be restored to its natural colour, in a short time the dandruff will be removed, and your hair will no longer come out but will start to grow as Nature intended it should.

Don't neglect your hair, for it gets further than anything else to make or mar your good looks. You can buy this remedy at any drug store for fifty cents a bottle, and your druggist will give your money back if you are not satisfied after using. Purchase a bottle to-day. You will never regret it when you realize the difference it will make in your appearance. Special agents, the Wasse Drug Co.

IN THE RIGHT DIRECTION.

The bill introduced into the Ontario Legislature by Hon. Mr. Hanna, providing for the establishment of city or county industrial farms, to give employment to criminal offenders, is in line with the modern trend of dealing with criminals. One feature of it is particularly worthy of consideration and that is the important fact that earnings of criminals on industrial farms may be applied to the maintenance of the families of such criminals, otherwise left without a breadwinner. Apart from the moral influence of work under the most favourable conditions, the making of the so-called punishment, tributary to the maintenance of the culprit and his family, with resultant benefit to the community is not an unimportant consideration. The details of the scope and application of the bill may be subjects of criticism, but the central idea seems to be commendable.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY.

"The dear little shamrock," the emblem of St. Patrick, is buried under a yard deep of snow; but that will not prevent every warm Irish heart from taking on a brisker pulse as the seventeenth of March dawns. For about fifteen centuries St. Patrick's day has been celebrated, and it will require a little more than a snow squall to interfere with the pious habit in this year of grace, 1912. Queen Mary said that a post-mortem examination of her heart would show "Calais"—the lost Calais—written on it. Under similar circumstances the word "Ireland" would be found upon the heart of every Irishman, especially the expatriated Irishman. And it is no wonder that St. Patrick's Day is observed and venerated, for St. Patrick is Ireland in the sense that he made it the land of the highest Christian devotion and the most brightly burning piety. Through all the sad, as well as, less sad, days of her history, Ireland has remained dear to the hearts of her children, and it should be dearer in these days when over the hills of time gleams the dawning of a brighter day; the day when Ireland comes to her own, and the boon of self government, such as we have in free and happy Canada, falls to her people.

SORRY JESTING.

The Dominion Parliamentary circus has its clown in Mr. Webster of Brockville; the Ontario Legislative circus has a clown, who answers to the name of Lennox, a Government supporter, from a York constituency. The House was sitting late — the budget debate was dragging its slow length along. It was the wee sma' hours. Mr. Lennox, by some brain-rocking intellectual process, evolved the brilliant idea that it would be a nice little playful bit of idiocy to circulate the false report that there was to be a division — something that from a party viewpoint, would justify a member rising from the dead, if possible, not to speak of the bed. Many of the members were in bed; they answered the call and tumbled out and tumbled up to the buildings in all sorts of dishabille—two members left a sick bed at the risk of life, and all on account of a senseless practical joke. Aside from the fact that a practical joke demands the smallest play of brains and gentlemanly training, the travesty of representative dignity, the lack of sense of responsibility that marks such crude humour must be a delight to the gentleman's constituents. The perpetrator of this sorry joke may not be a drinking man, but it would be infinitely more to his credit if he had been drunk, than to have conceived the "joke" in his sober senses.

A BACKWARD STEP.

While Canada may be regarded abroad as a chiefly agricultural country, it is in fact a country of diverse industrial capabilities and manufacturing resources. Under the tariff that has prevailed with practical uniformity for over thirty years, nearly all productive industries have flourished to a greater or less degree, especially in the last fifteen years, our exports of manufactured products having grown from 9 millions a year fifteen years ago, to 33 millions a year at present. But shipbuilding has been one of the arts to decline, although there has been a great increase of Canadian owned shipping tonnage. No country in the world has greater use for shipping than Canada. Our population is small yet, but our production capacity far outstrips our domestic capacity for consumption and we must find a marked almost for our surplus products, which are growing, actually, as well as relatively, greater every year. The establishment of a Canadian navy determined upon by parliament nearly two years ago was regarded as involving a decided impetus to ship-building in Canada, inasmuch as the Naval Act required the building of the ships for the Canadian navy, "with"—as Mr. Borden, in a moment of temporary loyalty to Canadian interests and ideals, stated—"our own material, of our own resources and by our own men." This condition would have given Canada a foothold in the arena of shipbuilding and stimulated an immense industry, which as time progressed, would have suffered for the building in Canada of not only the steamers of our ocean-going fleets, but of our inland water fleets. But the Borden government at the bidding of the Nationalist elements of the cabinet, and of its political entourage, saw fit to cancel the contracts, practically let by the Laurier government for the construction of vessels for the Canadian navy; but not only that, but the idea of any Canadian contributio to Imperial defence, has been, at least for the time being, abandoned. Thus the action of Canada to make a beginning on lines of policy approved by the British Admiralty, in sharing the burden of imperial defence, has been negatived, and she has been made to appear ridiculously vacillating and unstable in the eyes of the Mother country and the world. And besides the impulse that a Canadian built navy would have imparted to a Canadian ship building industry has been neutralized. The importance of this impulse may be shown from the fact that without it, we are making isolated efforts to inaugurate Canadian ship-building. At Toronto and Collingwood ship building industries of considerable importance are in operation and now Owen Sound is joining in the enterprise. The town has voted tax exemption, a bonus of $10,000 a year for twenty years and a $50,000 stock subscription to a graving dock and ship-building enterprise, and the government bonus will also be added. The probability is that a very important industry will be the outcome. The action or rather the inaction of th Borden government in the matter of a Canadian navy represents a backward step, and the humiliation of Canada and a disregard for its most important national interests.

An "Innocent" Intruder Brings Canners Under Fire

A Few Hot Minutes in the Budget Debate—Mr. Burnham in Putting a "Poser" to Mr. Oliver Brings His Canner Combine Friends Into Firing Zone.

OTTAWA, MARCH 15.—Thanks to the intrusive irrepressibility of the member for West Peterborough, a little blaze was started yesterday that got the government into quite a bottle of hot water. The Budget debate, heretofore somewhat colourless in character, became gay with purple pasthes at this evening's sitting of the Commons. There were scenes of excitement and acrimony. Hon. Frank Oliver was on his feet and was bludgeoning in his own direct and effectual western way the operations of the food combines. He stirred the cannery in the House into manifold protestations and contradictions, and succeeded in putting Mr. Lalor into the somewhat humiliating position of standing convicted of making a misstatement to Parliament. Messrs. Marshall, Lalor, Ames, Currie, and finally Mr. Middleboro mingled in the melee in defence of the canners, only to finally receive an emphatic rebuke from Mr. Speaker Sproule for the exhibition of "such unseemly interruptions."

The Beginning of Trouble.

It was the ubiquitous Mr. Burnham who precipitated all the trouble. The member for Peterborough has developed a habit of interrupting Opposition speakers in a dramatic manner with questions pertinent and impertinent. Mr. Oliver was dealing with the food problem from the consumers' standpoint, when Mr. Burnham wanted to know how he reconciled the interests of the producers and the consumers.

Mr. Oliver did not hesitate. He was on ground which he has often traversed. He pointed out that owing to the cost of transportation and the operations of combines and middlemen the producer secured less for his produce than that to which he was entitled, while the consumer paid more. Then he added the clause that set his opponents by the ears. "This is particularly the case with a hard and fast combine such as the Canners' Combine." The price received by the farmer, he added, possessed no relation to the price the consumer had to pay.

Mr. Marshall's Contention.

Mr. Marshall was on his feet, challenging the statement. Canned goods, he declared, cost more on the other side than here. The member for Edmonton was making statements which were incorrect.

"Whose incorrect?" questioned Mr. Oliver, sharply

"Oh, he knows his business and you don't," volunteered Major Currie, coming to the rescue of his colleague.

"If the member for Elgin knows his business he has the advantage of the member for Simcoe," retorted Mr. Oliver, amid Liberal laughter. "My information is," he continued, "that the price to the producer is lower, and the price to the consumer is higher."

"You are absolutely incorrect," declared Mr. Lalor.

"The hon. gentlemen ought to know something about the Canadian situation, but I question their knowledge of the situation in the United States," observed Mr. Oliver.

"What's the source of your information?" shouted Mr. Ames.

Effect of Canners' Combine.

"I say this, and say it emphatically," proceeded Mr. Oliver: "that since the formation of the Canners' Combine in Canada, the prices to the consumer have increased considerably, while the farmer has reaped comparatively little advantage. Dare any member rise now in his seat, and deny that?"

Canners Paying More.

Mr. Marshall retorted that the canners were paying more for their produce. Peas had gone up from $20 to $34 per ton; tomatoes from 18 cents to 30 cents per bushel, and corn from $5 to $8 per ton. "We pay more for our labour and our tins are higher. Everything is 25 to 30 per cent. higher," he added.

"How much water thrown in?" queried Dr. Michael Clark.

"If that's true you had better make a speech and put it on Hansard," observed Mr. Carvell.

"Does the member for Elgin mean to tell this House that tomatoes are higher in price in the United States than they are in Montreal?" asked Mr. Brown (Chateauguay), rising.

"I say the canners' price is less," retorted Mr. Marshall. "After they leave our hands we have nothing to do with it. There is no doubt that the wholesalers have raised the prices."

"Does the hon. member mean to say," proceeded Mr. Brown, "that after the wholesalers had made their contract the combine shaded down the quantity to enhance the price?"

"We did not deliver the full quantity because we could not," put in Mr. Lalor.

"It cost the company $40,000 to buy up the shortage," added Mr. Marshall.

"How many cans of tomatoes will a bushel make?" inquired Mr. Oliver.

"That's a secret of the trade," volunteered Mr. Middleboro.

"It depends on the quality," said Mr. Marshall. "From ten to twelve cans, three-pound tins."

"Then, according to your figures, you raised the price to the farmer one cent per tin," continued Mr. Oliver. "That's right, isn't it?" And how much more a tin does the consumer have to pay?"

"That is not fair," exclaimed Mr. Marshall. "Before the amalgamation the wholesalers paid $1.60 per dozen for corn and $1.80 per dozen for peas, while last year we got only eighty-five cents."

"Three years ago it was only seventy cents," added Mr. Lalor.

Reciprocity the Remedy.

"Then the middlemen raised the price," declared Mr. Oliver. "The consumer pays more, certainly. My remedy is to reduce the duty and let the combine on the south side of the line compete with the combine on this side of the line."

"Why didn't you do that during the fifteen years you were in power?" taunted Mr. Lalor.

"We endeavoured to do it just as soon as we secured fair terms from the United States," retorted Mr. Oliver, amid Liberal cheers.

"The ex-Minister does not know what he is talking about," shouted Mr. Lalor. "The reciprocity agreement did not affect canned goods."

Mr. Carvell passed Mr. Oliver a copy of the schedules.

Mr. Lalor's Mistake.

"I am reading from the official Government blue book," said Mr. Oliver, quoting the schedule in question. "The member for Haldimand has just made a statement which as a canner and a member of this House he should have known was altogether incorrect. Has the hon. member anything more to say?"

Mr. Lalor rose in anger. "You did not know the difference yourself until your friend behind you told you and gave you the book," he shouted, amid cries of 'order'."

"That does not concern the House" replied Mr. Oliver. "I did not make the statement, and the hon. member for Haldimand did. The member for Haldimand is himself a canner, and he must have known and presumed upon this House in making that statement. The hon. member is under the disadvantage of being convicted of making a statement which he must have known, of his own knowledge, was a misstatement and wholly inaccurate."

"They have no information," observed Dr. Clark. "They are waiting for the Tariff Commission."

Mr. Speaker Intervenes.

Mr. Lalor was on his feet, talking across the floor, but could not be heard in the tumult. Finally the Speaker restored order, and administered a rebuke to the interruptors. Mr. Oliver had the floor, he stated, and he did not intend to permit any one of "such unseemly interruptions."

The CHIC CHAPEAUX for EARLY SPRING

Copyright, 1912, by I. J. Robinson.

THE day seems to have passed when, when, if we were stout and dumpy, or if we were long and lean we were obliged to search far and wide for suitable headgear, because all the hats were flat and squatty or else all the hats were steep and towering. Though our gowns and suits must bear a modish family resemblance still, the latitude permitted to us in millinery this season is comforting and labor-saving.

There are just two predominating characteristics of the spring hats—a crown else large enough to allow the hat to rest well down on the head, and the upward tilt of the brimmed shapes, which may have dashing droits to the side or back, or show the brim only gently rolled at the edge. For wear with the spring suit or even with the dressier costume, the small or the medium sized hat will undoubtedly be preferred, although later on the linguria gowns will bring out the picturesque large hats which are always in good taste for dressy occasions.

The woman who is loath to give up the snug little bonnet shapes she found so becoming during the winter, will be delighted with the spring models which retain the close lines, but are developed in suitable materials. A distinct novelty is the small straw or taffeta hat made up quite without any wiring. The advantages of a hat of this sort, when traveling, are obvious. One pretty model had the crown and upper rim made from dark blue, finely woven hemp, while the under part of the brim was of more coarsely woven hemp. The brim was turned up squarely across the front, and the only trimming was several red velvet roses which had been arranged on a wire to form a sort of aigrette that tilted backward from the front of the crown. Flowers are used in this manner to a great extent, by the way, to simulate aigrettes and quills, thus giving height to the trimming. While the larger flowers appear to be more popular, the small flowers are often combined with them in most effective ways. A dainty large black chip hat had as its sole trimming a wide quill-like arrangement made of deft pink roses edged with lilies-of-the-valley. This curved over the crown from front to back with a graceful sweep.

Among the small hats the Oriental turban, made up from the soft taffetas that promise to be the vogue in millinery as well as in costuming, will be worn for early spring. Wings and quills and the pesky little "stick-ups" sufficient enough will continue in use. For a little later wear are of malines with little wired upstanding sprays of flowers will be good. A delectable affair of pale pink malines had a sort of cockade at one side of pink rosebuds and violets.

The Tam O'Shanter crown hat will take on a new lease of life and in taffeta or any of the fine straws may be expected to perch itself rakishly on many a pretty head. Classically known as the Rembrandt, this style of hat is particularly adapted to the use of the taffeta silks, in plain and changeable effects. A model that promises to be very popular has the rolling brim of changeable taffeta, as well as the full draped crown which falls over it. The upstanding Numidian feathers of the same shade as the silk give good style to it. Very attractive is this Rembrandt type when carried out in straw, with the entire top of the big, flat crown made of small flowers.

The medium sized hats, with their rolling or turned-up brims and, for the most part, flat, wide crowns, may be simply trimmed with wings or quills or draped smartly with the new silks or ribbons. The stiff little tailored bows seen on so many of the winter felts have been elaborated into various odd rosettes and cockades formed of contrasting colors in satin or taffeta ribbons, with sometimes a touch of velvet ribbon introduced. A modish blue straw which was faced with blue velvet had for its trimming an ornament of narrow plaited ribbon, in scarlet, blue and black, which was shaped somewhat like the feathered pieces that were so well liked, and placed on the crown of the hat near the brim, as the feather would be used.

Although the low, flat crowns have the preference not a few extremely good style models have the high, beehive crowns, combined with an upturning brim. Many of these are trimmed with the large, or the pinwheel variety, which are placed quite high on the crown. To wear with her new spring suit of tan, a petite brunette selected one of these high crown models the other day, which was faced with prune-colored velvet, and had two bows on either side of the crown, one of a peculiar shade of cerise velvet, the other of prune-color taffeta. You may be sure the effect, upon her, was striking.

This combination of plum color, or purple with shades of red, is greatly favored this spring. A toque of Burgundy red straw and velvet, for instance, was trimmed with a large spray of dark purple violets, to one side, in the center of which nestled red velvet roses. Black and white will hold its own, and although the darker shades of blue and purple and red will prevail, a few dashing models are shown in scarlet and emerald green. A three-cornered shape—the tricorne—is especially modish just now—of white tagal braid was faced with emerald green taffeta and trimmed with taffeta wired to simulate mercury wings, with a touch of black velvet at the base of each.

The more elaborate headgear is largely of the broad-brimmed, picturesque variety. The lace hat promises to be a prominent feature of midsummer millinery. Chantilly and mallne laces lend themselves well to the all-lace hat, and for evening wear the gold or silver Chantilly is attractive with plume or aigrette trimming. One of the prettiest of these becoming hats was made from the real Princess lace, and its sole trimming consisted of a spray of exquisite water lilies laid across the crown.

The leghorn hat, flower trimmed, is always a good choice for the youthful face. Many of these are being completely veiled with net or mallne, which gives them an indescribably soft, fluffy appearance. Green dotted net was used to veil one of the large shapes, and a sheath of green velvet and black velvet dahlias formed the trimming.

Huge bows of mallne trim many of the dressier hats, some of them even having the entire crown of shirred mallne. Imagine how pretty a big drooping leghorn was with a facing of deep blue velvet velvet, and a crown of shirred mallne of the same shade, with a bunch of pink rosebuds and blue bells arranged first at one side of the crown.

There is noticeably a return to tendency to fashion flowers for hat trimming, from various fabrics suitable for that purpose. We had, at the window, the quaint little wreaths with bunches of ribbon roses with their leaves. One sees these frequently now, but more often the larger flowers made from chiffon or silk. Dainty enough for the trousseau of a bride was one hat trimmed with dahlias cleverly contrived in white chiffon, with the leaves made of wired satin, veiled with the chiffon. The hat itself was a leghorn over which the white chiffon had been shirred, and the whole effect was charming youthful and simple.

EVEN HEADACHES ARE QUICKLY CURED

WHEN YOU CURE THE KIDNEYS WITH DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

The Cured Kidneys Strain all Impurities Out of the Blood and the Result is Good Health All Over the Body.

STORNOWAY, Compton Co., Que., March 15.—(Special.)—The number of different ailments that Dodd's Kidney Pills have cured would be a cause of constant surprise were it not for the explanation that Dodd's Kidney Pills cure the kidneys, and as everybody knows the kidneys are the point from which disease starts, or good health is assured.

If the kidneys are right all impurities will be strained out of the blood. If the kidneys are not right the impurities remain in the blood to rot, and the blood carries the poison to all parts of the body.

David Bourque of this place, states: "For headaches there is nothing to compare with Dodd's Kidney Pills They have relieved me of all pain."

Strong healthy people are not bothered with headaches .It is weak rundown people who suffer from them. And in nine cases out of nine the weakness comes from impure blood, caused by disordered kidneys. Dodd's Kidney Pills cure headaches, backaches, rheumatism, lumbago and similar diseases by curing the kidneys. Cured kidneys make good health all over the body.

TOBOGGAN ACCIDENT

TO-DAY'S POLICE COURT REGISTER

Youthful Delinquent Remanded—Mrs Duncan's Dog Could not be Found

DRUNK AND DISORDERLY

James Jordan answered to the call of his name in the Police Court, this morning. He also entered a plea of guilty to a charge of [illegible] and disorderly in a public place.

Chief of Police Thompson, asked that judgment be reserved. Work was pending for Jordan, he explained, and he favoured the idea of giving him a chance to redeem himself. If he failed he would be blacklisted.

Youth was Again Remanded.

A beardless youth, purporting to be from Ottawa, and giving his age as fifteen, faced a vagrancy charge this morning. He was arrested a week ago, while trying to gain an entrance to the King George Hotel, by means of a rear door. During his week's sojourn in the cells, Chief Thompson has looked up his Ottawa record, which proved to be a very unsavory one. He has appeared in the Juvenile Court in Ottawa on six different occasions for offences varying from petty theft to vagrancy. His picture also adorns the rogue's gallery.

"What did you come here for?" interrogated the Magistrate.

"To look for work," replied the prisoner.

He was given a further remand until Thursday next, and in the meantime the Chief will communicate with the boy's parents in Ottawa.

Dog Disappeared.

William Duncan failed to produce the dog at the police station this morning as directed by the Magistrate yesterday. He left a note at the Police Station this morning to the effect that he had been unable to round up the canine offender.

"That's only a bluff" commented the Chief.

His Worship made out an order directing that the dog be destroyed at once.

APPRECIATED THE FIRE DEPARTMENT

Following the fire at the canoe factory yesterday the Fire Chief received this morning a mark of appreciation from the company in the form of a letter containing a cheque for ten dollars assigned to the Benefit Fund. This is the second fire that has occurred at the factory this winter and realizing that the efforts of the brigade were responsible for the saving of a considerable amount of money by damage, the company sought to show their appreciation and chose this method in doing so. The letter, which the Chief remarked was more prized by them than the donation, was worded as follows:

"We wish to take this opportunity of expressing our entire satisfaction with the Peterborough Fire Brigade. On two occasionse this winter we have found it necessary to send in alarms and the promptness with which these calls were responded to is certainly commendable.

We appreciate this efficiency and would ask you to accept the enclosed cheque as a donation to the benefit fund.

SUSTAINED PAINFUL INJURY TO HAND

Gertrude Brousseau, of 308 Water street, sustained a painful injury to her hand while employed in the Harvester Company's premises yesterday afternoon.

It is understood that while working a machine her hand was caught by a chain, which tore open the palm of her hand. She was taken to St. Joseph's hospital and attended by Dr. Gallivan, and it is anticipated that the injury will prevent her from carrying out her duties for a few days only.

PROMINENT IN EAST RIDING ELECTIONS

Many local people will be interested to learn that Dr. J. G. Evans who was arrested in Toronto yesterday on a charge of conspiring [illegible] money from the estate of a dead man and is being held without bail, is the same gentleman who played such a conspicuous part in the east riding elections during the late Federal elections, on behalf of the Conservatives. His presence in that constituency on nomination day was the occasion for some stormy scenes, when some dispute arose as to how the meeting should be conducted. It ended by Mr. Kerr, the Liberal candidate, addressing the electors on the inside and Mr. Saxamith, the Conservative candidate, with the assistance of Dr. Evans addressing a body of electors on the outside.

Dr. Evans is connected with the Empire School of Opthalmology and was prominent as a speaker to the "British Born" in last year's campaign.

EAT AND GET THIN

This is turning an old phrase face about, but modern methods of reducing fat have made this revision possible.

If you are overfat and also averse to physical exertion and likewise fond of the table and still want to reduce your excess flesh several pounds, do this: Go to your druggist (or write the Marmola Co., 833 Farmer Bldg., Detroit, Mich.) and give him (or send them) 75 cents. For this modest amount of money the druggist will put you in the way of satisfying your ambition for a nice, trim, slim figure. He will hand you a large case of Marmola Prescription Tablets (compounded in accordance with the famous Marmola Prescription), one of which you must take after each meal and at bedtime until you begin to lose your fat at the rate of 12 to 16 ounces a day. That is all. Just go on eating what you like, leave exercising to the athletes, but take your little tablet faithfully and without a doubt that flabby flesh will quickly take unto itself wings, leaving behind it your natural self, neatly clothed in firm flesh and trim muscles.

"SYLVIA" ON WOMAN SUFFRAGE MOVEMENT

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—The articles by Adeline Roberts for the enlightenment of your readers, are mere repetition of the arguments set forth by the "Family Compact Suffragettes" of Toronto, which have had a wide circulation during the past two years. Her offensive style can hardly gain any admirers for the "movement."

Men have looked upon the "Woman Suffrage Movement" as a harmless fad, soon to be dropped, but the recent outbreak in England proves it to be a troublesome kind of insanity.

The Suffragette pretence that they would, or could, better the state of humanity by votes looks very shallow, while they neglect and even scorn the most important duties in this direction that are performed without votes and with which voting has nothing to do.

The dispute as to whether woman is intellectually superior, inferior, or equal to man, has no more to do with the question of franchise than it has to do with woman's fitness for war, engineering or police duty.

The difference between man and woman is physiological, and the division of labour between the sexes is simply that which nature demands, and experience proves to be necessary.

There is no reason why woman should not engage in war, politics, legislation, or heavy manual labour, except that physiologically she is less fitted for these activities than man is. Common sense and experience dictated suitable division of duties between the sexes long before any science by the name of physiology was known, and only where common sense and the natural emotions of woman are lacking, do we find women clamoring to forsake the duties natural to their sex, and adopt instead activities suitable only to men.

The dress, manners, health and habits of women afford no evidence that their vote would change affairs of state, except in the greater expense of elections and the further substitution of emotional folly for reasoning in election campaigns.

The plea that women will improve our sanitary laws seems ridiculous to those who have suffered the foul air of rooms where women meet at receptions and teas. Women buy food handled in the most unsanitary way in preference to doing their own cooking. They appear to set little value on the lives of infants when they substitute patent food for that which nature intended.

The health and manners of children reflect the intelligence and industry of mothers. The failure of mothers in this is evident in the appalling relations by medical and dental inspection of school children: Denunciation of the manners of children is heard from every quarter. Would the granting of the vote to women change this state of affairs, and if so, how?

Women get their share of blame for high prices. An American woman writer says: "The merchant can very well let her vote for school committee or allow her to get up clubs for the promotion of cleaner shirtwaists on the messenger girls. He knows how to make her buy that which he has to sell until she has become 'tamptable' instead of dominant."

"American women no longer have minds of their own about what they should eat and wear and what they shall do with their time."

How are they to be expected to have minds of their own in the exercise of the franchise?"

We cannot believe that women will sell vote for what is right and good and more than men do when we read that young inexperienced girls coming into Toronto may not trust the most motherly-looking stranger who speaks to them in the streets.

How can the votes of women, any more than the votes of men, abolish the white slave traffic?

The writer does not believe that sensible women are lower now than they used to be. But it is evident that common sense is out of fashion where 'suffragette' ideas can gain popularity.

Sylvia.

Severe Storms And Hot Summer For 1912 Predicts Rev. Irl Hicks

The Rev. Irl R. Hicks, "long-distance weather prognosticator," ignoring thick goose bones and heavy squirrel pelts as "absurd weather signs," predicts that the summer of 1912 will be a hot one, and that a drought will extend over the southern belt of states next season.

Tain, wind and snow and possibly tornadoes and hurricanes will occur southward about March 19. Fair weather ad extreme cold will follow. Another seismic period is predicted between March 15 and 21. Dr. Hicks says the period is very propitious for West Indian cyclonic storms to reach the gulf coast. He predicts no extreme danger, but declares it won't do any harm to be prepared. Another storm period centres around March 29, moving eastward.

Storm periods cover April 6—11 and 14—16. The later period may bring severe wind and rain storms, and the temperature will be high, it is predicted.

High temperatures and tornado areas in the southern regions are seen around April 21. Snow and sleet squalls are predicted at this time for the northward region and a marked seismic period for April 17. The stormy period will extend to the end of the month, with a marked increase in severity around 25 and 26, and a possible brief change to colder weather following.

Frost between May 8-11 is not unlikely northward, Dr. Hicks believes.

A seismic and volcanic period occurs June 12-18, and the month will be marked with rainstorms and electrical disturbances. General planetary volcanic unrest and seismic disturbances will prevail over the world from the middle to the end of the month. The rains of July will not be of general character. The moisture, it is predicted, will fall far short of the requirements of growing crops. Extreme warmth and electrical storms will mark the month.

A period of cold weather will give relief July 14. Another cool spell will follow July 29. Rainfall will be insufficient and central, and western regions will suffer from serious drought.

Extra precautions should be taken by farmers and dealers in perishable commodities against the excessively severe November weather, the forecaster declares. Very cold weather, preceded by snow and storms, will occur about November 10. A storm period moving eastward will occur between November 13 and 16.

December will be marked by a season of warm weather during the first two or three days followed by a sudden and severe cold wave, extending to the south and east. Northern and blizzardous conditions will follow up to about the middle of the month. This time will be a period of electric disturbances.

Muscles Useless Without Nerve Force

Perhaps you are not quite clear on the relation of the nerves to the rest of the body. Through the nerve fibres which extend through countless branches to every nook and corner of the human system is conveyed the motive power which operates the various organs.

There could be no breathing, no beating of the heart, no flow of the digestive fluids, no action of any muscle or organ of the body without nerve force. Consequently, when the nervous system becomes exhausted there is complete collapse of the body, the different stages of which are described as nervous prostration, locomotor ataxia and paralysis.

The time to use such restorative treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is when the headaches, sleeplessness, indigestion and other warning symptoms first appear. A few weeks' persistent treatment is then sufficient to revitalize the wasted nerve cells and restore health and vigour.

JOHNNIE CANUCK GIVES A FEW GENTLE HOME THRUSTS

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Before the last general election for the Dominion House there was a great cry raised about how the Laurier immigration policy was knocking against the interests of the wage-earner and we were told that the Liberal Government should be defeated on this account. Now, the candidate that appealed to us as one who was from his own assurence the most likely to stand by what he said, promised that, if elected, and the Borden Government were in power, the working man could rest assured that there would be a change for the better. What is the result? Are the prospects of getting more wages in our city in order to keep pace with the high cost of living, brighter; and what changes have been made or advocated to relieve this difficulty? It does not require an extraordinary mind to see at a glance that the present government is in the hands of the trusts and mergers and therefore must listen to Flavelle, Cochshutt and Co. They are subject to the dictation of the canners, whiskey and cement trusts and many other large sellers of watered stock, who were described as commercial bandits by our representative before the election. After the way he has fallen into line, we should get out, the hook. The Board of Trade should try and induce Premier Roblin to take him to Manitoba in order to bring about a settlement of his school question. Look at the wonderful success he had in Otonabee, or are we going to continually put up with this misrepresentation? It is no wonder that so many of our good citizens are leaving the city.

We hear very often from Conservatives of the old type expressions of disgust and some of the new type have made declarations in order to express their indignation and contempt in language the spicy nature of which is only equalled and found necessary by so-called ex-priests, ex-monks, and escaped nuns, whose writings and lectures they have used and are using, for the advancement of the Conservative party. When can we expect that the good old Conservative party will ever come under the control of the better element amongst them. Surely all principle is not sacrificed on account of patronage, and in order to satisfy bigotry.

It is claimed that Mr. Burnham is bringing himself and Peterborough prominently before the public. So did the man with the big pants, some years ago. If we don't be on our guard he will outshine our lift-lock, and as our lift-lock is somewhat of a permanent nature, while on the other hand—Imperial Cæsar, dead and turned to clay, might stop a hole to keep the wind away.

The friends of Mr. J. H. Burnham will witness another transformation scene shortly. What was once a strong advocate of Home Rule for Ireland will change to suit the hour and the place. How easily we can recall those flattering speeches in support of the work done by the Separate Schools when he so often took part in the presentation of the Ledals, and the great transformation from a pro-Boer to one of the most loyal subjects.

Johnnie Canuck.

HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY OFFER MORE ATTRACTIVE THAN EVER

With the approach of the spring season, the Horticultural Society's activity is once more in evidence, their offer to the citizens being much more attractive and better than ever before as it allows each one a choice of four options, any one of which is ideal in its particular line. In addition to this present distribution, The Canadian Horticulturist, a bright newsy magazine devoted to all matters pertaining to flowers, gardening, etc., is sent, as well as a general distribution of flowering bulbs in the fall to each one becoming a member at the annual fee of $1.00. By taking advantage of this offer each citizen is given an opportunity of brightening up his own home as well as beautifying the city to such an extent as to make us all feel proud to welcome visitors to our midst that they may give our city the boost we are all trying to give, and it is hoped the response to this appeal will be greater than ever before and that before the first of April each one will feel it his duty to join in the general movement of our own betterment.

The directors of the Horticulture Society deserve commendation for the painstaking manner in which this work has heretofore been conducted and it now remains for our united effort to make one of Peterborough's greatest advertisements quite apparent to the casual observer.

Full particulars with application forms may be had any time by applying at any of the following places: Messrs. Jordan Bros., P. Connal & Son, Porter S. White, Mr. Frank Wise, Little Lake cemetery, or to the secretary, 203 King street.

Special meetings for children will be held on Friday, Saturday and Monday, at 4.15 p.m. On those days the hours of the Convention will be 3 and 7.45 p.m., and on Sunday, at 11 a.m., 3, and 7 p.m.

SOME "BUNTY-ISMS"

Plain Words From "When Bunty Pulls The Strings."

An angry wumman turns out a clean washin'.

Most of the contented wummin are plain.

Even though ye are plain dinna' be so plain as ye look.

I see ye've had a disappointment, bue ye canna' sweet a man simply because he refuses to marry you.

Some wumman has to manage nearly ever man in the world, and it's a most unfortunate man who will nae be managed.

There's nae progress wi'out something new, and I'm not among the wummin who believe that the new thing is necessarily scandelous.

Sometimes a plain wumman wishes she was as beautiful as a lily; then she could take her pick of the men. It's my opeenion there's no much choice among them.

Wummin make a mistake when they think a' a man cares aboot is to see ye lookin' bonnie. It's true that he dinna want a wumman around lookin' like a hen that's been out in the rain. No matter how plain ye are ye maun continue to look attractive enough for a kiss; but it's easy if ye are a wumman of sense.

A plain lassie is often more important than she thinks. What would become of men wi'out her is a terrible thing to think aboot. In the house and in the shop she is often the only capable wumman to be found, because she is born wi'out foolishness. That's wun of the compensations of a plain wumman, but she does no 'always know it.

No wumman is so plain she canna be guid merchandise for any man that's a man. She must be an early riser, a good washer, an experienced plain cook and economical in her household affairs. Aye, and she must learn obedience—when 'tis convenient. Never let your man think he's no' the master, but be sure you manage him yersell.

Selection—Orchestra.

Death Follows The Surgeon's Knife

Surgery is the fad in medical treatment, and many doctors still recommend a surgical operation for piles. Too often the results are fatal to the patient and even when the operation is a success there is not always a cure.

There is a safer way to cure piles, a less risky and less expensive way. You are certain of obtaining relief by using Dr. Chase's Ointment, and if you persist in this treatment you can also be fully cured.

It is worth while to try Dr. Chase's Ointment, even if you have been told that an operation is necessary. Many have escaped the knife by using this ointment, others have been cured by its use after operations had failed.

Relief from the itching, stinging sensations which make the suffering from piles so hard to bear is obtained almost as soon as Dr. Chase's Ointment is applied.

Horse Backed Into A Plate Glass Window

While driving down George street about three o'clock this afternoon, a horse driven by a farmer, took fright at a passing street car. The animal plunged madly around for a few spasms and wound up by backing the cutter and driver into the plate glass window of LeBrun's, George street clothiers. The damage will amount to about $75. The driver drove away after the accident without disclosing his identity. The building is owned by the Toronto Loan and Savings Co.

Hydraulic Motor Invented By A Local Man

Gets Its Motive Power in Standing Water—Ingenious Contrivance Opens Up New Field of Power Production

PATENT APPLIED FOR

Given a tank of water could you "harness" it to produce power? Or given a body of standing water could you secure what engineers call one horse power from it?

Mr. Spies, 132 Park street, former superintendent of the Lundy Shovel and Tool Company, has solved this problem and his invention apparently opens up what seems to have been an unused source from which power can be secured. He has originated a hydraulic motor employing the elements of air and water and the force of gravity.

In a shed at the rear of his house he has worked during the past six months and has succeeded in putting his idea into concrete working form, has registered it and expects to receive his patent in the near future.

The motor at first glance from an ordinary observer, is simply a galvanized tank. It is about nine feet high and three feet in diameter and is simply the water container. The mechaniam is within, and while it appears to be complex at first, its simplicity is emphasised as the working is explained. The details will be given to the public at a later date, for the present only a reference to the invention can be made.

The utilising of falling water, as for instance a fall in a river, is familiar, but to harness standing water for power purposes is a problem that has presented real difficulties. Mr. Spies has [illegible]ured what might be called a simple device after it is demonstrated. To an Examiner reporter he stated that the principle is applicable for the securing of almost any amount of power. He believes it will be particularly useful in places where power from running water is not available. It can also be used in providing power for small establishments by using a tank as a water container. All that is required is to fill the tank with water after the machine has been set up, and presto, the power is produced. Mr. Spies estimates that one horse power is developed by his working model. He is very optimistic as to its future success and believes it will fill a great vacancy in the matter of power production. He has already patented 62 inventions which have been successful, and some of them have brought appreciable monetary returns.

The real value and importance of Mr. Spies' invention lies in the fact that his invention is the first to obtain power from standing water. In this respect he has invaded an original field and has been successful in preparing a motor impelled by forces hitherto tried without the desired results. The fact that this invention has its birth in Peterborough is of special interest to the citizens particularly if the future success that is hoped for it is attained.

LECTURE

Rev. S. H. Sopher of Victoria College Will give a lime light lecture in Charlotte St. Church Tuesday, March 19 at 8 p. m. on Newfoundland. Admission 15c.

GEORGE ST. METHODIST CHURCH

On Sunday, March 24th, Inspector Hughes of Toronto, will be in Peterborough ,and will give two addresses in the George street Methodist church in the interests of Higher Education. To-morrow in view of this Rev. Mr. Couch will prench sermons of a preparatory nature, in the morning showing the need of all round development while in the evening he will touch on the educational question directly and specifically.

THE MARKET DESERTED

Prices of Eggs and Butter Jumped 10c in a Twinkling—Buyers Were Stampeded

FARMERS WERE FEW

There was nothing plentiful on the market to-day, except long-faced housewives. Even the persistent market clerk, Mr. W. A. Stabler, wore an air of dejection and the toll to be collected would not fill a baby's tin bank. At almost any time you could have rolled a ten pin ball down an aisle without touching anything but the opposite wall. Such was the attendance this morning.

Prices Jumped 10 Cents.

The result was high prices. The farmers had their chance and they grabbed it. Those who arrived about ten o'clock or a little later, that is the farmers, offered butter at from 27 to 30 cents and eggs at from 28 to 25 cents. There was then only a handful of "sellers" and they were disposed to be liberal. They probably anticipated a decline from the opening prices, and thereby they lost money and it's ten to one they were sorry afterwards that they had been so precipitate. The usual rush of arrivals did not materialize and then the bull interests, some way or another, started prices upward.

A clergyman was one of the lucky buyers. He arrived when the exact situation was just beginning to dawn upon some of the farmers. He found two offering almost adjoining, one selling at 28 cents and the other at 40.

"How is your price 40 cents, when this lady is asking 33?"

"I don't know," the woman replied.

The minister bought from the former woman who had only ten pounds left and would not dispose of all to one buyer.

Not long afterwards a little woman asked the price of butter.

"Thirty-five cents" was the answer.

She [illegible]d it and intimated that she wo[illegible] around.

It was not long until she returned.

"Your butter is 35c?" she remarked.

"Oh, no, 40c" was the answer.

"Why you told me only a few minutes ago that it was 35c.

"Yes, I know I did, but it is 40c. now."

"And you won't let me have it at 35c."

"No"

"Well, you can keep it" the housewife replied, and walked away as if she were deeply offended, and would spite the farmer's wife.

The fact of the matter is that at 11 o'clock purchasers were coming down the market stairs with their baskets empty. Little groups gathered here and there, and exclamations of "My goodness, isn't it dreadful" were heard on every hand.

"I'm going to get my butter and eggs from my grocer" one woman remarked to another.

Some of those who remained upstairs received but little satisfaction Eggs were firm at 35c., and butter at 40c. and there they stayed. The late arrivals opened their baskets with an air of "you can take it or leave it" for they felt they could get a little revenge for recent declines.

No Poultry.

Poultry was as last year's daisies, for a survey of the offerings failed to find any. It certainly was a slim market and the citizens can blame the weather man, for the roads were exceeding ly heavy and drifted.

Potatoes Same Price.

Potatoes were scarce and sold at $2 a bag. On the outside one could count the number of rigs almost on his fingers.

Prices Quoted.

The prices quoted were:
Butter, per lb., 37c to 40c.
Eggs, per doz., 33 to 35c.
Potatoes, per bag, $2.00.
Pork—fronts, 10 and 11c per lb., hinds, 11 and 12c per lb.
Beef—fronts, 8 1-2c per lb.
Hinds, 9 1-2c per lb.
Mutton, fronts, 11 1-2c, hinds, 12 1-2c.
Live hogs, per cwt., $7.00.
Dressed hogs, per cwt., $9.60
Butchers' hides, 10c.
Farmers hides, 9c.
Baled hay, per ton, $17.
Loose hay, $14 to $16.

MEN'S BIBLE CLASS

Of Charlotte Street Methodist Church Meet at 2.30.

The men's Bible class of the Charlotte street Methodist church will meet in the body of the church on Sunday afternoon at 2.30. A fifteen minute discussion on "Do we give the Bible a fair chance" will be taken up before the lesson. A cordial invitation is extended to all those who are interested to attend.

Eczema Never Burns and Itches

Used Box of Cuticura Ointment and It Completely Recovered.

"I have suffered from eczema for two years. The smallest insect bite would cause a fiery rash, which I always attributed to the urine scalding and burning. The first days I noticed each new eruption I would be glad, for then I could use Cuticura and ——— Ointment, but both without success. It was always burning and itching. Having seen in the newspaper the advertisement of the Cuticura Remedies, I tried a little, and finding that it benefited me, I bought a box of the Cuticura Ointment. After having used one box, my eczema completely disappeared. The Cuticura Ointment should be kept in every home." (Signed) M. Guigay, Masonville, Que., Jan. 14, 1911.

A Generation of Success

For more than a generation Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment have afforded the quickest and most economical treatment for itching, burning, scaly and bleeding skin and scalp humours, of young and old. A single set is often sufficient. Sold by druggists and dealers everywhere. For a liberal sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment, post-free with 32-p. book on skin troubles, send to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., sole props., 28 Columbus Ave., Boston, U. S. A.

Patrick A Gospel Minister

At the Murray street Baptist church to-morrow evening the pastor, Rev. J. R. Webb, will preach a special sermon on the subject, "Patrick, a Gospel Minister," which should prove of special interest in view of the occasion.

STOMACH DISTRESS IS ENDED FOREVER

No Dyspepsia, Heartburn, Gas or Indigestion in Five Minutes

Take your sour, out-of-order stomach—or maybe you call it Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Gastritis or Catarrh of Stomach; it doesn't matter—take your stomach trouble right with you to your Pharmacist and ask him to open a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and let you eat one 22-grain Triangule and see if within five minutes there is left any trace of your former misery.

The correct name for your trouble is Food Fermentation—food souring, the Digestive organs become weak, there is lack of gastric juice; your food is only half digested, and you become affected with loss of appetite, pressure and fullness after eating, vomiting, nausea, heartburn, griping in bowels, tenderness in the pit of stomach, bad taste in mouth, constipation, pain in limbs, sleeplessness, belching of gas, biliousness, sick headache, nervousness, dizziness or many other similar symptoms.

If your appetite is fickle and nothing tempts you, or you belch gas, or if you feel bloated after eating, or your food lies like a lump of lead on your stomach, you can make up your mind that at the bottom of all this there is but one cause—fermentation of undigested food.

Prove to yourself in five minutes that your stomach is as good as any; that there is nothing really wrong. Stop this fermentation and begin eating what you want without fear of discomfort or misery.

Almost instant relief is waiting for you. It is merely a matter of how soon you take a little Diapepsin.

Commissioner Was Peeved

Hamilton's Industrial Commissioner Goes to London and Gets More Money

HAMILTON, MARCH 16. — J. Grant Henderson, industrial commissioner of Hamilton since last June, has placed his resignation in the hands of the board of control to take effect immediately, and it was accepted. He has signed a contract to go to London as publicity commissioner at a salary of $3,000 the first year, and $3,600 the second year. He received a salary of $1,800 here.

When asked why he was leaving Mr. Henderson said:

"For various reasons. One of them is that I shall receive an increase in salary of $1,800. I will also be given a free hand over my department. There are other reasons which I do not care to discuss."

In his letter of resignation Mr. Henderson says there are no matters of importance that would can be handled by letter."

This is a blow of sarcasm for the board of control, which recently refused to let him go away after a couple of big industries, advising him to write a letter.

"I am sick and tired of hearing the board advise me to write letters instead of making personal visits," he said, "and I am just handing it back to them in a mild way."

It is a well-known fact that Mr. Henderson was greatly dissatisfied with the way his hands were tied here. He practically made up his mind to resign after a mix-up he had a few weeks ago with Mayor Lees, when he returned from New York. He had a bill of $10.20 for entertaining the directors of a big concern, which the Mayor took exception to.

One of the items was for liquid refreshments and the mayor is said to have remarked if he engaged a traveller who bought drinks for a customer that he would fire him.

Last week Mr. Henderson appeared before the board with a number of recommendations which were turned down. He was also refused an increase of $200 in salary, which he asked for.

Mr. Henderson has secured a number of good industries for Hamilton in the short time he has been here. The industrial appropriation here is only $2,600 a year.

AD. CLUB TO DISCUSS INTERESTING MATTERS

A right interesting and profitable time is anticipated at the semi-monthly meeting of the Peterborough Ad Club in the Dominion Bank chambers Tuesday evening, March 19th. Subjects such as "Good Goods at Good Prices, as Opposed to the Bargain Idea," "The Value of the Farmer Trade and How to Appeal For It," "Training the Sales Force to their Responsibility," and "A Review of the Toronto Ad Club's campaign of National Advertising and What it Means to Local Business Men"—these subjects to be handled by local business men,—will ensure something of vital interest to all who attend the meeting.

Further announcements will be made in Monday's papers. The meeting will commence at 8 o'clock sharp and be over well before 10, since the Bank chambers must be closed before this hour.

REVIVAL SERVICES

Revival services will continue in the Free Methodist church, 298 Aylmer street, four successive nights next week, and two following weeks, beginning Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. Services each Sabbath at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. Rev. M. S. Benn of Toronto is to assist after Tuesday, the 26th.

A holiness convention and district quarterly meeting will be held, beginning Thursday, April 4th at 8 p. m. and closing Sunday the 7th. District Elder Rev. W. H. Reynolds will have charge, and a number of preachers and lay members from the Toronto and Campbellford districts are expected to attend. Our motto is "Holiness Unto the Lord." We believe and teach that the Bible is the inspired word of God, and that it is our privilege to be consciously saved from all sin and sanctified wholly through faith in our Lord Jesus Christ, the Son of God.

The people of Peterborough are hereby cordially invited to attend these evangelistic services. Rev. C. Cunningham, Pastor.

PLANS PREPARED

Plans have been prepared by the Portland Cement Company for an industrial plant at Marlboro, about 17 miles west of Edson on the Grand Trunk Pacific, which will cover 9 acres of ground and for which $600,000 worth of steel, concrete and other construction material has been ordered. Already a hotel and stores have been built and the foundations of the factory laid. At the present time 20 men are working on the preliminary structure and digging excavations for the kiln buildings in which will be generated 3,000 degrees of heat, as well as for the clinker ball mill and for the clinker tube mills, which will grind the previously mixed marl and clay clinkers into a commercial commodity as finely ground as wheaten flour.

By April 1, it is understood that 150 men will be working on the plant. Ties are cut and stacked for the spur line on which the building material and clay will be shipped in and the chief engineer is authority for the statement that, working night and day, the plant will have a total capacity of 1,500 barrels of Portland cement a day. Double freight car loading facilities are being provided so that 20 car loads a day can be despatched. A few years ago when the G. T. P. first pushed over the spot, Marlboro was known only as "Mile 28," for no one suspected that hidden there was an enormous bed of marl, varying in depth from 2 to 28 feet, which would make it the home of the mighty industry so soon to be fully established.

A WORD OF PRAISE

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Now that we are, it is to be hoped, at the end of the snow storms, I feel like giving credit where credit is due. The man who had the snow plowing contract for Gilmour street, has done his work in a careful and conscientious manner. I wish, on behalf of the residents, to thank him, through the Examiner.

Yours truly,
Housewife.

THE RED MILL

Big Bill of Fare For Next Week.

'East Lynne,' that beautiful emotion stirring drama which all women love so well, will be one of the special features at the "Red Mill" on Monday and Tuesday next. This, with several other special attractions which have been provided at considerable expense, will feature the performance. The management have spared no pains to make this one of the strongest bills that have yet been produced. The trio of singers, and the up-to-date songs which they present, are alone worth the price of admission. 5c.

Ekos Beat Nemos In Basketball League

The second game of the City Basketball League was played on the "Y" floor last night, when the Eko Club (last year's champions) disposed of the "Nemos" in the best played game of the season; score, Eko 23, Nemos 11. Both teams were big and strong, and both checked very closely, which kept the score down. Elliott and Canniff did the scoring for the champions, while Hill and Long tallied for the Nemos.

Following are the teams:

Ekos—Elliott and A. Hall, forwards; Canniff, centre; Fleming and M. Turner, defence.

Nemos—Hill and Long, forwards; Gilbert centre; Throop and Rogers, defence.

Referee, J. J. Thompson.

The next game in the City Basketball League will be played on Thursday evening, when the Brownies and Ekos will meet. Game will be called at 8.30.

A LOGICAL "WHITE HOPE"

(By Ray C. Pearson)

From 'bus driver to the position of most prominent "white hope" in the pugilistic world is a long step, but it has been an extremely short one for Al Palser, the aspirant who is being groomed to wear the crown which seems so solidly lodged on the head of the black champion, Jack Johnson. Only a little over three years, with not all of that time spent in pugilistic endeavour, would cover the period in which Palser has made such wonderful strides.

This young fighter, who has come out of the West to battle for the greatest honours in the game of fisticuffs, has just turned his twenty-fifth year. Decorah, Ia., claims him as its own. If his crowning achievement is the defeat of Johnson, Palser will have made the state of Iowa more famous than his fellow statesman, Frank Gotch, world's champion wrestler.

In the evolution of 'bus driver to fighter the game of wrestling played a big part. There wasn't anything greatly exciting in driving a pair of nags hitched to the St. Cloud Hotel 'bus in Decorah. Before that, life was equally dull to young Palser, who spent his time doing the work that comes to any Iowa farmer boy. He got up early in the morning to start the daily work and did not stay up late at night. Between times he handed himself three "squares." As a result he flourished and grew to be a big, strong youth. To-day he stands 6 feet 2 inches in his stocking feet, and is a "double century" plant.

In accordance with the other growth, Palser acquired a huge pair of feet. When driving the 'bus at Decorah his friends dubbed him "Big Foot" in those days. He perhaps Iowans refuse to call him by any other. 'Bus driving isn't likely to cause mental unrest or great physical activity, and Al got to leading a drowsy and lazy existence.

Nobody in Decorah ever imagined what the future had in store for "Big Foot" n those days. He perhaps would still be back there driving if he hadn't been "found." It so happened that a newspaper writer on a Sioux City paper, named O'Brien, blew into Decorah one day. He discovered Al leaning up against the State Bank building, and was attracted by Palser's size. The next moment he was talking to "Big Foot."

"Ever do any fighting?" he asked.

"Naw, never did nothin'," was the reply.

Half an hour later Palser was over at the hotel being inspected by the newspaper man, who with a critical eye saw that he "looked good."

But Palser didn't go in for fighting right away. Taking O'Brien's advice, he started to get a few pointers on wrestling, and went to Minneapolis for a tryout at the mat game. He engaged in a few bouts of minor character, and then went to Des Moines, where under the name of Gustavet he met Ordeman, the Minneapolis grappler. The result was a draw, and so overjoyed was "Big Foot" that he started out to find greater worlds to conquer. He went to New York to find the big game.

Landing in New York, Palser had youth, strength and a good physique to boost him along, but nothing in the fighting line. He was awkward, and the most astonishing thing about him was that he thought the only thing he could do was wrestle. He was absolutely ignorant of the fact that he possessed nearly every essential from which a good fighter could be molded. advice of new made friends to take a whirl at the fighting game. After meagre training he got on with a big negro named Jack McCardell at the Sharkey A. C. Crude as he was, "Big Foot" licked the tar out of McCardell, knocking him down almost too often to count. Once, when the negro was hanging on the ropes, Al turned to his seconds and asked: "Can I hit him now?" That was evidence of how much the big Iowan knew about the game. He was just 23 years old then, but the way he walloped his opponent made some of the ringsters sit up and pay attention.

Amog those who sat up was Tom O'Rourke, the promoter and manager of fighters. Tom lost no time in taking Palser into tow. O'Rourke saw the making of a champion then, and unless all signs fail his dream may come true, for "Big Foot" has made wonderful advancement in boxing, and has little to remind one of his awkwardness of two years ago. The tutoring he is getting in New York is fitting him to face the crucial test some day, and already he has accomplished things, the most important being his disposal of Al Kaufmann in jig time, which means five rounds. He has met and beaten others of lesser importance, and is working his way toward the one objective point—Jack Johnson. But he is in no hurry and can afford to wait a little while longer, which he is doing.

Catarrhozone

Cures Permanently
BRONCHITIS, COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, CATARRH

Throw medicine to the dogs. At best they are unpleasant, often useless. You are suffering from some disease of the throat, nose, or lungs. Doctors call it Bronchitis, Asthma, or Catarrh, or it is a slight or severe cold. Germs cause these diseases—they have a common root.

Catarrhozone destroys disease germs, but it does more, it heals disease tissue.

CATARRHOZONE is little drops of healing carried by air to the exact place where Catarrh exists. Observe, Catarrhozone not only destroys the cause, but immediately repairs the result of diseased condition.

Catarrhozone means little drops of healing carried by air and placed over the lungs, throat, and nasal passages.

Catarrhozone is endorsed by doctors, druggists, and by thousands of Canadian people who have used it.

Catarrhozone

Yes, Sir, it is taken in air. "Little drops of healing" carried by air to weak places in the lungs, throat, and nasal passages.

Three sizes: 25c. 50c, and $1.00, at druggists, or by mail postpaid from The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Ont.

IRISHMEN IN BIG LEAGUES

NEW YORK, MARCH 14.—No land can claim a better representation among the premier ball tossers of America than the Emerald Isle. There are multitudes of Germans—Hans Wagner, Frank Schulte, Charley Schmidt and others; Poland is represented by Konetchy and Covaleski; Italy has Ping Bodie, whose real name is Francesto Sanguinotti Spiggonola; the North American Indian is represented by Chiefs Meyers and Bender; the Cubans, Harosas and Almeida are in the big swim, and English, Scotch and Welsh names adorn the score books; but the Irishmen outnumber any two other nationalities put together, and among them are some of the great stars of the game.

Were a man to make a trip through the south at the present time and visit each of the training camps of the major league teams, he would find a goodly-sized band of sons of Erin in each encampment. They always celebrate St. Patrick's day in lusty style in the training camps, and this time it will doubtless be no exception.

Among the Irishmen in the big leagues we find many different types. There is the "wild" Irishman, the hot-headed, fiery, impetuous type; there is the silent, crafty, sly Irishman, the humorous Irishman, the noisy Irishman and the good-natured Irishman, who is constantly being made the butt of practical jokes. Many different kinds, but they are all fighters, fighters to the last ditch, when occasion demands. And being a fighter in time of need is one of the greatest assets a man can possess in baseball, whether he be a player, a manager, a club president or an umpire. There are Irishmen in all three stratas of the baseball world, and each has big fights to fight, and he fights them.

At the head of the National league we find President Tom Lynch, an Irishman. Of the club presidents there are Charley Murphy, of the Chicago Cubs; Jimmy McAleer, of the Boston Red Sox; Charlie Comiskey, of the Boston White Sox, and Frank Farrell, of the New York Yankees, who are all Irishmen. Six of the National league managers—Bill Dahlen, of Brooklyn; Johnny McGraw, of New York; Charley Dooin, of Philadelphia; Fred Clarke, of Pittsburgh; Roger Bresnahan, of St. Louis, and Hank O'Day, of Cincinnati — are Irishmen, and the same can be said of half of the American league's eight managers—Connie Mack, of Philadelphia; Jimmy Callahan, of Chicago; Hughey Jennings, of Detroit, and Clark Griffith, of Washington.

But it is among the players that the Irishmen are strongest. Sons of the Emerald Isle who perform in the pitcher's box are: Ed. Walsh, Chicago White Sox; George Mullin and Wild Bill Donovan, Detroit Tigers; Marty O'Toole, Pittsburgh Pirates, and the youngster Rowan, of the St. Louis Browns. Among the catchers are: Red Donlin, Philadelphia Nationals; Mike Mowrey, St. Louis Cardinals; Jimmy Archer, Chicago Cubs, and Ed. Sweeney, of the New York Yankees. Jack McInnes, of the Athletics, is a star at first base, and the other infield positions are held down by Larry Doyle, New York Giants; Mike Mowrey, St. Louis Cardinals; Bobby Byrne, Pittsburgh Pirates; George Moriarity, Detroit Tigers; Doolan, Philadelphia Nationals; Eddie Collins, Athletics; Delahanty, Detroit Tigers, and George McBride, Washington Americans—all stars.

Coming to the outfield, we find the Irish making good there, too, among them: Mike Donlin, of the Pittsburgh Pirates; Steve Evans, St. Louis Cardinals; Sherwood Magee, Philadelphia Nationals; Max Carey, Pittsburgh Pirates; Joe Daley, Brooklyn Dodgers; Jack Murray, New York Giants; Danny Murphy, Philadelphia Athletics; Matty McIntyre, Jimmy Callahan and Jack Dougherty, Chicago White Sox, and the youngster Hogan, of the St. Louis Browns.

A truly remarkable team could be put into the field made up completely of Irishmen. It could be composed of the following: Ed. Walsh, pitcher; Roger Bresnahan, catcher; Jack McInnes, first base; Eddie Collins, second base; George McBride, shortstop; Bobby Byrne, third base, and Danny Murphy, Sherwood Magee and Jimmy Callahan, outfielders.

It would be great sport to see such a team clash with one made up of the following Germans: Jake Daubert, Brooklyn Nationals, first base; Johnny Evers, Chicago Cubs, second base; Hans Wagner, Pittsburgh Pirates, shortstop; Norman Elberfeld, Washington Americans, third base; Ed. Ruelbach, Chicago Cubs, pitcher; Oscar Stanage, Detroit Tigers, catcher; Frank Schulte and Artie Hoffman, Cincinnati Reds, outfielders.

age and broken wires occasioned by the heavy burden of snow which clung to them. The local C. P. R. Telegraph Company reported trouble on some of the western wires, while the Stock Exchange and G. N. W. also encountered difficulty in maintaining a regular service. It was reported by the telegraph companies that the worst conditions of the winter prevailed. As far as can be learned the Bell Telephone Company was immune from serious tie-ups in their service, and last night everything was reported O.K. from that quarter.

The Railways.

Although the storm did not create such inconvenience on the railway systems, it seems to be the consensus of opinion among the men that the precipitation was by far the heaviest of the winter.

The snow plough passing through on the C.P.R. from Toronto Havelock this morning enabled the morning trains to run, though somewhat late.

The G.T.R. Belleville train, due at 8.55 last night arrived at 1 a.m. and remained in the yard until this morning, when it completed its journey to Lindsay. This morning's Belleville train, with a double header, arrived on time as also did the Lakefield train. The Lindsay train due at 8.10 arrived shortly after 10 o'clock at which time no word had been received of the remainder of the trains.

A Thousand Miles Through Snowdrifts

A Trip of Three HUPMOBILE Cars From Detroit to New York in the Dead of Winter.

That looked easy, but—to negotiate that short distance required an hour and a half. Also it meant helping the cars with all the force the men could put behind them in addition to the best efforts of the willing motors, for the snow was deep and drifted hard over the crest of a hill.

The next day—Wednesday—was the best of the entire run. Getting away from Ingersoll about 11 o'clock, one car—Little Pal—was in Niagara Falls at 8:30 that evening, with a wait of more than an hour in Brantford. The other two made the Falls at 11:30 p. m.

A misunderstanding as to the road accounts for the discrepancy in the time of arrival. Just out of Woodstock the driver of Little Pal, leading, continued straight on instead of turning right. The other two cars turned right and encountered deep snowdrifts which required much shovelling, to give the driving wheels traction.

The best stretch of road encountered on the entire trip was the 17 miles between Hamilton and the village of Grimsby. It is macadam, was frozen hard, and high winds had blown it almost entirely free of snow.

It was so good indeed that none of the cars fell below 45 miles an hour on that particular stretch; and were able to travel at times at the rate of 47 miles per hour.

A COMMITTEE

A committee from the Town of Taber, Alta., headed by the Hon. A. J. MacLean, Provincial Minister of Municipalities, recently interviewed the Grand Trunk Pacific authorities at Winnipeg, as to the possibility of securing the entrance of that railway into their district. Taber has grown to be one of the most important coal-shipping points in the West, but it is claimed by the committee that it has been handicapped by the lack of railway competition. With 15 mines in operation and a total daily capacity of 2,500 tons, only about one-half is being shipped.

"The Liver Pills act So Naturally and Easily."

Such a statement, coming from the cashier of a bank, shows what confidence responsible people have in these pills. Mr. A. L. Wilson after trying them wrote:

"I have used Dr. Miles' Nerve and Liver Pills and also your Anti-Pain Pills, on myself, with good results. The Liver Pills act so naturally and so easily that I scarcely know that I have taken a pill. Frequently being troubled with headache I take an Anti-Pain Pill and get immediate relief in every case."

A. L. Wilson, Sparta, Ill.

Mr. Wilson was for a number of years cashier of the First National Bank of Sparta.

Dr. Miles' Nerve and Liver Pills are different from others. Many kinds of liver pills are "impossible" after one trial on account of their harshness. Dr. Miles' Nerve and Liver Pills do not act by sheer force but in an easy, natural way, without griping or undue irritation. They are not habit forming.

If the first bottle fails to benefit, your druggist will return the price. Ask him.

THE IDEA OF A WOMAN

Having Pimples, Blackheads, Superfluous Hair and Other Facial Blemishes and Appearing in Public is Positively Repulsive.

Why Should And Woman Be Thin, Scrawny and Homely When She Has it in Her Power to be as Beautiful as Her More Fortunate Sister? A Well Known Beauty Reveals Secrets of Beautifying That Every Woman Should Know; Also Tells How to Remove Wrinkles and Develop the Bust to Beautiful Proportions, by a New Discovery. Let This Woman Send you FREE Everything She Agrees and Beautify Your Face and Form Quickly.

This clever woman by her marvelous and simple methods has brought about a wonderful change in her face is a right. For removing wrinkles and developing the bust her method is truly wonderfully rapid. She made herself the woman she is today and brought about the wonderful change in her appearance in a secret and pleasant manner. Her complexion is as clear and fair as that of a child. She turned her scrawny figure into a beautiful bust and well developed form. She had thin, scrawny eye lashes and eyebrows, which could scarcely be seen. She made them long, thick and beautiful by her own methods and removed every blackhead and pimple from her face in a single night.

You can imagine her joy, when by her own simple discovery, she removed every wrinkle from her face and developed her thin neck and form to beautiful proportions.

Nothing is taken into the stomach no common massage, but a common sense method.

It is simply astonishing the thousands of women who write in regarding the wonderful results from this new beauty treatment, which is beautifying their face and form after beauty doctors and other methods have failed. No woman need be unattractive any longer. She has it in her power now to be beautiful, attractive and fascinating.

Ethel Baker, of N. Y., writes: "My bust which was once flat and scrawny, is nicely developed."

E. Weibel, of N.J., writes: "I was always troubled with hair on my arms, but now they are as clear of it as the palm of my hand."

Gertrude Morrow, of Pa., writes. "Your beauty treatment causes the wrinkles to quickly disappear."

The valuable new beauty book which Madame Cuningham is sending free to thousands of women is certainly a blessing to womankind, as it makes known her remarkable methods of beautifying the face and figure of unattractive women.

All our readers should write her at once and she will send you absolutely free, her various new beauty treatments and will show our readers:

How to remove wrinkles; How to develop the figure quickly; How to make long, thick eyelashes and eyebrows; How to remove superfluous hair instantly; How to clear the skin of blackheads, pimples and freckles; How to remove dark circles under the eyes; How to quickly remove double chin; How to build up sunken cheeks and add flesh to the body; How to darken gray hair and stop hair falling; How to stop forever perspiration odour.

Simply address your letter to Evelyn Cunningham, Suite A812. 82 E Randolph St., Chicago, Ill., and don't send any money, because particulars are free, as this charming woman is doing her utmost to benefit girls or women in need of secret information which will add to their beauty and make life sweeter and lovlier in every way.

PERSONAL AND SOCIAL

Mr. W. B. Travers, was in Toronto for a few days this week.

Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Routley returned from Toronto on Friday evening.

Mr. T. H. G. Deane returned from the west on Friday evening, where he had been on business in connection with the Quaker Oats Company. Miss Deane went up to Toronto to meet her father on his return.

The many friends of Mr. James Bradley will be pleased to know that he is recovering. He wishes to thank the friends for the beautiful flowers sent, which were appreciated very much.

The Rev. G. W. Henderson has returned from Clifton Springs, where he has spent the past two months. He is, his parishioners will be pleased to learn, much improved in health and will occupy the pulpit of the Charlotte street Methodist church to-morrow as usual.

Rev. Canon Davidson left this afternoon to meet an imperative engagement. The impossibility of postponing it renders it impossible for him to take the service at the funeral of the late Dr. Boucher on Monday afternoon, at which Ven Archdeacon Warren will officiate.

Miss Aimee Rathbone has secured a position as stenographer and office clerk in the Optical Institute. Miss Rathbone took a two years' commercial training in the Peterborough Collegiat eInstitute and has since held positions with Messrs. O'Connell and Gordon and Messrs. Bennet and Goodwill, barristers of this city.

RETAIL PRICES

Grocers Asked Less Than Market Prices For Butter and Eggs

Retail grocers were asking prices below those quoted on the market to-day From a number of enquiries the general prices were, for the best creamery butter 28 cents, eggs 28 cents and potatoes $2.60. One grocer stated that prices were far too high on the market for them to touch and remarked that he was informed that some farmers even asked 42 cents. A number of the grocers bought supplies of butter in the city, but not from farmers, although it is likely some bought their supplies on the market. A comparison of prices, however, shows that the purchaser could do much better by buying from her grocer to-day.

What is 'Good' Tea?

BEFORE Tea brands were widely known—before Red Rose Tea was sold throughout Canada—a woman asked her Grocer if he had any 'Good' Tea—and the Grocer replied,

"Red Rose Tea is Good Tea"

There you have the origin of our modest slogan—the reason for it. And surely no better source or reason could be given.

Consider the matter for a moment—

Suppose you were to forget the name "Red Rose," and ask the Grocer for a pound of 'Good' Tea—what would you mean by the term 'Good'?

You would simply mean Tea that was ALL Tea could be.

So—when we are able to say . . . . . .

"Red Rose Tea is Good Tea"

—we have said all that can be said.

RED ROSE is a blend of the best Indian and Ceylon Teas—

Because these are world's best Teas. Assam—in Northern India—is the original home of the Tea plant—the soil being specially adapted for growing rich, strong Teas—

Ceylon Teas are more delicately flavored. Therefore the Red Rose blend is generously rich in both, strength and flavor—

—Even if modestly and simply advertised as

"Red Rose Tea is Good Tea"

There are several grades selling at different prices, but, perhaps, the 40c. grade will please best. It is not only fine in quality but goes further.

ECZEMA CAN BE CURED TO STAY, and when I say cured I mean just what I say—C-U-R-E-D, and not merely patched up for awhile, to return worse than before. Remember I make this broad statement after putting ten years of my time on this one disease and handling in the meantime a quarter of a million cases of this dreadful disease. Now, I do not care what all you have used, nor how many doctors have told you that you could not be cured—all I ask is just a chance to show you that I know what I am talking about. If you will write me TO-DAY, I will send you a FREE TRIAL of my mild, soothing, guaranteed cure that will convince you more in a day than I or anyone else could in a month's time. If you are disgusted and discouraged, I dare you to give me a chance to prove my claims. By writing me to-day you will enjoy more real comfort than you had ever thought this world holds for you. Just try it and you will see I am telling you the truth.

Lord Haldane, whose visit to Germany has caused so much gossip, was, of course, a lawyer before he took up politics. He tells a story of a counsel who was trying to impress upon the judge and jury that his client was a man of very temperate habits.

"My client, my Lord," he went on, "is a very remarkable man, and a man who holds a very responsible position, a position of trust; he is the manager of a very large waterworks."

"Yes," he interrupted, "yes; he looks as if he could be trusted with any amount of water!"

JUDGE GETS A BOMB

New York Jurist Escapes Death by a Miracle

POLICE OFFICER INJURED

New York, March 18.—An attempt to kill Judge Otto A. Rosalsky of the criminal branch of the Court of General Sessions, with a bomb came within a hair's breadth of being successful Saturday night. It was only a defect—said to be a small accumulation of dirt—in the mechanism of the infernal machine, which the justice had unsuspectingly opened that saved him from probable death or certain injury. The bomb later exploded while being examined by Inspector Owen Egan of the bureau of combustibues, wounding Egan about the face and arms and almost blinding him.

The intended victim of the explosion is one of the most conspicuous members of the New York judiciary at present, having lately received a great deal of publicity in connection with the Brandt case. It was Judge Rosalsky who sentenced Brandt to a [illegible] for burglary at Martinez L. Schiff's home in 1907 and who later reversed his action.

The attack upon the jurist is the first case of such violence attempted against a judge here within memory, and it set the whole machinery of the grave department spinning at work upon the mystery.

The bomb came in the regular mail, delivered by a postman to Judge Rosalsky's apartments at about 4.30 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

An hour afterwards the judge opened the box and discovering the nature of the contents, phoned police headquarter to send an expert. It was while Egan was examining the box in the judge's library that the explosion occurred.

A thick plate of glass which covered the mahogany table was ground as fine as snow, a great dent was made in the table itself, and the ceiling directly above was punctured with many holes larger than a man's fist.

Broken pieces of two dry batteries, of an elbow of iron pipe in which the explosive had been placed and a spring and cork were picked up in the room and held for the detectives to examine. It was believed that the explosive used was nitro-glycerine.

Judge Rosalsky declared that he had no suspicions to express as to who had sent the bomb.

Senator Ross Dead.

Ottawa, March 18.—Senator Ross of Nova Scotia, one of the first members in the Dominion House after Confederation, died yesterday morning at 6.30 from asthma. He had not been well for some time, although he took his seat in the Upper House Saturday and had luncheon at the Parliament restaurant Saturday night. He was taken ill during the night.

Senator Ross was born March 20, 1825, and in three days would have been 87. He took a prominent part in Nova Scotian politics before Confederation, and was one of the leading Liberal opponents of Sir Charles Tupper against Confederation.

He was Minister of Militia under Alexander Mackenzie, and introduced the bill founding the Royal Military College at Kingston. He was later appointed collector of customs at Halifax, which position he held until 1896, when he was called to the Senate.

"Drys" Active in Eastern Ontario.

Brockville, March 18.—The Ontario branch of the Dominion Alliance conducted a temperance reform campaign yesterday throughout Leeds and Grenville, including Brockville. Eighty-two pulpits were occupied by imported speakers. On Tuesday a convention will be held in Brockville to talk over the situation with representatives from all parts of the counties. Rev. Ben Spence of Toronto is on the program as one of the leading speakers.

Missionary Guilty of Murder.

Pittsburg, March 18.—Rev. Dr. W. D. McFarland, former principal of the Pittsburg Central High [illegible] later in charge of a United Presbyterian mission in Greenville, Tenn., was found guilty in connection with the death of his former secretary, Elsie Dodds Coe. He was recommended to the mercy of the court.

FIRE AT NIAGARA

Two Women Lose Their Lives in American City

THIRD ONE MAY NOT LIVE

Niagara Falls, N.Y., March 18.—Two women were killed and another severely injured in a fire that did $50,000 damage to the Logan and Hewson buildings, 52-58 Erie avenue, yesterday.

The dead are:

Mrs. Charlotte Pattison, aged 71.

Her invalid daughter, Melta, aged 37 years.

Another daughter, Ellen, is at the General Hospital in a serious condition as a result of inhaling smoke. Twelve other people had narrow escapes.

The fire was discovered shortly after 2 o'clock yesterday morning. By the time the firemen reached the fire the occupants of the building were escaping in their night clothing. Henry Pattison and his wife, who occupied the front portion of the first floor in the south section of the building, were the first to gain the street after a hard battle with the smoke.

Mrs. Helen Whalen, an aged widow, who occupied apartments on the first floor in rear of the Fisher apartment, made her escape in the same manner. She was almost overcome by smoke.

Just after the firemen arrived, two heads appeared at a window on the second floor in the south portion of the building. They were those of Ella Pattison and her invalid sister, Melta. The firemen could see that Ella was supporting her sister and endeavoring to keep her head out of the window. Great billows of smoke belched from the windows.

As the firemen raised the ladders the women were seen in attitudes of prayer. Melta, who had long suffered from spinal trouble, could not move from her couch without assistance, was heard calling, "Please God send us help to save mother, Ella."

When the ladder was raised to the window Fred. Carter, electrician, sprang up it with a rope. When he reached the women they were in a semi-conscious condition. Gathering Ella to his breast, he dragged her through the window and lowered her to the sidewalk. She is reported to be in a serious condition, having been almost suffocated by smoke.

After rescuing the woman, Carter was so overcome by smoke that he was forced down the ladder by comrades. Robert Barr, proprietor of the Arlington Hotel, took Carter's place at the top of the ladder and with great difficulty hauled the unconscious form of the crippled woman from the room. She was passed down the ladder and died while being carried to the Trennick Hotel.

It was impossible for the rescuers to attempt an entrance to the smoke-filled apartments. The body of the aged mother of the two women was found on the bed in her own room, where the fire had subsided somewhat hours later. The body was burned almost beyond recognition, but physicians say the woman died of suffocation.

While firemen and spectators were deeply engrossed in the rescue two other families escaped.

Big Fire at Buffalo.

Buffalo, March 18.—Harold Moore, aged 21, and John Clifford, aged 45, were fatally burned and five others seriously injured in a fire that broke out late Saturday in the plant of the Buffalo Weaving & Belting Co. The fire was due to an explosion of naphtha. The property loss will probably exceed $25,000.

Galt Woman Shock Teacher.

Galt, March 17.—A Galt woman, resenting the treatment of her little daughter by one of the teachers of Victoria school, went to the school and sought to have an explanation. The teacher declined to discuss the subject, whereupon the aggrieved parent gave her admonitory shakes.

This act, in the judgment of the magistrate who heard the charges, preferred by the teached against the mother, constituted assault. He convicted the defendant, but under the circumstances imposed only the costs of the case.

MUST LAST A WEEK

British Coal Strike Cannot End Until Bill is Passed

MUST PROTECT OWNERS

London, March 18.—Realizing that no settlement of the coal strike is possible for another week, the nation faces with extraordinary calmness the prospect of a swiftly increasing industrial paralysis, accompanied by hunger and destitution. The Cabinet discussed Saturday the draft of the bill, which, it is hoped, will end the struggle. To frame a measure which Parliament will pass and both parties to the dispute will accept, is regarded as the most difficult problem the Government has undertaken since it assumed office.

The chief difficulty lies in embodying in the legislation Premier Asquith's pledge that the minimum wage bill "should provide an adequate safeguard for the protection of the employees." It involves the application of compulsion in some form. The coal owners may be coerced by legislation to pay a minimum wage, but it is very doubtful if Parliament will ever pass a bill which does not also apply coercive measures to the men, subjecting them to penalties for breaking the agreements under which the minimum is paid.

It is generally assumed that it will necessitate a provision of compulsory arbitration with such revision of the Trades Disputes Act as will render the trades unions liable to damages for breaches of agreements by their members. To legislation of this character the labor leaders are strongly opposed, but the miners' executive have announced that they will direct the men not to return to work until a bill is passed which is satisfactory to them. Hence there is no certainty that the passage of a minimum wage act would immediately terminate the strike. It is considered significant that James Ramsay Macdonald, the labor member for Leicester, was not called into consultation at Saturday's Cabinet meeting.

While the strike thus far has been remarkable for absence of violence, there are indications that another week of enforced idleness is likely to lead to serious outbreaks in the Lanarkshire districts. After the report of the breaking down of negotiations was published, many non-union miners returned to the pits. They were attacked Saturday by a great crowd of strikers. The police made many arrests.

In Glasgow trade and progress have been practically throttled. Train services have been reduced, some of the lines abolishing Sunday service. At the Armstrong, Whitworth & Co. shipbuilding works, at Newcastle-on-Tyne, notification has been given that if the strike lasts another week 20,000 employes will be suspended.

That the prolongation of the strike will seriously affect the nation's overseas food supply is indicated by a cablegram from Buenos Ayres by a large firm of ship owners at Liverpool, stating that it will be impossible to obtain bunker coal for steamers at any River Plate port after the end of March.

In a speech Saturday night, V. Hartshorn, the Welsh mine leader, after declaring that compulsory arbitration would not settle the strike, said:

"The outstanding fact is that the workers are masters of the situation. They have all the power, and it is simply a question as to how they will use it."

Westphalian Strike Waning.

Berlin, March 18.—In spite of the strikers' denials, the strike spirit apparently is growing weaker in Westphalia. An important miners' meeting at Bochum yesterday was sparsely attended. No disorders are reported anywhere. A meeting of the miners' delegates at Zwickau has reached a decision to strike to-day.

Guilty of Noted "Taxi" Robbery.

New York, March 18.—Guilyt of robbery in the first degree, was the verdict brought in late Saturday by the jury that has been trying the case of Gene Montani, the chauffeur in the sensational taxicab hold-up of Feb. 15, when two messengers of a bank were robbed of $23,000. With the verdict was coupled a recommendation of mercy.

C.N.R.'s Route Through Rockies.

Vancouver, March 18.—Across the Rockies at Yellowhead Pass and over Albreada Summit, separating the watersheds of the south fork of the Fraser River and the North Thompson, the Canadian Northern has secured lower grades than those possessed by any other transcontinental railway in Canada or the United States.

This is the main feature contained in a report submitted to T. H. White, chief engineer of the Mackenzie-Mann system, by W. I. Bassett, who was in charge of the engineering party engaged on permanent location work in that region during the past nine months.

To Stimulate Trade.

Toronto, March 18.—A committee of the Associated Boards of Trade has arrangements in hand for a trip of as many members as possible, to Great Britain in May. The plans include visits to the more important Chambers of Commerce, and it is hoped that the party will also be able to attend the meeting of the Imperial Federation of the Chambers of Commerce, June 5-8.

WIFE IS DYING

Aged Toronto Grocer May Face Charge of Murdering Her.

Toronto, March 18.—With nine deep wounds in her scalp and not likely to recover, Mrs. Anna Cordwell, aged 68 years, lies in a critical condition in the General Hospital.

Charged with attempted murder upon his wife, James Cordwell, aged 65 years, is held in Wilton avenue police station, said to be partially insane, muttering incoherently, and declaring at times that he "couldn't put up with the nagging."

Domestic squabbles led to the murderous attack upon Mrs. Cordwell by her husband in their little corner grocery store, 165 Sumach street, at nine o'clock Sunday morning.

At five o'clock in the afternoon, fearing that the woman would die, Crown Attorney Richard Greer, Inspector Gregory and a stenographer, obtained a deposition from the woman. At a later hour last night she had regained consciousness, but, according to the physicians, twenty-four hours must pass before they can ascertain as to whether she will live. Septic poisoning is feared.

The terrible scuffle between the man and wife started when Mrs. Cordwell refused to listen to her husband's orders when she was lighting the gas to cook breakfast. "I tell you not to light that gas," shouted Cordwell to his wife, to which Mrs. Cordwell answered that she would. "Well, if you do I'll kill you," the man said, opening the cellar door in the rear of the grocery store and walking down stairs. Mrs. Cordwell was placing a match to the heater when her husband returned. He was carrying a club. The woman continued her work without watching him. Presently she was struck on the head and thrown to the floor. She lay stunned for a moment with the blood flowing from the wound. Then she arose and made an effort to resist further beating.

According to her story, Cordwell grabbed her by the throat and tried to floor her, but after a plucky tussle she eventually gained her freedom and rushed into the store. Her strength ebbing away quickly, she ran to the front door, but it was locked. Then she smashed a window looking into Blevin's place and screamed for help.

In a few seconds Cordwell followed her into the store carrying an ugly-looking iron box opener. He pounded her several times on the head with it. Mrs. Cordwood managed to thrust it from his hand, and then he picked up hammer lying nearby and struck her with it. The woman collapsed on the floor.

Hearing the commotion in the store, Harry Barnby and Mrs. Hands of 145 Sumach street, a house across the road, rushed to the store. Barnby grabbed Cordwell and threw him into a chair and held him. A crowd of neighbors, which had quickly collected, tried to relieve the woman's sufferings.

When Mrs. Cordwell was taken from her home the husband started to the police station to give himself up. "She was all the time nagging me and I couldn't stand it," he said in explanation of his act.

The elderly couple were married on New Year's Day, but had only lived together for five weeks, and their principal occupation seems to have been arguing. Both have grown-up families of their former marriages. Cordwell had owned the little grocery store for a number of years.

Bandits Still at Liberty.

Hillsville, Va., March 18—Two thousand feet above sea level, among the crags and caves of the Blue Ridge Mountains, the Allen gang who demonstrated their contempt of constituted law by a massacre of the judge, the prosecutor and the sheriff of the Carroll County Court last Thursday, continued yesterday to defy capture.

The day's search by a posse of seventy-five detectives and citizen volunteers, demonstrated that, unless the militia is sent here to begin a systematic siege of the hiding places of the outlaws they never may be brought to answer to the indictments for murder, returned here Saturday. For such a plan a camping site was selected yesterday by representatives of Governor Mann.

Those who know the paths and passes [illegible] vantage from which outlaw scouts could ward off an attacking force with head [illegible] to themselves, say that the Allens unquestionably are encamped behind the overhanging precipice of Devil's Den, half way between here and Mount Airy, N.C. There, with provisions and ammunition, of which it is said they have plenty, an attacking force would find the aim of the Allens deadly.

Sleep of Death on Bark.

Philadelphia, Pa., March 18.—With two members of the crew dead and six others with well developed cases of beri-beri, or sleeping sickness, the British bark Brilliant, which sailed from Bombay three months ago, reached the Marcus Hook quarantine station, a few miles below this city, yesterday.

The Brilliant was last reported at St. Helena on Jan. 22. At that time there was no sickness on board. The first case, that of an American, developed sixteen days ago. The following day an English sailor was seized with the disease. Both of the men died in less than a week.

Canadian Artist Dead.

London, March 18.—The death took place Saturday at Newlyn, Cornwall, of Mrs. Elizabeth Adela Forbes, wife of Mr. Stanhope Forbes, R.A.

Mrs. Forbes was the daughter of Mr. William Armstrong of the civil service, Ottawa, and was married to the distinguished Irish artist in 1889. The deceased was a well-known painter herself and exhibited at the Royal Academy, Paris Salon, Royal Society of Painter Etchers, etc.

BY ANNA KATHARINE GREENE

"Not much sleep, eh? We didn't think you'd like it. Did you see anything?"

Now this gave him the one excuse he wanted.

"See anything?" he repeated, apparently with all imaginable innocence. "What do you mean by that?"

"Don't you know what happened in that room?"

"Don't tell me!" he shouted out. "I don't want to hear any nonsense. I haven't time. I've got to be at the shop at seven and I don't feel very well. What did happen?" he mumbled in drawing off, just loud enough for the woman to hear. "Something unpleasant I'm sure." Then he ran downstairs.

At half past six he found the janitor. He was to all appearance in a state of great excitement and he also spoke very fast.

"I won't stay another night in that room," he loudly declared, breaking in where the family were eating breakfast by lamplight. "I don't want to make any trouble, and I don't want to give my reasons, but that room don't suit me. I'd rather take the dark one you talked about yesterday. There's the money. Have my things moved to-day, will ye?"

"But your moving out after but one night's stay will give the room a bad name," stammered the janitor, rising awkwardly. "There'll be talk, and I won't be able to let that room all winter."

"Nonsense! Every man hasn't the nerves I have. You'll let it in a week. But let or not let, I'm going front into the little dark room. I'll get the boss to let me off at half past four. That's settled."

He waited for no reply and got none, but when he appeared promptly at a quarter to five, he found his few belongings moved into a middle room on the fourth floor of the front building, which, oddly, perhaps, chanced to be next door to the one he had held under watch the night before.

The first page of his adventure in the Hicks Street tenement had been turned and he was ready to start upon another.

XVII.

IN WHICH A BOOK PLAYS A LEADING PART

When Mr. Brotherson came in that night he noticed that the door of the room adjoining his own stood open. He did not hesitate. Making immediately for it, he took a glance inside and then spoke up with a ringing intonation:

"Halloo! coming to live in this hole?"

The occupant, a young man, evidently a workman and somewhat sickly if one could judge from his complexion, turned around from some tinkering he was engaged in and met the intruder fairly, face to face. If his jaw fell, it seemed to be from admiration. No other emotion would have so lighted his eye as he took in the other's proportions and commanding features. No dress—Brotherson was never seen in any other than the homeliest garb in these days—could make him look common or akin to his surroundings. Whether seen near or far, his presence always caused surprise ,and surprise was what the young man showed, as he answered briskly:

"Yes, this is to be my castle. Are you the owner of the buildings? If so ——"

"I am not the owner. I live next door. Haven't I seen you before, my young man?"

Never was there a more penetrating eye than Orlando Brotherson's. As he asked this question it took some effort on the part of the other to hold his own and laugh with perfect naturalness as he replied:

"If you ever go up Henry street it is likely enough that you have seen me not only once but many times. I am the fellow who works at the bench next the window in Schuper's repairing shop. Everybody knows me." Audacity often carries the day when subtler means would fail. Brotherson stared at the youth, then ventured another question.

"A carpenter, eh?"

"Yes, and I'm an A1 man at the jig. Excuse my brag. It's my one card of introduction."

"I've seen you. I've seen you somewhere else than in Schuper's shop. Do you remember me?"

"No sir; I'm sorry to be impolite, but I don't remember you at all. Won't you sit down. It's not very cheerful, but I was so glad to get out of the room I was in last night that this looks all right to me. Back there other buildings?" he whispered. "I didn't know, and took the room which had a window in it; but —" The stop was significant; so was his smile which had a touch of sickliness in it, as well as humour.

But Brotherson was not to be caught napping.

"You slept in the building last night? In the other half, I mean?"

"Yes, I—slept."

The strong lip of the older man curled disdainfully.

"I saw you," said he. "You were standing in the window overlooking the court. You were not sleeping then. I suppose you know that a woman died in that room?"

"Yes; they told me that this morning."

"Was that the first you'd heard of it?"

"Sure!" The word almost jumped at the questioner. "Do you suppose I'd have taken the room if—"

But here the intruder, with a disdainful grunt, turned and went out, disgust in every feature,—plain, unmistakable, downright disgust, and nothing more!

This was what gave Sweetwater his second bad night; this and a certain discovery he had made. He had counted on hearing what went on in the neighboring room through the partition running back of his own closet. But he could hear nothing unless it was the shutting down of a window, a loud sneeze, or the rattling of coals as they were put on the fire. And these possessed no significance. What he wanted was to catch the secret sigh, the muttered word, the involuntary movement. He was too far removed from this man still.

How should he manage to get nearer him—at the door of his mind—of his heart? Sweetwater stared all night from his miserable cot into the darkness of that separating closet, and with no result. His task looked hopeless; no wonder that he could get no rest.

Next morning he fell ill, but he rose all the same, and tried to get his own breakfast. He had but partially succeeded and was sitting on the edge of his bed in wretched discomfort, when the very man he was thinking of appeared at his door.

"I've come to see how you are," said Brotherson. "I noticed that you did not look well last night. Won't you come in and share my pot of coffee?"

"I—I can't eat," mumbled Sweetwater, for once in his life thrown completely off his balance. "You're very kind, but I'll manage all right. I'd rather. I'm not quite dressed, you see, and I must get to the shop." Then he thought—"What an opportunity I'm losing. Have I any right to turn tail because he plays his game from the outset with trumps? No, I've a small trump somewhere about me to lay on this trick. It isn't an ace, but it'll show I'm not chicane." And smiling, though not with his usual cheerfulness, Sweetwater added, "Is the coffee all made? I might take a drop of that. But you mustn't ask me to eat—I just couldn't."

"Yes, the coffee is made and it isn't bad either. You'd better put on your coat; the hall's draughty." And waiting till Sweetwater did so, he led the way back to his own room. Brotherson's manner expressed perfect ease, Sweetwater's not. He knew himself changed in looks, in bearing, in feeling, even; but was he changed enough to deceive this man on the very spot where they had confronted each other a few days before in a keen moral struggle? The looking-glass he passed on his way to the table where the simple breakfast was spread out, showed him a figure so unlike the alert, business-like chap he had been that night, that he felt his old assurance revive in time to ease a situation which had no counterpart in his experience.

"I'm going out myself to-day, so we'll have to hurry a bit," was Brotherson's first remark as they seated themselves at table. "Do you like your coffee plain or with milk in it?"

"Plain. Gosh! what pictures! Where do you get 'em? You must have a lot of coin." Sweetwater was staring at the row of photographs, mostly of a very high order, tacked along the wall separating the two rooms. They were unframed, but they were mostly copies of great pictures, and the effect was rather imposing in contrast to the shabby furniture and the otherwise homely fittings.

"Yes, I've enough for that kind of thing," was his host's reply. But the tone was reserved, and Sweetwater did not presume again along this line. Instead, he looked well at the books piled upon the shelves under these photographs, and wondered aloud at their number and at the man who could waste such a lot of time in reading them. But he made no more remarks. Was he cowed by the penetrating eye he encountered whenever he yielded to the fascination exerted by Mr. Brotherson's personality and looked his way? He hated to think so, yet something held him in check and made him listen, open-mouthed, when the other chose to speak.

Yet there was one cheerful moment. It was when he noticed the careless way in which those books were arranged upon their shelves. An idea had come to him. He hid his relief in his cup, as he drained the last drops of the coffee which really tasted better than he had expected.

When he returned from work that afternoon it was with an anger under his coat and a conviction which led him to empty out the contents of a small phial which he took down from a shelf. He had told Mr. Gryce that he was eager for the business because of its difficulties, but that was when he was feeling fine and up to any game which might come his way. Now he felt weak and easily discouraged. This would not do. He must regain his health at all hazards, so he poured out the mixture which had given him such a sickly air. This done and a rude supper eaten, he took up his auger. He had heard Mr. Brotherson's step go by. But next minute he laid it down again in great haste and flung a newspaper over it. Mr. Brotherson was coming back, had stopped at his door, had knocked, and must be let in.

"You're better this evening," he heard in those kindly tones which so confused and irritated him.

"Yes," was the surly admission. "But it's stifling here. If I have to live in this hole I'll dry up from want of air. It's near the shop or I wouldn't stay out the week." Twice this day he had seen Brotherson's tall figure stop before the window of this shop and look in at him at his bench. But he said nothing about that.

"Yes," agreed the other, "it's no way to live. But you're alone. Upstairs there's a whole family huddled into a room just like this. Two of the kids sleep in the closet. It's things like that which have made me the friend of the poor, and the mortal enemy of men and women who spread themselves over a dozen big rooms and think themselves ill-used if the gas burns poorly or a fire place smokes. I'm off for the evening; any thing I can do for you?"

"Show me how I can win my way into such rooms as you've just talked about. Nothing less will make me look up. I'd like to sleep in one to-night. In the best bedroom, sir. I'm ambitious; I am."

A poor joke, though they both laughed. Then Mr. Brotherson passed on, and Sweetwater listened till he was sure that his too attentive neighbour had really gone down the three flights between him and the street. Then he took up his auger again and shut himself up in his closet.

There was nothing peculiar about this closet. It was just an ordinary one with drawers and shelves on one side, and an open space on the other for the hanging up of clothes. Very few clothes hung there at present; but it was in this portion of the closet that he stopped and began to try the wall of Brotherson's room, with the butt end of the tool he carried.

The sound seemed to satisfy him, for very soon he was boring a hole at a point exactly level with his ear; but not without frequent pauses and much attention given to the possible return of those departed footsteps. He remembered that Mr. Brotherson had a way of coming back on unexpected errands after giving out his intention of being absent for hours.

Sweetwater did not want to be caught in any such trap as that; so he carefully followed every sound that reached him from the noisy halls. But he did not forsake his post; he did not have to. Mr. Brotherson had been sincere in his good-bye, and the auger finished its job and was withdrawn without any interruption from the man whose premises had been thus audaciously invaded.

"Neat as well as useful," was the gay comment with which Sweetwater surveyed his work, then laid his ear to the hole. Whereas previously he could barely hear the rattling of coals from the coal-scuttle, he was now able to catch the sound of an ash falling into the ashpit.

His next move was to test the depth of the partition by inserting his finger in the hole he had made. He found it stopped by some obstacle before it had reached half its length, and anxious to satisfy himself of the nature of this obstacle, he gently moved the tip of his finger to and fro over what was certainly the edge of a book.

This proved that his calculations had been correct and that the opening so accessible on his side, was completely veiled on the other by the books he had seen packed on the shelves. As these shelves had no other backing than the wall, he had feared striking a spot not covered by a book. But he had not undertaken so risky a piece of work without first noting how nearly the tops of the books approached the line of the shelf above them, and the consequent unlikelihood of his striking the space between, at the height he planned the hole. He had even been careful to assure himself that all the volumes at this exact point stood far enough forward to afford room behind them for the chips and plaster he must necessarily push through with his auger, and also—important consideration—for the free passage of the sounds by which he hoped to profit.

As he listened for a moment longer, and then stooped to gather up the debris which had fallen on his own side of the partition, he muttered, in his old self-congratulatory way:

"If the devil don't interfere in some way best known to himself, this opportunity I have made for myself of listening to this arrogant fellow's very heartbeats should give me some clue to his secret. As soon as I can stand it, I'll spend my evenings at this hole."

But it was days before he could trust himself so far. Meanwhile their acquaintance ripened, though with no very satisfactory results. The detective found himself led into telling stories of his early home life to keep pace with the man who always had something of moment and solid interest to import. This was undesirable, for instead of calling out a corresponding confidence from Brotherson, it only seemed to make his conversation more coldly impersonal.

In consequence, Sweetwater suddenly found himself quite well, and one evening, when he was sure that his neighbour was at home, he slid softly into his closet and laid his ear to the opening he had made there. The result was unexpected. Mr. Brotherson was pacing the floor, and talking softly to himself.

Got A Pain In Your Back?

IF YOU HAVE HEED THE WARNING.

You get a pain in your back, and you wonder what is the matter. When the back aches or becomes weak it is a warning that the kidneys are affected in some way.

Heed the warning; cure the weak, lame, aching back and dispose of any chances of further trouble.

If you don't do this, serious complications are very apt to arise, and the first thing you know you will be troubled with Dropsy, Diabetes or Bright's Disease; the three most deadly forms of kidney trouble.

On the first sign of a pain in the back, Doan's Kidney Pills should be taken

They go right to the seat of the trouble, cure the backache and prevent any further complications arising.

Mr. Stewart Johnston, Richardson Mines, N.S., writes:—"For years I was troubled with my back, and I had to give up work. I tried Dr. after Dr., and was getting no better. I had almost given up hope when I began to try Doan's Kidney Pills. I took three boxes of them, and found I was completely cured. I feel I owe my life to Doan's Kidney Pills."

Advertising and the New World

WHAT populated America and made its growth one of the wonders of the world's history? Advertising. People heard of the opportunities in the new land, and, believing their material welfare would be bettered here, came.

What populated the farms of the West and made their rapid development the wonder of the century? Advertising.

The government and the railways were not content to wait until the farmers came one by one and discovered these fertile lands for themselves.

They advertised—and accomplished in a few years what in former days would have taken several generations to discover.

What has made cities grow in ten years as they have never grown before? Advertising and its results.

What has made it possible to build up big businesses in a few years where it used to take a generation of steady effort? Advertising.

What has made it possible for a manufacturer to introduce new goods in every corner of the continent in a few weeks' time, where it formerly required years of hard work? Advertising.

Advertising has changed the face of the map. Advertising has revolutionized the methods of doing business. Advertising has magnified the possibilities of business far beyond anything our most optimistic forefathers ever dreamed of.

Advertising has brought to the humblest home comforts and conveniences that were unknown to kings in former generations.

Advertising has raised the standard of living, simplified the manner of living, reduced the cost and time and trouble of supplying our daily needs.

Advertising has made a new world. It has been the greatest civilizing force in the world's history.

Advertising has brought the man in the backwoods in touch with the centres of art and literature and business and made him feel at home with the world.

Advertising brings the world's markets to the very hearth of every home and brings those who have needs to where their needs can be best supplied.

Advertising is to-day a dominant factor in every home, in every factory, in every business office. Like electricity, we have always had it in the world, but only lately have we found out what a tremendous power it is. Little by little it is being applied here and there, in all manner of ways to help the civilized human race.

Advice regarding your advertising problems is available through any good advertising agency or the Secretary of the Canadian Press Association, Room 503, Lumsden Building, Toronto. Enquiry involves no obligation on your part—so write if interested.

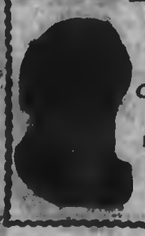
PEOPLE'S PULPIT.



Sermon by CHARLES T. RUSSELL Pastor Bethany Tabernacle.

CONSANGUINITY OF HUMANITY

Bible and Science in Accord on This Point—All Nations of One Blood.

London, March 17.—London Tabernacle was crowded to-day to greet Pastor Russell. He occupied the pulpit and behind him on the rostrum were the six other members of the Foreign Missions Investigation Committee, viz., Gen. W. Ludlow, United States Army; Prof. F. H. Robison, L.L. L. W. Jones, Mr. J. T. D. Pyles, Mr. E. W. V. Kuehn and Mr. R. B. Maxwell, all of the United States.

Pastor Russell opened his address by remarking that although the International Bible Students Association, which appointed the Committee of which he was Chairman, held a British charter and might be supposed by some to make a full or partial report in London of its findings, he regretted that they would be disappointed. The Committee felt that it should make but one report, and advice received indicated that considerable preparation had been made for the Committee's reception in New York City on Sunday, March 31.

However, said Pastor Russell, things are marvelous to-day, and with the wonderful facilities for communication, Britishers, as well as the people of the United States and Canada, will receive the report at practically the same time—through hundreds of their prominent newspapers.

His text was this: "God hath made of one blood all nations of men, for to dwell upon the face of the earth; and hath determined the times before appointed and the bounds of their habitations, that they should seek the Lord, if haply they might feel after Him and find Him." (Acts xvii, 26, 27.) He said:

Our text is taken from Saint Paul's address to the Athenians, whom he found so religiously inclined that they had erected an idol to every known deity, and then one prominently "to the unknown God." The words of my text have been repeatedly borne in upon my mind in my sojournings of the past four months. I marveled as I perceived the thoroughness of the division of the human family as a result of the confusion of human language. Time and again the Apostle's statement that God had "determined the bounds of their habitations" impressed me.

Our text explains the matter: it was of God; and we will doubtless yet see more particularly than now how it worked some good for all—staying the downward tendency of sin.

My wider contact with humanity impresses the Apostle's declaration that our various nationalities are all of one blood—or are of one original parentage. And in this scientists, usually wholly out of accord with the Bible, agree. They do not claim that our race evoluted from many monkeys, but merely from one pair. It seems strange indeed to me that some of these learned gentlemen so persistently bend their efforts to antagonize the Bible—endeavoring to prove a human evolution in conflict with the Bible declaration that God created man in His own image—likeness—and that the present diversities of degradation are all results of Adam's fall from Divine favor, through disobedience, under the sentence of death.

Even if some divisions of our race do bear a stronger resemblance than others to the ape, this is surely not scientific proof that they evoluted from the ape. Just as reasonably might we argue the reverse, that they are a more depraved section of humanity. But we do not so rate it. On the contrary, the most savage peoples seem to have a mental organism capable of quite a considerable development under favorable conditions, even of a few years.

Indeed, when we consider the inferior station of woman in all the heathen nations, and the blankness of the mother's mind and her dejection and hopelessness and the tendency of these to mark her offspring, we do not wonder at the sad faces of many of heathen lands, both male and female. Indeed, on the contrary, we are astonished as we compare some of the lowest types of Christendom with some of the degraded types of heathendom—surprised that the difference is not greater. The explanation for it all is that we have not had the true type of Christianity. Our Christianity has been so mixed with superstition and so impregnated with error that Churchianity, taken as a whole, in the over hundred millions of Christendom, is a hybrid thing—a slander upon the name Christian and upon the teachings of Christ.

And, by the way, I remind you of Saint Paul's explanation of the degradation of the heathen, as set forth in the first chapter of his Epistle to the Romans. He tells us most distinctly, as the Old Testament does, that man originally knew His Creator and was in fellowship with Him, but that he gradually slipped away from this into greater and greater depths of degradation, mental, moral and physical. Let me read Saint Paul's words: ["When they knew God, they glorified Him not as God, neither were thankful, but became vain in their imaginations, and their foolish heart was darkened. Professing themselves to be wise, they became fools, and changed the glory of the incorruptible God into an image made like to corruptible man, and to birds and fourfooted beasts and creeping things. (Contrary to Divine instructions they imagined that the recognition of God in all these various creatures would increase their reverence and make them better and more thoughtful of the lower creatures. But herein they were foolish.] Wherefore, God also gave them up to uncleanness, through the lusts of their hearts, to dishonor their own bodies between themselves. . . . And even as they did not like to retain God in their knowledge, God gave them over to a reprobate mind, to do those things which are not proper."—Rom. 1, 21-28.

But the feature of our text which most particularly impresses me is Saint Paul's declaration that God determined and appointed in advance the times of these nations—when they should be brought in contact with the light of Divine Truth, to the intent that the reverential quality, inherent in the race, might exercise itself and feel after the true God and haply find Him.

We see that in Divine providence the torch of the Gospel, first lighted in Palestine, spread westward and northward, through Europe, and still westward to America. It, indeed, has been the torch of civilization. No other power in the world possesses the dynamic force of the Gospel Message. In proportion as it is received in its purity it breaks the fetters of ignorance and superstition. It sets men free. It declares, as does our text, the oneness of the human family—that the entire human family are by nature brothers. It tells that God is no respecter of persons and that the same laws of right and wrong apply to kings and princes, bishops and clergy, that apply to the humblest members of the race, and that all must give an account to the great Creator sooner or later.

This feature of the Gospel Message has been the igniting spark for all our civilization. But, alas! the combination of this civilization with the innate selfishness of the unregenerate produces a human type which is dangerous, because of its higher intelligence and unrestrained sweep of ambition and imagination combined with a fallen nature, born in sin and shapen in iniquity and continually tending toward selfishness. In other words, a man wholly ruled by selfishness is dangerous to his fellows in proportion to his education and enlightenment. He knows, better than his heathen neighbor, how to take advantage of the circumstances and conditions of life, for he is lifted mentally to a higher plane.

Saint Paul in our text declares that God has predetermined "times" associated with His dealings with the nations and in bringing to them the Gospel. We have already considered the Divine order and time in association with the call of the "elect" Church—a "little flock"—called out of every nation, people, kindred and tongue, to be the Redeemer's associates in the Messianic Kingdom which is to bless Israel and all the nations. We believe that this election of the Church class is about complete and that soon thereafter God's Kingdom, the reign of righteousness, the world's Judgment Day, will begin.

It should not surprise us, therefore, to find great changes imminent amongst the peoples of the whole world. The bounds of human habitations and the barriers of language are rapidly yielding because of the other times of Divine appointment which have been reached, viz., the period mentioned in Daniel's prophecy as "the Time of the End." (Daniel xii, 1.) And here we must remind you afresh that the Time of the End does not mean the end of time. It merely signifies the time for the ending of the present order of things, that a new order of things, the Messianic Kingdom, may be substituted. Twenty-five centuries ago God determined this time and appointed it and gave us four very important proofs by which to identify it. Let us examine these.

(1) The first sign of the Time of the End was to be, "Many shall run to and fro." How wonderfully this prophecy is fulfilled before our eyes to-day! Its fulfilment has been in progress, especially for fifty years. And it is less than eighty years since the first locomotive was built. The nations, first separated by diverse languages, kept well within the bounds of their habitations for many centuries until now; and now suddenly we have a running to and fro in fulfilment of this prophecy which is amazing. The various nations and languages are being scattered all over the earth.

(2) The next step in the prophecy marking the Time of the End of this Age is, "Knowledge shall be increased." This general increase of education amongst all classes is a logical result of the commingling of humanity and the lessons of comparison and competition being learned. Suddenly, as though in obedience to the Divine command, nation after nation has made schooling free; and not content with this, has made it compulsory; and this spirit is spreading to Oriental lands. The whole world is waking up! Personal rights and national rights are everywhere being discussed. The schools of India are said to be turning out a million graduates in the English language every year. The Chinese also are introducing English schools. What will be the results? Enlightenment? Yes! Godliness? No! Contentment? No! Dissatisfaction, war, strife, anarchy, are coming to the world by leaps and bounds, as a result of general education, and the breath of Liberty, because not backed by reverence for God and a knowledge of and submission to His will. Japan, China and India seem merely waiting for a spark to start a conflagration—anarchy.

And as for Europe and America, the conditions there are the same, for what faith the masses did have in God and in the Bible is being rapidly undermined by the theories of Higher Criticism and Evolution which are advanced from the colleges and seminaries and pulpits, and are invading, not only the public schools, but also the Sunday Schools. Evidently any system of knowledge which denies or opposes God and the Bible is an injurious education—harmful to the last degree. However, by now this God-ignoring education has so fastened itself upon the world as to be impossible to shake it off.

(3) The third item indicative of the Time of the End of this Age is that "The wise shall understand"; not the worldly wise, but those wise toward God. And so we find it to-day. While the great and the learned and the masses are rapidly drifting into Heathenish darkness, away from the Bible, God's saintly few, of every nation and of every denomination, are gradually seeing more and more clearly the teachings of the Scriptures, and ridding themselves more and more of the creeds of men which for centuries have helped to blind and to stumble and to make the Divine character and the Divine Word appear inconsistent and unreasonable, and to separate God's children into six hundred different sects and parties. These creeds are now being seen in their true light by the saints and are being discarded—smashed.

(4) As a result of the fulfilments of Nos. 1 and 2, we see nearing us, portentously, No. 4: "There shall be a time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation." That time of trouble, as already intimated, is now looming up on the horizon of every nation. It comes in the wake of an unsanctified knowledge. It would mean the utter wreck of all of our civilization were it not for the interposition of the Kingdom of God's dear Son, for which we have long waited and prayed, "Thy Kingdom come; Thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven." Our Lord, speaking of this trouble, declared, "Unless those days were shortened there should no flesh be saved; but for the elect's sake those days shall be shortened"—because of the "elect," and the Kingdom which they will establish, that great "time of trouble" will be cut short—it will not be allowed to work out the terror at first apprehended.

I am returning from heathendom fully convinced that the hope of the world is exactly what God's Word declares, namely, the Messianic Kingdom. Unless that Kingdom comes, and comes soon, the world will be in the most terrible plight it has ever known. But my confidence in the Word of God and in the promise of the Kingdom "under the whole heavens" grows stronger every day. The Bible, once a sealed Book, once apparently contradictory, once assumed to be in harmony with the creeds, and their very foundation, I now see to be the most wonderful Book in the whole world. It merely needed the light now due to God's people to shine upon its pages, to scatter our night and enable us to truly sing, "Wonderful things in the Bible, I see!"

The three wonderful things of the Bible which I would wish to impress upon you at this time are: The Justice of God, in permitting a death penalty to come upon our race as a punishment for sin; (2) The Mercy of God, like the wideness of the sea, which is making provision for Adam and every member of his race to return to Divine favor and everlasting life, if they will—otherwise, to be remanded into Death—"everlasting destruction."

(3) If there could be a more wonderful thing than the general provision for humanity, restitution to human perfection and an earthly Eden and all that was lost by Adam and provided for in the redemption at Calvary—that still more wonderful thing is "the exceeding riches of God's grace in His kindness toward us in Christ Jesus." Ah, what wondrous love God is manifesting toward this specially called class, invited to become the Bride of Christ! Truly, "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man the things God hath in store for those who love Him; but God hath revealed them unto us by His spirit; for the spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God."

This wonderful provision for the Bride, the Lamb's Wife, is glory, honor, immortality — joint-heirship with her Lord in His glorious station, and association with Him in His glorious work of blessing, first, the nation of Israel, and, secondarily, through them, all the nations of the earth, according to the Divine promise. For such a hope, surely, "we may trials well endure!" For such a glory surely we may well, if necessary, "sail through bloody seas." For such a crown surely we may well count all earthly advantages and good things, privileges and opportunities and honors, but as loss and dross, "that we may win Christ and be found in Him."

RHEUMATISM IN THE SYSTEM

SIX YEARS CURED IN SIX DAYS

TO MFRS. "NERVILINE."

"The suffering I endured for six years with Rheumatism is beyond description. Every time I was exposed to cold or dampness meant that I had to go to bed. My muscles stiffened, my joints swelled, and any attempt at exertion brought on excruciating twinges. The pain shifted from one part to another and I was scarcely ever free from misery and sleeplessness. I took all kinds of liquid medicines, but they nearly all depressed my heart and I had to stop them. Then I was told of the wonderful power of Nerviline.

Nerviline

"If Nerviline had been made specially for my case it couldn't have been more successful. It sank right into the core of the painful part, gave me ease, allowed me to sleep, gave me the use of my arms and limbs—in fact, made a new man of me. I urge all Rheumatics to use 'Nerviline.'

A. E. TRAYONER.

The most wonderful pain-subduing substances in the world are in Nerviline—that's why it penetrates so quickly, why it instantly cures pain that other remedies can't even relieve. You'll be surprised how quickly sciatica, lumbago, or rheumatism are cured by Nerviline;—seems almost magical the way it will cure a cold or sore throat. When the chest is sore and it hurts to draw a long breath, one rubbing with Nerviline is sufficient. So highly valued is Nerviline by those who use it that many families consider it quite as good as a doctor for aches, pains, and minor ailments of every kind. SCIONS of EUROPEAN ROYALTY WHO HAVE VISITED US

The Coming of Prince Adalbert of Prussia Recalls the Visits of Many Other Members of Royal Families

Prince Henry of Prussia

THE news that Prince Adalbert, of Prussia, third son of the German Emperor, is to pay the United States a visit in the near future calls to mind the fact that the list of European royalties which have visited our shores is much longer than is generally suspected.

Few know, for instance, that King Edward VII. of Great Britain was not the only English King to visit us. Yet, our first royal guest was William IV. of England. He came in 1782, when New York was in possession of the British. Our visitor was Prince William Henry, son of George IV., and he came as a midshipman on the battle ship Prince George, one of the fleet sent to subdue the colonists.

We did not receive him so hospitably as we have since received other royalties, for a plot was formed to capture the British Prince, the plot headed by Colonel Ogden, of the First Jersey regiment. The plot became known, and our royal visitor was transferred to the frigate Warwick and sent to the West Indies. He was the uncle of Queen Victoria, whose father, the Duke of Kent, once passed through Boston. We were strongly republican in those days, and so little attention was paid him.

In 1796 we were visited by King Louis Philippe and his two brothers, the Duke de Montpensier and Count de Beaujolais. Constitutionally and temperamentally we were then rather averse to princes and dukes, and their visit passed without much demonstration.

The Bonaparte family made the United States a residence for years. The first to arrive here was Jerome Bonaparte, whose marriage to Miss Patterson, of Baltimore, became the subject of so much contention. Jerome remained here one year, at the expiration of which time he was summoned to his great brother, the Emperor Napoleon I., who had a Princess in view for Jerome. Separated from her husband before he reached Paris, Mme. Bonaparte only saw him years afterward, in a casual way. Meanwhile he had become a King and had married the daughter of the King of Wurtemberg. Miss Patterson's marriage was afterward recognized by the Bonaparte family, and the Bonapartes of Baltimore are to this day one of the great American families.

Joseph Bonaparte, who filled two thrones, was for years a resident of New Jersey. He successively became King of Naples and King of Spain, and after the battle of Waterloo took solemn leave of his brother and, assuming the title of Count de Survilliers, came to America. He purchased an estate at Bordentown, on the banks of the Delaware, and there lived for many years.

Prince Received by Lincoln.

Lucien Bonaparte, a younger brother of the great Napoleon, came in 1810, and lived for many years in the Western States. Louis Napoleon, too—afterward Napoleon III.—after the failure of one of his early uprisings, was smuggled out of France by King Louis Philippe, as the easiest way of getting rid of him, and arrived here on the frigate L'Orient.

The Prince de Joinville, third son of Louis Philippe, the "Citizen King," arrived in New York during the year 1842. He had then grown quite tolerant of princes and dukes, who provided us with pleasant sensations. In 1861 he came again, this time with two sons, the Comte de Paris and the Duke of Chartres. He visited us with the intention of placing his nephew in the Naval Academy at Annapolis. The Prince was received by President Lincoln and Cabinet, and then, with his nephews, joined the staff of General McClellan, in which the two young men were duly commissioned as captains. They participated in the campaign and the Prince wrote a brochure which has been looked upon as high authority. He appeared in Europe soon after the retirement of General McClellan from his command of the Army of the Potomac.

Prince of Wales' Visit.

These royal visits, however, were but incidents to that visit that came to us in 1860, and which, for the first time, indicated what we could do to a "royalty" if only we were given a chance. At that time Albert Edward, Prince of Wales, was slightly over twenty and unmarried. He came to us from Canada, and all previous royalty reception records in this country were distanced. At his first dance in Canada he had given an earnest that he was one to cause anticipatory throbbing of the social heart. Even the journalism of that day had recorded him as impressionable. "He whispered, half bashfully, ardent nothings in his partners' ears." He favored other dancers "with smiling glances as they passed him." He was at once eager and timid, this Prince, who was afterward Edward VII., "with melting blue eyes, a rather weak chin and a delicately pink complexion."

The United States echoed with "the Prince" and "Your Highness," although he officially travelled as the Baron Renfrew, to obviate, it was supposed, the difficulties attendant on royal etiquette in a republican country. His favorite dress on informal occasions was "a blue frock coat and gray trousers," which he wore carelessly, and one reporter described him on one occasion as looking "distinctly seedy."

At first the Prince was afraid of the American crowds, and feared assassination. They waited densely about the train, calling "Fetch him out!" Finally he braved them and there was a storm of cheering. He hunted on the prairie, and passed alternately through Cincinnati, Pittsburg, Harrisburg and Washington. At Washington he stayed at the White House. In Philadelphia the ticket speculators had commenced operations in connection with grand opera—fifty years ago. One lady offered to take half a dozen seats for the entire season if permitted a choice upon opening night. The management, however, wiser then than now, stopped speculation and such arrangements, and Patti "sang as she never sang before," as one of the newspapers frankly expressed it.

Ovation for Duke Alexis.

Next came the Grand Duke Alexis, of Russia, who arrived on November 12, 1871. The United States now had taken her stride in the matter of entertaining, and its taste of royalty had made it very tolerant, while the newspapers were active as ever.

Six feet three in height and fair complexioned, Alexis was described by the newspapers of the time. He was termed "every inch a prince." The Dearborne and Cortlandt street ferry boats in New York were taxed to their utmost in anticipation of his vessel's progress up the river, while later, when he started for Washington, the populace crowded about his car and clamored to look at him—at which, of course, he came out and bowed.

His train consisted, on that occasion, of "three gorgeous palace cars, two of them entirely new." His triumphal progress to Washington was "not unworthily memorated by the newspapers even then. One journal remarked in its headlines: "Washington whoops over him; Elizabeth smiles at him; Newark nods at him; Baltimore cries 'Bully for him!'" Received by the President, the Duke's progress was an ovation. Four thousand persons attended the ball given in his honor at New York.

The most picturesque part of the Grand Duke's visit was the buffalo hunt in which he engaged while in Nebraska, and here the Grand Duke outdid himself. Clad in a cap and rough hunting clothes, he vied with the deeds of a later celebrated hunter. The Indians were unabashed at that time and two companies of United States soldiery lent their gratifying presence on the occasion.

In 1877 he paid a second visit to the United States, which consisted largely of the formalities of giving and receiving dinners.

In 1876 there arrived in Philadelphia a Prince whose chances of sovereignty yielded to the call of romance. Prince Oscar Charles Auguste, Duke of Gothland and son of the late King of Sweden, came here, however, before that occasion—and quite informally.

It was afterward, when a captain, that his romance came to him. He had always been extremely religious and frequently preached to the sailors. He had attempted to stop drinking in the Swedish navy, for which he was unpopular.

The Infanta Eulalia of Spain
From The Bystander

It was at this time that he met Ebba Munck, one of the maids of honor to the Queen, and he fell deeply in love. From a worldly point of view it was unfortunate, as a law provides that if Swedish royalty marries other than royalty the unfortunately matrimonial Prince must forfeit claim to the throne. Ebba Munck, knowing this, and herself loving Oscar, fled to a convent, renounced the world and became a nursing Sister of Mercy. Prince Oscar did not hesitate. He announced his intention of forfeiting his royal rights that he might marry. He followed her, and, gaining from her the admission of her own love, married her and is known by the simple family name of Oscar Bernadotte.

Later he and his wife became worshipped leaders of the Salvation Army and drew tremendous audiences in the streets of Stockholm. One of the most memorable visits paid by a representative of royalty to the United States was that of Eulalie, Infanta of Spain. With her husband, Prince Antoine of Orleans, she visited this country in 1886, on the occasion of the Chicago Exposition. Before she came, however, there was a flurry of etiquette. Whether President Cleveland should or should not personally return her visit was the occasion of the trouble. Spanish royal etiquette diplomatically demanded it. American democratic etiquette denied it. Princess Eulalie came, however, and Mrs. Cleveland returned the Princess' visit to the President, the "latter accompanying her to the threshold of his official apartments."

Eulalie, Idol of New York.

As with the Prince of Wales, American society was somewhat apprehensive of the Princess Eulalie and the strict etiquette it was feared she might expect.

Her democratic ways, however, won all hearts and made her the idol of New York. There were, however, many social heartburnings on the occasion of her visit. The ball given for her was responsible for one pang. It was decided to take from it the "popular" character of preceding balls to royalty and make of it a rigidly "select" function. Tickets were restricted to four hundred. A storm arose. The ball, however, appeared to be successful, though Eulalie refused to dance—an action that was alternately held to be one of pride and ease of tact. At the Stock Exchange business was stopped at her appearance, and the crowd in Wall street was immense. She was greeted with waving hats and cheers, and her visit in New York was a continued ovation.

Prince Luigi of Savoy, Duke of the Abruzzi, paid three visits to the United States, the first time in 1906, on which occasion he underwent a formal routine of entertainment. In 1907, however, he came again to attempt one of those daring feats with which his name has come to be associated. On this occasion his objective was the top of Mount St. Elias, in British America, which, until that time, had been unbridden by man, though several expeditions had attempted to scale it. With a small party he left San Francisco in June and was last sighted in July August. Then came the news of his success. He had planted the Italian flag at an altitude of 18,100 feet.

From The Sphere

In May, 1907, he visited us once more, and on this occasion was widely discussed in his connection with a romance in which Miss Katherine Elkins was said to share. Rumors of an engagement were heard. In the meantime the Duke had reached "farthest north"—up to that time—and the world eagerly discussed each mention of his love affair. The engagement was spoken of for a year, and was said to hinge upon Miss Elkins' position in the Italian court as well as that of her relatives. During this visit enthusiastic "souvenir hunters" visiting the war ship the Duke commanded, filled his apartments and caused widespread comment.

Honors for Prince Henry.

Next to the reception of the Prince of Wales probably that of Prince Henry of Prussia, brother of the present German Emperor, was the most elaborate and widely discussed in the history of the visits by European representatives of royalty to this country.

For weeks before his arrival his visit was prepared for. On the ship upon which he made the voyage were reporters, artists and photographers from many of the representative papers, and masses of intimate material describing every phase of his voyage were printed immediately upon the Prince's arrival. The crowd which awaited him was record breaking and four hundred policemen were necessary to control it. The visit which followed was memorable if only to illustrate the tremendous strain to which the representative of a royal European house is subjected. Reception followed reception with bewildering speed.

On one day soon after his arrival he went to New York from Washington, was present at the ceremony of launching a war ship in Newark Bay; returned to New York for the occasion of a luncheon party on the Hohenzollern. Thence he attended the City Hall and from there went to a dinner at the Metropolitan Club. The newspapers referred widely to "his meteoric movements," and joked about the constant succession of luncheons and dinners. In one week he had accepted invitations to the New York Chamber of Commerce, Washington, Harvard, Yale, Annapolis, Pittsburg, Columbus, Cincinnati, Louisville and Indianapolis, and at each of these places was a crowded speed of entertainment.

Prince Henry seemed tireless and delighted, and immediately by the democracy of his manners, achieved popularity here. While here many honors were conferred upon him—notably the Freedom of the City of New York. Harvard University conferred upon him the degree of LL. D. After an uncomplicated month of activity he left "tired out," as he expressed it to the reporters. He declared afterward that he slept for almost forty-eight hours, after arriving on his ship, with intervals only for meals. "I never worked so hard in my life," he was reported to have said; "I never changed my uniform so many times or faced such a succession of situations requiring such alertness or initiative."

Visit of Prince Wilhelm.

Prince Wilhelm of Sweden arrived on the Tylgia in August, 1907, and visited the Jamestown Exposition. He was extensively entertained at Newport by Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Mills, Mr. and Mrs. George Peabody Wetmore, Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Berwind and others and evidenced great possibilities in the science of social activity. Hour hours after he had visited Mr. and Mrs. Berwind on the occasion of a ball continued to the small hours he was observed about Newport enjoying the morning air. He was cheered loudly at the New York Stock Exchange, whose business became interrupted by his presence. At a dinner given for him he said:—"I have seen Swedish brains upholding American industry; I have seen Swedish men working for the lasting benefit of their new fatherland while their hearts are turned yet affectionately to the old one. It is for such men that my pride equals that of any American."

Grand Duke Boris of Russia arrived here in 1902 and had the most informal of all royal visits. He made no plans and was content to permit the spirit to move him, though throughout his stay he was followed by Secret Service men and detectives. Garbed in blue serge and with a light straw hat, he appeared like a typical New Yorker. He seemed to take a delight in puzzling his detectives and was reported to enjoy a gay time. Stories were printed that he drank wine from a chorus girl's slipper, but them he denied. He danced a cotillion at Miss Goelet's and Newport did its best to entertain him. He was the most entertained of foreign princes, and the most unconventional in the fascinating

Is Warfare Becoming Less Deadly?

THERE are not wanting authorities with reference to things military who aver that the improvement in arms has actually rendered warfare less destructive; and that in these days of fearful engines of war the slaughter is much less than it was in the old days of muskets, of bows and arrows and of hand-to-hand conflicts. In addition, it may be pointed out that the modern wars have been mercifully shorter, and so less sanguinary than those of the centuries gone.

Under the primitive conditions of fighting, when gunpowder was unknown, wars drifted on for generations, even for centuries. England waged war with Scotland almost without intermission for a hundred years, and for a like period with France. The Thirty Years' War and, later, the Seven Years' War, are epochs in military history.

Our own civil war, though fought with muzzle-loading guns, lasted but four years. About a year thereafter Prussia overcame Austria in seven short weeks, and in 1871 the German power overwhelmed that of France in some eight months. It took Uncle Sam only ninety days to dissipate the power of Spain in two oceans.

If the figures of history are correct, terrible slaughter reigned in the old days when men met in hand-to-hand conflict and quarter was neither asked nor given. In 401 A. D., at the battle of Chalons, when Attila the Hun and the Roman legions under Aetius met, it is said that not fewer than 160,000 men were slain. Indeed, by some the number of killed has been placed as high as 300,000. At Hastings some 20,000 men fell.

We are told that at the Metaurus Hasdrubal's Carthaginians were practically annihilated. At Aquae Sextiae and Vercellae the Cimbri and Teutons were completely exterminated by Marius; a hundred years later 20,000 Romans were wiped out by Ammianus in Teutoberg Forest, and 80,000 Roman citizens of the Greek cities were slain in a single day by the soldiers of Mithridates. At Crecy there fell 1,200 French knights, 1,400 gentlemen and 4,000 men at arms, besides 20,000 of inferior rank; 50,000 men were killed at Agincourt and 4,000 were taken prisoners; and about 10,000 men, too, were slain out of the 70,000 who fought at Flodden; while out of the 100,000 engaged in the fierce battle of Tewton, 36,000 are reported to have fallen in the battle and pursuit.

In all these old time battles, where the weapons were bows and arrows, swords and battle axes, and where no weapon was available that could kill at a distance of more than a few hundred yards, the mortality frequently rose to one in every three or four fighters engaged, and sometimes exceeded this enormous percentage; whereas, in modern battles, with weapons far more deadly, a proportion of one in twenty, it is claimed, has rarely been exceeded.

SUFFERED THREE YEARS

Till Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills cured him Kidney Trouble.

There are few diseases that cause more acute suffering than Kidney Trouble, and Mr. J. A. Thomas, of Sudbury, Ont., is one of those who know it. He writes: "For over three years I suffered from kidney trouble. First I thought I had overtaxed my back, for evidently the pain would catch the small of my back and it would be impossible for me to straighten myself up for several minutes. A dull ache across the kidneys was always present, my urine was thick and cloudy, and passing it caused a burning, scalding pain. Tried medicines, but they failed. I was advised to try Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, as they had cured my wife years before. A few bottles effected a complete cure. I now enjoy the blessings of good health, which is due to this remedy."

Don't neglect kidney trouble—it's too dangerous as well as too painful. That old, reliable family remedy, Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, has cured thousands and will cure you. It is equally effective in curing constipation and its attendant evils, biliousness, indigestion and sick headache, and in purifying the blood. 25c a box at your druggist's. 10

The Ideal City.

What makes the city great and strong?
Not architecture's graceful strength
Not factories' extended length,
But men who see the civic wrong,
And give their lives to make it right
And turn its darkness into light.

What makes a city full of power?
Not wealth's display or titled fame,
Not fashion's lavish boasted claim,
But women rich in virtue's dower,
Whose homes, though humble, still are great
Because of service to the state.

What makes a city men can love?
Not things that charm the outward sense,
Not gross display of opulence,
But right, the wrong cannot remove,
And truth that faces civic fraud
And smites it in the name of God.

This is a city that shall stand,
A light upon a nation's hill.
A voice that evil cannot still,
A source of blessing to the land.
Its strength not brick, nor stone, nor wood,
But justice, love and brotherhood.
"The Christian City."

Teetotalism and the British Army

The annual meeting of the Army Royal Temperance Association has lately been held in London. The report is one of gratitude to God for present success and full of hope for the future. It really seems that in the near future drink will be quite cast out from the fighting force of Great Britain, and that His Majesty King George V.'s Army will be composed of abstainers only. The abstinence of the soldiers from liquor was one of the great causes of the marvellous self-control of the soldiers during the recent great troubles in the Old Country.

There are now sixty-three thousand six hundred and fifty-eight pledged abstainers among the soldiers, and their numbers are constantly increasing.

What the Generals Think About it.

The importance attached to the Temperance Association may be gathered from the presence of those warrior chiefs, the two Field-Marshals, Lord Roberts and Lord Grenfell. They both bore witness to the great change for the better which has come over the Army in their day and experience. They both stated that the reports they obtained from the commanding officers were "that teetotalism is the making of the Army." Major-General Lawson said: "There was not the slightest doubt that the Army now as against that of so late as five years ago was incomparable. Crime in the Army had gone down greatly; the bar receipts at the canteen had gone down 50 per cent. for the purchase of intoxicants; while the pay of the soldier had been increased substantially."

The Government.

The Government of Great Britain and India contribute £1,750 per annum to the Royal Army Temperance Association. This fact reveals the great esteem the ruling powers have for the work of the Society. The Director-General says money was never better laid out.

We are told that Temperance work is having a most excellent effect in regard to invaliding and sickness; the general health of the Army being greatly promoted thereby.

The Emperor of Germany has not been unobservant of the efforts to promote teetotalism in the British Army and Navy. He recognises how it adds efficiency to the forces, and makes discipline easy, and so he is promoting Good Templarism bot hin his Army and Navy.

The French Government employs doctors who systematically lecture to the young soldiers on the evils of alcohol. Thus the great armies of the foremost nations are becoming schools of total abstinence.—"The Australian Christian World."

William Allen White on Prohibition in Kansas.

"I have grown from childhood to the age of forty-two years in Kansas and I probably am greatly prejudiced in its favour. As a young man from the time I was sixteen years old until I was twenty-two, I never saw an open saloon. I know of thousands of children in the State who never saw a saloon. The law was adopted in 1881 and has been enforced ever since. Of course, it is enforced better now than it ever was before, because a generation has grown up under the law that knows nothing else. The State never was as clean as it is to-day. The liquor law is enforced as well as the law against horse stealing, which or less thieves in the jails for horse or ess thieves in the jails for horse stealing and that there are not more or less men in the jails for selling liquor. These laws are violated and will be violated until the end of time. If there were no violations of the law the law would not be needed. There is not an able bodied man or woman in the poorhouse. We have never had any trouble at all to keep our town and county and state going. The town of Emporia is being paved from one end to the other with brick and asphalt without a dollar's worth of taxing money in it. The revenues of Kansas for nearly thirty years have been raised without liquor likenses, and we have built the best system of schools in the world. Taxes are low because the average working man owns his own home, and thus the taxes are spread out upon thousands of working people who are thrifty, honest, and hard working, rather than upon hundreds of landlords who are taxed to maintain the criminal costs in the courts."

Prohibition in Kansas.

During the past year forty-eight of the 105 Kansas counties, with a population of 430,274, did not send a single prisoner to the State penitentiary.

Fifty-seven out of the 105 counties had not a single pauper.

Eighty-seven of the 105 counties did not send a single insane patient to an institution.

Kansas death-rate is the lowest in the world—7½ in 1,000 persons.

Kansas bank deposits have increased from $70,000,000 to $190,000,000.

All of this has happened under ten years of prohibition.

Not being compelled to use their money for taxes to support prisons, poorhouses, and insane asylums, which are largely filled by victims of liquor, the people of Kansas are able to put their money in the banks or to buy automobiles, and to use their taxes in building schoolhouses and improving health conditions.

Prohibition has been a success in Kansas because that State has elected officials who enforce the law.—Omaha News.

How Finds It a Pleasure to Enjoy Meals

Here is a case which seemed as bad and as hopeless as yours can possibly be. This is the experience of Mr. H. J. Brown, 564 Bathurst St., Toronto, in his own words:

"Gentlemen—I have much pleasure in mentioning to you the benefits received from your Ma-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets and can cheerfully recommend them. I simply had confirmed dyspepsia with all its wretched symptoms, and tried about all the advertised cures with no success. You have in Ma-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets the most effective agent I could find. It is now such a pleasure to enjoy meals with their consequent nourishment that I want to mention this for the benefit of others."

The fact that a lot of prescriptions or so-called "cures" have failed to help you is no sign that you have got to go on suffering. Try Ma-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets and see how quickly this standing remedy will give you relief and start your stomach working properly. If it doesn't help you, you get your money back. 50c a box at your druggist's. Compounded by the Natural Drug and Chemical Co. of Canada, Limited, Montreal. 141

PETER DIDDLEWORTH'S PROPOSAL

A Short Story
BY RAE ROE.

Cook, housegirl, master of the house — all these was Peter Diddleworth. Just now he was performing his duties in the first capacity, frying some bacon and eggs for his breakfast. A drop of grease popped out of the pan and left a red spot on Peter's hand. "Humph!" grunted Peter, sucking the sore place and rubbing his hand over his hip pocket. "A man hain't any business bein' cook."

Now it had not taken him all his thirty-five years of life to learn this sad truth; he had decided it eleven years ago when he was wooing Nancy Dobbs. So firmly was he convinced that he built the three-room cottage that he now occupied, and furnished it. But Peter had one overpowering fault that had stood in the way—his innate bashfulness in the presence of womankind. He had not reckoned on the most important factor—the proposal—and he did not realize it until Nancy accepted Jeff Medford.

"No one ever knew how Peter suffered. He was not the kind to burden others with his troubles; he accepted his single state as a matter of course, and through all these years the drudgery of housework, of mending his clothes, of taking his meals alone had settled on him as habits of fate. He trudged through his humdrum life on his little farm, accumulated money in the bank, and said nothing. Thus would Peter doubtless have gone to the grave had not Jeff Medford died. That was a year ago. The widow Medford returned to the village, and Peter had dutifully been calling on her ever since. But when it came to leading up to that one question, his heart stopped and his tongue refused to work. Yet all this time the solitary meals were more solitary.

He dumped his bacon and eggs on his plate, poured out a cup of steaming coffee, and sat down at the kitchen table. As he ate, his eye travelled over the sheet of newspaper that served as a cover for the table. Suddenly he saw something that made him forget his breakfast, for his fork stopped in mid-air with a generous chunk of bacon impaled on it, while his head bent close to the paper. It was just a little rhyme, and the title read, "To the Bashful One." It ran:

Thou bashful swain, where'er thou art,
From single blessedness depart.
Leap year is here,
Thy sweetheart, dear,
Her right and privilege knows;
If thy faint heart will not speak out
Fear not—for she'll propose.

Peter forgot the chunk of bacon on his fork. He took his pocket knife and cut out the rhyme. He read it again and put it in his pocket. A new light had been cast upon the affairs of Peter. He spent the rest of the day perfecting his plan of campaign. The next morning he knocked on the side door of the widow Medford's, with a bucket of eggs on his arm.

"Why, Peter," she said, "what a start you gave me. I thought you were a peddler." Peter went in, placed the bucket on the kitchen table, and drew a chair up to the stove. The widow knew she was expected to carry on the conversation, and she kept up a running fire of gossip, with brief comments from Peter. Finally he rose to go.

"Why, Peter, you're not goin' so soon?"

But Peter was going, and when he was gone she first noticed the bucket of eggs. "Well, if that man hain't forgot his eggs." She opened the door and called after him: "Peter, you forgot your eggs."

He turned and grinned sheepishly. "I brought 'em for you," he called back.

"Well, I never. But I guess they'll come in real handy. The next day a cord of wood was dumped beside the widow's depleted woodpile. "Mr. Diddleworth sent it," the man explained. "He's clearing up the back pasture."

Every few mornings the rest of the winter the widow received butter, or eggs, or a few chickens, or a slab of side meat. She was hard pinched, and she felt that Peter could afford it. He rarely presented his offerings in person, and when he did come she was so profuse with her thanks that he was glad to escape.

One morning early in spring Peter appeared at the widow's again. All the afternoon before he had spent picking and dressing the two choice chickens that lay in the basket on his arm. Somehow he felt it was time something was happening. "Thought maybe you'd like some chickens," he prefaced, briefly, as he handed over the basket and took his seat by the fire.

"See here, Peter, I don't know whether I had ought to take so much."

"I've got more'n I need," mumbled Peter.

"It's mighty fine for them that has to give to them that hain't."

Peter's heart began to jump, and his collar was unbearably tight. She was making a good start, he thought, but not a word more was said about the gifts to the expectant Peter. She gossiped on for half an hour, and then, with an air of resignation, he left her. That night he sat gazing thoughtfully at the piece of paper that held the rhyme. Those seven lines had filled Peter with a consuming purpose. He knew the widow liked him, but he knew, too, that his "Faint heart would not speak out." He had pinned his faith to the last line, "Fear not—for she'll propose."

"Don't know as she's any nearer's she ever was," he mused dolefully. "I reckon I'll have to figure up something else. Then he thought of the mortgage on her home; he remembered hearing her tell how it worried her. He could buy it now and give it to her. That surely would be the last straw.

A few days later, when Peter called on the widow, the mortgage was bulging in his pocket. He coughed, he talked about the weather, he coughed some more, he discussed the prospect for crops, but the subject of the mortgage remained painfully in the background. It was not till he rose to go that he came round to it, and then he offered no verbal introduction to the presentation. He shoved it into her hands and started to leave. She saw what it was.

"You don't mean this, Peter? You don't mean to give it to me?" Peter nodded assent. "You're too good to me, Peter. I ought not to have taken the other things. Of course you hain't anybody to provide for, and you can spare it. But I can't take this." And she shoved the paper back into his pocket. But Peter was determined. Maybe he had not struck her at the right time. He would try again in the morning. "Peter, I've got something to tell you." He was on the scene of battle again, but he had not had time to broach the subject for the mortgage. "I've decided to get married again." It was just what he was expecting and he looked up and grinned.

"Yes," the widow continued, wiping her eyes with her apron, "it's been mighty lonesome." The world was spinning, and Peter's head was light and giddy.

"As I said, Peter, I've decided to get married."

There was a pause. Peter coughed and shuffled his feet and the widow went on with her work. "I'm going to marry Ezra Parker to-morrow, Peter."

Peter spoke not a word. He got up and went back to his solitary life. And the first thing he did was to burn up the little piece of pastry.

For And About Women

"Are women growing less refined?" was a question which precipitated a sharp discussion at a recent luncheon where some interesting women were assembled. The few men who were present were eminent enough to make their comments valuable as evidence of what the intelligent and experienced masculine mind thinks of some of the amusements and development of the modern girl of fashion.

All, with one exception, agreed that, judged by our old standards, the women of the day had lost some of their refinement. This exception was a distinguished jurist, and this point of view was so unexpected and so sane that it should be handed on to others.

He boldly declared that while the modern young woman may have lost some of the demure, appealing little way which women of refinement habitually affect, there had grown up instead a manner of charming camaraderie, which to his mind was infinitely more satisfying, and with this gay camaraderie there had grown into existence a sane innocence which to him was tremendously appealing.

He admitted that it was a great comfort to be abe to discuss topics of interest of all kinds without fear of shocking the sensibilities of the modern woman, and that it was a relief to find that girls no longer fainted at the sight of blood, or left the room at the mention of a divorce, which the truly "refined" girls of other days would most assuredly do.

He said that he would have to confess that his granddaughter used language and indulged in sports and amusements that he at one time had only considered suitable for his grandsons, but he has been educated to see the error of his ways, and he unhesitatingly declared that his granddaughter was the best all-round companion that he knew of. Yet unquestionably she was not so "refined" as her grandmother.

She handles without gloves topics that the women of older days would never even discuss, but personally he found the modern girl enchanting in her frank fearlessness, and not only that, but infinitely more capable of taking care of herself and others than the girls of a more refined era. His grandsons had been saved many a scrape, he said, by the comprehending companionship of their sister, who frequently put on the gloves and blackened an eye with the best of them.

COATED TONGUE HEADACHE DIZZY SPELLS

Your overworked stomach is on strike. It refuses to secrete pepsin enough to act upon the food. Refuses also to secrete acid enough to enable the peptic secretion to do its work.

What's the result?—dyspepsia, headache, sick all over.

Give to the stomach the assistance it requires—or in other words try Dr. Hamilton's Pills, which cure more weak stomachs than any other medicine you know of.

Dr. Hamilton's Pills put the kind of life into a weak stomach that enables it to digest and assimilate all kinds of food.

Dr. Hamilton's Pills

Cured Mr. William Martin, a Well-Known Lumberman in Parry Sound.

"I consider that Dr. Hamilton's Pills make the best all round medicine. My stomach got disordered and all kinds of complications set in. My blood grew thin, my color got pale, and I had the worst kind of headaches. The food I ate all disagreed with me and I was constantly billious and suffering from acute dyspepsia. A wonderful change took place when I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they gave me appetite and strong digestion. I had no more bad dreams, no sick stomach or headache. I was in fact like a new man, and will always recommend and use Dr. Hamilton's Pills."

Dr. Hamilton's Pills are sure to benefit at once. Try them, 25c per box, at all dealers, and insist on having only Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. In yellow boxes only.

Patriotism

The stomach is a larger factor in "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness" than most people are aware. Patriotism can withstand hunger but not dyspepsia. The condemned dyspeptic "is fit for treason, stratagems and spoils." The man who goes to the front for his country with a weak stomach will be a weak soldier and a fault finder.

A sound stomach makes for good citizenship as well as for health and happiness.

FISHING BOAT WRECKED.

Only Ten of a Crew of Twenty Alive After Terrible Privations.

Shelburne, N.S., March 18.—One of the most harrowing disasters known on this coast in years was that revealed by the ten survivors of the American fishing schooner Rosalind, when a few minutes after midnight Saturday morning they knocked at the door of Captain McAlpine's house, Jordan Bay, Shelburne, and told him that of the crew of twenty who had got sail from Shelburne in the morning ten were dead. The schooner had crashed on Duff Rock, two miles off, at 10 o'clock, and Captain William Harding and nine of his crew had perished in the biting sea.

The Patrician had arrived at Shelburne on Thursday. Friday morning she sailed from that port to continue fishing. Captain Harding decided to run back to Shelburne for shelter as the easterly gale blowing half a mile back of Duff Rock, and some two miles from Jordan Bay. The destruction of the schooner was almost instantaneous. After the crash she opened up and went to pieces. The impact on the rocks with the wind blowing a gale had been terrific.

So suddenly did the vessel break up that Captain Harding had no time to reach a dory and nine of his crew went down with him. Ten of the crew, however, managed to reach shore.

One of the boats of the survivors upset but the men grasped the dory and, regaining command of it, moved along over the tremendous sea toward the shore, which the ten men reached shortly before midnight.

A search was made yesterday for traces of the missing men, but nothing whatever was discovered. All that was to be seen was some of the fragments of the wrecked schooner, and not much of that.

The victims were: Captain William Harding, Charlesville, Pubnico; John Goodwin, Albert Goodwin, Holman Hopkins, James Nickerson, Clarence Terry, Michael Jennings, Wm. Gill, Joseph Robinson, George Sharpe.

The schooner was owned by Parker of Gloucester, and had 70,000 pounds of fish aboard.

BAY BOAT WAS SWAMPED.

Life-Savers Say Many Lost Lives In Wreck of Oceana.

Newhaven, Eng., March 18.—Four passengers and several sailors are believed to have been drowned Saturday morning as a result of a collision between the Peninsular and Oriental liner Oceana and the German bark Pisagua off Beechy Head in the English Channel.

For some time the lives of the liner's 41 passengers and of the 280 men of her crew were placed in jeopardy. The courage of the officers and the speedy arrival of assistance, however, prevented a terrile catastrophe.

Despite the fact that the life-savers and officials at Eastbourne insist that 25 passengers lost their lives, officials of the line declared last night that all of the passengers were landed in safety. The line officials refuse to say on what they based their belief, while the Eastbourne people told a thrilling tale of how an overcrowded lifeboat was launched from the steamer and after wallowing in the trough of the sea was capsized by an enormous wave. The occupants of this boat were mostly women.

The life-savers watched helplessly from the shore as they frantically endeavored to launch their own boat, but they were unable to save any person except a woman with a life-preserver around her, who was found clinging to the keel of the overturned boat.

Twenty-eight of the passengers were landed here and nine at Eastbourne.

Trainmen in Conference.

Ottawa, March 18.—Meetings were held on Saturday and Sunday by the representatives of the Grand Trunk Co.'s conductors and trainmen, regarding the recent reduction of the pay of some of the company's employes on branch lines.

S. N. Berry, vice-president of the Order of Railway Conductors, had another meeting with Hon. W. T. Crothers, Minister of Labor, but stated that nothing had been decided upon as yet.

"We do not know what course of action we will take," he stated.

"As to whether we will apply for a conciliation board that I cannot say until to-morrow, when we will probably hold our final meeting."

Peace Being Restored

Nanking, March 18.—The outlook in China is more hopeful to-day than at any time since the outbreak of the revolution. Carefully compiled reports received here show that, while the unrest is general, during the past week disorder has generally decreased, and there is increased confidence in a restoration of trade.

The districts of the northwest and of the distant west are in the worst condition, but the authorities in Nanking give the assurance that unless something unforeseen occurs, due to misunderstanding or outside intrigue the entire country will be again under control within sixty days after the announcement of the formation of the coalition Cabinet.

The alarmist predictions that a widespread general uprising and mutinies in many places would occur have not been fulfilled. The flurry in the north appears to be practically over.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

The snowfall in Toronto during the winter amounted to over 66 inches.

Captain Wm. Tate Robertson, one of the pioneer captains of the upper lakes, died at Owen Sound yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Asquith invited representatives of miners and colliery owners to meet him in conference as to details of minimum wage bill.

Mr. C. L. Stevens is in a critical condition at Mount Forest Hospital as the result of the recently railway accident at Durham.

Great anxiety is displayed in St. Catharines over a raid on a large crap game in the eastern end of the city. Fifteen men were caught.

The U. S. anthracite miners and operators were unable to arrive at a settlement of the dispute, and a strike, involving 200,000 men, seems imminent.

The wholesale price of bread has gone up one cent a loaf in Ottawa, which will mean that the retailer will have to pay seven and nine cents a loaf.

H. Mussel, C.P.R. yard foreman at North Bay, was instantly killed Saturday night by falling under a moving freight train. He leaves a wife and three children.

The old U. S. battleship Maine, resurrected after four years' burial in Havana harbor, plunged with her sailors flying to her everlasting rest, 600 fathoms deep in the gulf yesterday.

Several arrests have been made in connection with the attempt to assassinate King Victor Emmanuel last week. Antonio Dalba insists that he is alone responsible for the attempt.

The death occurred at Montreal on Saturday of Dr. J. C. Cameron, a professor of obstetrics at McGill University, at the age of 60. Deceased was educated at Upper Canada College and McGill University.

Three minutes after the express train which left Salisbury, N.B., for Albert Saturday passed over the big steel bridge across the Petitcodiac, it collapsed, three spans being swept away by the ice and freshet. The train was crowded.

Roosevelt's Plans.

Oyster Bay, March 18.—The first information concerning the plan of campaign mapped out by the Roosevelt leaders at their conferences in New York on Friday and Saturday was given yesterday by Col. Roosevelt.

Col. Roosevelt said at the outset that he would not make a country-wide speaking tour. He thought that such a thing would be inadvisable, and, moreover, that the physical strain would be too great.

PLANS CADET CAMPS.

Hon. Sam Hughes Will Arrange to Train Them Under Canvas.

Ottawa, March 18.—Col. Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, has issued a memorandum on cadet corps training, in which he asks for the co-operation of all clergymen, officers of [illegible] military leaders of the Y. M. C. A.

Col. Hughes states that the plan of organization embraces obtaining through school inspectors and school teachers returns from every section of Canada of the number of boys from say twelve to sixteen years, whether attending school or not, who would desire to attend camp and be trained for one week, during the latter part of July or early in August.

Estimates will then be made of the number to be called from each locality. These will be formed into squads or sections by schools; the schools of a township or similar unit will constitute a company. The companies from each county will make up a regiment or a brigade, each under the name of its home county, town or township, and school section.

It is generally considered that, for this season, the camps should be held in the home county, unless in special cases. The cadets will be transported, camped, fed and in part uniformed. They will not be paid. The sale of liquor and tobacco in every form will not be permitted.

It is expected that 40,000 cadets will go to camp.

LOCAL YOUTH COMMITTED TO THE MIMICO

Will Become a Ward of Supt. Ferrier Home for Incorrigibles as a Result of a Theft Charge

COMPANION ALLOWED TO GO

Confinement in the Mimico Industrial School for an indefinite period was the sentence that fell upon the ears of a local youth in the juvenile court this morning. The delinquent, who is the proud possessor of a shock of red hair with the usual accompaniment of freckles, was indicted, together with another lad, of stealing a traveller's suit case from the G.T.R. station several days ago. His companion in crime was allowed out on suspended sentence. As the two boys were tried under the Juvenile Act, the case was heard in camera.

This is the first local youth to become a ward of the Mimico Industrial school since the investigation, in which Superintendent Ferrier figured prominently.

NO CAUSE TO DOUBT

A Statement of Facts Backed by a Strong Guarantee.

We guarantee immediate and positive relief to all sufferers from constipation. In every case where our remedy fails to do this we will return the money paid us for it. That's a frank statement of facts, and we want you to substantiate them at our risk.

Rexall Orderlies are eaten just like candy, are particularly prompt and agreeable in action, may be taken at any time, day or night; do not cause diarrhoea, nausea, griping, excessive looseness, or other undesirable effects. They have a very mild but positive action upon the organs with which they come in contact, apparently acting as a regulative tonic upon the relaxed muscular coat of the bowel, thus overcoming weakness, and aiding to restore the bowels to more vigorous and healthy activity.

Rexall Orderlies are unsurpassable and ideal for the use of children, old folks and delicate persons. We cannot too highly recommend them to all sufferers from any form of constipation and its attendant evils. That's why we back our faith in them with our promise of money back if they do not give entire satisfaction. Three sizes: 12 tablets 10 cents, 36 tablets 25 cents; and 80 tablets 50 cents. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in Peterborough only at our store.—The Rexall Store, McDermid and Jury.

CAR DISABLED.

Sloppy Weather a "Jonah" to the Street Railway Man.

Car No. 15 of the Jackson Park route was crippled for a few minutes this morning as a result of a defective motor. Shortly after the car had left the intersection of George and Charlotte streets and was proceeding westwards, flames shot out from the under works of the car, a circumstance which continued until the curling rink was reached. Here the car was brought to a standstill and some adjustments made, after which the car proceeded on its way without a recurrence of the trouble. "Sloppy weather is the motorman's ban these days," exclaimed our uniformed employee of the company to a reporter this morning, an assertion which was borne out by the sight of an approaching car, that ploughed through about six inches of water, which almost incapacitated the under works of the car.

UNLIMITED SUPPLY OF POWER FOR TOWNS IN THIS DISTRICT

The Electrical Power Company is Making Progress in Preparing for the Distribution of Power Throughout This District—Building Sub-station.

ABUNDANCE OF POWER

Work on the Electric Power Company's system, in the Trent Canal district is steadily progressing, says the Trenton Courier. Three 500 hw. generators are now in operation in the power house of the Auburn Power Co., Petesborough. Part of the power generated in this station is delivered in Peterborough, and the remainder is now being transmitted over the 44,000 volt transmission line which connects Peterborough with Port Hope. The total length of the 44,000 volt transmission line on the Electric Power Company's system has now been brought up to about 200 miles. The Millbrook and Newcastle substations have recently been placed in operation. Transmission lines are now being extended to Nepanee before the end of March and in Lindsay early in the coming summer.

Frankford Power House.

Contracts have been awarded for all the equipment for the new power house at Dam No. 5 at Frankford, Ont. Construction of this power house is being rapidly pushed and it is expected that it will be in operation early in the summer. The equipment consists of four 600 kw., 60 cycle 3 phase, 6600 volt, vertical shaft generators at 112 1-2 r-p-m., manufactured by the Swedish General Electric Company, who will also furnish one turbine driven and one induction motor driven exciter for this power house. The Canadian Boying Co. will furnish three 75 kv. a. transformers, and the Monarch Electric Company of Montreal, the switching equipment and cables. Power is generated at 6,600 volts, and transmitted about four miles at this voltage to the transforming station of the Sidney Electric Power Company, where it is stepped up to 44,000 volts for distribution over the Electric Power Company's System.

Work Begun in Lindsay.

The Lindsay Post says the work has been begun on the sub-station in that town.

"The Seymour Power Co. let the contract for transmission lines and sub-station to the Midland Construction Co. who sub-let the contract for the sub-station to Mr. F. R. Wilford, who has engaged Williams Bros. to do the masonry. The building will be of brick, concrete and steel. Williams Bros. commenced work on Tuesday and the work will be completed as soon as possible.

Mr. A. R. Whitelaw of Toronto, is the engineer for the Midland Construction Co. The transmission line is being built by the company themselves and leaves the Peterborough-Port Hope lines a few miles the other side of Omemee. It passes through Omemee and will step-down at the sub-station from 44,000 volts to 2,200. The transmission line from Fenelon Falls will also be put into this sub-station. The switching will be done at the sub-station instead of at the present building on William street north.

Ready by July 1st.

It is expected that the sub-station will be in operation by July 1st, after which date Lindsay will be in connection with every plant on the Seymour Company's system with one exception. The line between Peterborough and Campbellford is not built, but when it is Lindsay will have unlimited power at her disposal.

A sub-station may be built at Omemee in the near future to supply the residents of that village.

The Seymour Power Co. is losing no time in fulfilling their part of the agreement with the town, and, as mentioned above, will be in a position to supply this town with electrical energy in abundance by July 1st. This will greatly assist the Industrial Commission and the new Commissioner in their campaign for new industries for Lindsay."

CHORAL RECITAL.

Al the preparations for the grand oratorio choral recital in St. John's church by the choir on Tuesday next at 8 p.m. are now complete, the final rehearsal being held last night. Mr. R. J. Devey expresses satisfaction at the quality of the tone and excellent work put in by the choir, and a real treat is in store for all who attend the recital.

Rev. Dr. Wm. D. McFarland, who will shortly face trial for murder at Pittsburg. He is accused of having performed a criminal operation upon his secretary, Elsie Coe, which resulted in her death.

MAY BUY PROPERTY

Report That Number of Employees of C. G. E. Plan to Buy Real Estate

FOR THEIR OWN HOMES

It is learned that a number of the employees of the Canadian General Electric Company are planning the purchase of a lot of land as a means of solving the real estate problem. According to the story of the tentative plans under consideration about twenty men are making an endeavour to get together to buy a lot of land, which they will subdivide into lots for themselves and by their concerted action will be able to purchase the subdivisions at a price favourable to themselves. The ground has already been looked over and it is understood that the feeling is that the land should be purchased. It is within an easy walk from the C. G. E. Works and is considered a good buy. According to the story it is estimated that each lot would cost about $125, thus enabling the purchasers to secure a good lot at a reasonable price. By purchasing in this way they can also secure a good front age to their lots. In other words they will be practically suiting themselves in their selection. Whether the proposal will materialise or not is unknown yet, but it is stated that the men are seriously considering the proposition.

OLD FOLKS

Can Live Longer, Doctor Says.

"One reason old people do not live to be older," says a famous physician, "is because they do not keep up their interest in life. They ought not to 'let go.'

But when they are weakened through poor appetite and loss of sleep, you can't expect them to be so much interested in current events.

Let them first regain most of their former vigour, by using Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron preparation, on which so many elderly people depend for good health.

According to F. R. Schoen, Justice of the Peace, Elk Mountain, Wyo., his neighbour, Chas. T. Bourk, 84 years old, was very sick and ready to give up, but Vinol put him on his feet again and now he says: "Nothing ever helped me like Vinol — I could not do without it.

Vinol is sure to do you good if you are run down and weak—we guarantee this, and will pay back your money if you are not satisfied. McDermid and Jury, druggists, corner George and Simcoe streets; also Payne's drug store, corner George and Simcoe streets.

MR. W. A. STABLER IS LEAVING

With His Two Sons—Intends to Go West in Near Future

Among those who contemplate leaving the city in a short time are Mr. W. A. Stabler and his two sons, Nathan and Fred. Mr. Stabler will go first to Toronto for a time and will later proceed west. His two sons expect to leave for the West about the first of the month. They will go first to Edmonton, and their future activities will be decided in that city. They will be accompanied by their families.

THE COAL SITUATION

How it Affects the Local Consumer —What the Coal Dealers Have to Say About the Matter

WOOD IS SCARCE

OTTAWA, MARCH 18.—The Dominion Railway Commission has recently finished inquiry into unprecedented shortage of railway cars and motive power for coal shipment at points near the border, from which coal is shipped to Ontario cities.

Your correspondent learns that the Commission finds three causes for hold-up of coal transportation facilities. Blame is laid first and foremost on dealers for their failure to order sufficient supplies earlier in the year. A big increase in business is also noted as a contributory cause. Another principal reason is stormy weather, which has prevailed in Canada within the past month. This, the inquiry finds, has rendered motive equipment of different lines insufficient to haul cars.

What the Local Dealers Say.

Mr. Weir, of Weir and O'Brien, coal dealers in East City report the coal situation as favourable. The cause of the present shortage in this city he attributes to the failure of the dealers to stock up sufficiently to cope with the demand which the severity of the winter has occasioned. The soft coal situation is the worst, declares Mr. Weir, a circumstance which he attributes to the policy of the railways in monopolizing the available supplies as they come across the border. He anticipates no shortage in coal until next summer ,and the extent of this will depend altogether upon the strike situation in the United States. Mr. Weir reports that they have disposed of one-fourth more coal this year than on previous occasions.

Difficulty Lies With Railways.

Almost similar conditions are reported at the offices of J. E. A. Fitzgerald. A telephone conversation revealed the fact that there is at present no shortage or any indication of one. The coal supplies coming into the city were interrupted somewhat by the inability of the railroads in making deliveries, due to the snow blockades on the lines. But these conditions have been more or less ameliorated by a spell of fine weather, and no further trouble is looked for.

Information gathered from other sources of supply throughout the city are more or less along the same lines, and the general consensus of opinion seems to conflict with the rumours which have gained prominence, relative to a coal shortage. While the dealers as a body admit a shortage of soft coal, it is of not sufficient importance to create alarm, as the majority of the soft coal users order their supplies direct.

Wood is Scarce.

Wood is admitted to be scarce, due mainly to the fact that it is hard to get at. That is, the accumulation of snow in the woods renders it almost impossible in many cases, to get it out. The impassable condition of the country roads can also be ascribed as one of the reasons responsible for the depletion of the wood supply in some of the local wood yards.

WORK ON BRIDGE NOT STOPPED

Special to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, MARCH 18.—An official denial is given at the Department of Railways and Canals of the report published in Quebec, to the effect that orders had been given to stop work on the Quebec bridge. No such action had been taken.

NOTICE

The partnership which formerly existed between Geo. O., Mailand and A. Moore, roofing contractors, has been dissolved, and all accounts owing to the firm, must be settled at an early date. 3d-66

A PERILOUS UNDERTAKING.

That of Removing the Ice and Snow from Roof of Market Hall Building.

Perched upon the two-foot parapet that decorates the upper portion of the Market Hall building, two men were strenuously engaged, for several hours this morning, in removing the winter's accumulation of ice and snow. The ice was chopped into large fragments, and precipitated into the roadway below, where it was trampled underfoot by the passing traffic. The men used no artificial means of preserving their balance, but pursued their task all unconscious of the gaze of the citizens, who viewed them from below.

BILL IN SENATE

Boundaries Measure is on the Slate To-day But Will Probably Go Over Until To-morrow

PETITION PRESENTED

Special to The Examiner

OTTAWA, MARCH 18.—The opponents of the Manitoba Boundary bill, having failed of success in the House of Commons, have now turned their attention to the Senate. This morning Speaker Landry handed in to the Clerk some 500 petitions from Montreal and the East, containing some 2,500 names asking that the bill should be amended in the direction of guaranteeing the rights of the minority in Keewatin.

The Boundaries Bill is set down for consideration in the Senate this afternoon, but will probably go over until to-morrow. Meanwhile, Dr. J. P. Molloy, M.P., for Provencher, is on the war path against the man in Montreal who started the story that he was willing to resign his seat to make way for Henri Bourassa, as the leader of a Catholic party in Parliament.

MANY MINERS EMIGRATING TO CANADA

Agents Have Been Busy and as a Result Thousands of Men Will Come Out to This Country

NO SETTLEMENT YET

LONDON, ENG., MARCH 18. — While there is no further prospect of the settlement of the strike this morning there are opinions expressed here that half the colliers are sick of the strike and will go back to work within a week despite orders of the strike leaders.

Immigration agents from Canada have been very active during the strike operation and arrangements have been made for the immigration of thousands of miners during the coming season. The miner and other unions have paid out a million and a half in strike pay during the last three weeks and the treasury is near depleted. In any event it is believed the government will push the minimum wage and compulsory clauses through the commons this week.

Worry Hastened End.

LONDON, ENG., MARCH 18.—The Duchess of Buccleigh, who was one of the grand dames of the nineteenth century, mistress of the robes and a close confidante of Queen Victoria is dead at her home. She was heavily interested in coal mines and the worry over the strike is said to have hastened her end.

FUNERAL OF DR. BOUCHER

Many Citizens Followed the Remains to Their Last Resting Place

The funeral of Dr. Boucher, which took place this afternoon, was a striking tribute to the popularity of the deceased, and the esteem in which he was held by the citizens of Peterborough. In the long cortege which followed the remains to their last resting place were most of Peterborough's professional and business men, while the floral tributes were unusually numerous and beautiful .Ven. Archdeacon Warren of Toronto, conducted a private service at the residence, 169 Brock street, at 1 o'clock, after which the cortege proceeded to St. John's church, where an impressive service was conducted by Archdeacon Warren, assisted by Rev. Prof. Gilmour of Toronto and Rev. F. J. Sawers of St. Luke's church. Interment took place at Little Lake cemetery. In the funeral procession the local members of the medical profession occupied carriages, as did the members of the Board of Education, representatives of the City Council, including Mayor Bradburn, Ald. Duncan and City Clerk Armstrong, and other prominent citizens. The pall-bearers were Dr. McCullough, Dr. Eastwood, Dr. Halliday, Messrs. G. W. Hatton, R. E. Wood and U. A. Aylmer.

Colds Most Fatal At This Season

This is the time of year when colds seem to turn into pneumonia or quick consumption and to prove more generally fatal than at any other season.

With many people one cold follows another during the winter months until finally the human body becomes so run down that it can no longer resist the attack of the germs which cause lung trouble.

The best rule is to never allow a cold to get farther than the throat, and this you can do by the prompt use of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. Do not wait for chest colds and bronchitis to develop. Keep this well-known medicine at hand for use in case of emergency.

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine loosens a cough, aids expectoration, and soothes and heals the irritated and inflamed membranes.

"BREWSTER'S MILLIONS"

The attraction at the Grand next Friday, March 23, will be "Brewster's Millions," a dramatisation by Winchell Smith and Byron Ongley of George Barr McCutcheon's best and brightest story of the same name, with which the majority of book-lovers are familiar. The play comes here with Louis Kimball and a number of the original cast that assisted in winning fame and success during its run in New York.

The plot is a decidedly novel one and the play should prove an interesting comedy. The story is of Montgomery Brewster, a young New Yorker, who is left one million dollars by his grandfather. Just as he is starting to enjoy his fortune, he learns that an uncle has died in California, leaving him many millions of dollars, but under decidedly startling conditions. It appears that his uncle has cordially hated the boy's grandfather, and in order to show this, leaves his money to his nephew under the proviso that he shall spend every cent left by his grandfather within a year.

He cannot gamble the million away, he cannot give it away, he must not do anything with it except spend it purely for pleasure, and if at the end of the year he has one cent left or any personal property or real estate, he forfeits all right to his uncle's fortune, and of course, has already lost the fortune he squandered.

The troubles of the youth to "blow" $1,000,000 in a year are numerous indeed, and at times, rather pathetic. He is allowed to take a flyer in the stock market and given the right to lose $30,000 this way, but he makes a like amount instead and so gets a set-back. Then he is given a like amount to lose at Monte Carlo, but he breaks the bank and nearly breaks his heart. Appendicitis and the doctors finally help him get rid of all he has left, and the end of the year finds him waiting in bed to welcome the friends who have gone out to throw away his last worn out suit of clothes.

ATTENDED CHURCH IN A BODY

In honour of St. Patrick's Day, March 17th, a representation of Div. 1, A.O.H., numbering upwards of one hundred and marshalled by Mr. John Roche, marched from the Assembly Hall, on Hunter street, yesterday morning, to St. Peter's Cathedral, at 8 o'clock, attending Mass and Holy Communion. During the various ceremonies a selection of Irish airs were played by Miss Doherty, (organ), Mr. J. Minicolo, (cornet), Miss Kathleen McCarthy, and Messrs V. McCabe and J. Drains, (violins). Vocal solos were ably rendered by Messrs. Albert New and John King.

The members also attended church in a body in the evening and were delivered an appropriate sermon on Irish History by the Rev. Fr. McColl.

AN INTERESTING DEBATE

At a meeting of the Sacred Heart T. A. S., held yesterday afternoon, an interesting debate on the Street Railway question took place. Messrs. E. Fitzgibbon and E. Bagley spoke for the affirmative, and Messrs. J. Ruhally and Reynolds for the negative. At the conclusion of the debate the following resolution was passed: "The purchase and operation by the in the best interests of the community in the est interests of the community."

THEY ALL WANT IT.

Saskatchewan evidently wants things. The final feature of the fourth session of the second Parliament of Saskatchewan was the adoption in the House of what might be termed the bill of rights of the Province. The demands in detail are: Removal of the exemption from taxation now enjoyed by the Canadian Pacific Railway; access for Saskatchewan to a port on Hudson Bay; granting to the Province of the public domain within its limits; free access to the markets of the United States for grain products of Saskatchewan; new outlets for our farm products, and more particularly a speedy completion of the Hudson's Bay Railway, with a line of steamers from the bay to Great Britain. Hudson Bay seems to be a most desirable object of attainment. Manitoba has by the boundary decision a noble frontage on the bay; Ontario has access by a lane. Now Saskatchewan is putting in its claim, and there is no reason why Alberta and even British Columbia should not demand a port on Hudson Bay.

NO EXCUSES NEEDED.

The Review, under the heading, "T. V.C. Department," has the following:

"A gradual re-organisation of the staff of the T. V. C. is in course of operation, and it is expected that much of the dissatisfaction of former years will thus be avoided."

What does this evidently inspired intimation portend? One thing is pretty certain, that the spoilsman's axe is to swing till the element of dissatisfaction is removed. Where is the dissatisfaction? Will the organ furnish some particulars? The only dissatisfaction known to exist is over the fact that the faithful are excluded from positions. What guarantee have we that "much of the dissatisfaction of former years will be avoided," except in the way indicated? Have we had any startling improvement in respect of the changes that have been made in government positions? There's no necessity for making lame excuses. Why not admit openly that places are wanted for—outsiders or new comers, who have done their work and politically earned their reward, at the public expense? There's no necessity for being hypocritical as well as hoggish.

LIKE BEGETS LIKE.

It is shown in evidence that there are ninety mentally defective inmates in the Victoria Industrial School, Mimico. It is too late to deal with such unfortunates when they have drifted into crime. Some special school training might have improved matters, but that is not going far enough back. The marriage of the physically unfit, and the mentally weak and degarded keeps up the supply of weak-minded irresponsibles. No farmer would select or permit the most weakly, imperfect, dwarfed and defective stock for purposes of breeding. So long as we allow the idiotic, the mentally weak, the physically unfit, and the criminally inclined to marry and reproduce their kind without trestriction or impediment, so long will the crop of imbeciles and born-criminals be maintained. Civilization and legislation have advanced less, or evaded their responsibilities more, in the matter of the beneficent regulation of marriages than in any other matter that bears upon the physical and moral fitness of society. We reproduce by marriage the degradation, poverty and vice that make such movements as the Children's Aid Society a necessity, and, at its best, only an agency in locking the doors after the horse is stolen. Ministers smugly moralise in the pulpit over the poverty, destitution and moral degradation that demoralise society; yet these same ministers, blindly unite in marriage, persons of weak intellects, physical unfitness and moral depravity, with an absolute certainty of the reproduction of a new brood of degenerates and imbeciles.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Thank goodness the battle ship Maine, of the United States is sunk deep, and it is hoped that it will stay sunk.

The Globe's poetical competition on some Canadian historal subject will have a good effect if it averts intellectual night-mares in the field of obituary poetry.

The Lancaster no tenure bill embarassed the Borden government, which is probably the reason why the Grand Lodge of Ontario west declined to endorse Mr. Lancaster's "remedial" bill.

Next Sunday Princess Patricia will celebrate her twenty-sixth birthday. It is one of the peculiarities of prominence that a lady can't conceal her age, as some of them are said to desire to do when the too mature days of spinsterhood draw on.

Hon. Mr. Monk, Nationalist Minister of Public Works in the Conservative cabinet, says he is "tied, bolted and padlocked" to his portfolio. The London Advertiser comments thus: As Job said long ago: "Doth the wild ass bray when he hath grass, or loweth the ox over his fodder?"

Friday's snow fall cost the city of Toronto over three thousand dollars. It's an ill wind that does not "blow-in" city money to the pockets of the working man. A thousand men received $2.25 per day for clearing away snow. In Peterborough the snow has given a good deal of labour to workingmen who have been spending three or four months of enforced idleness.

Dr. PYNE'S SOOTHING SYRUP.

(London Advertiser.)

Dr. Pyne, who owes to his Orange connection the post for which he is notoriously unqualified, appeared before the Grand Lodge to give some account of his stewardship. He is reported as having evoked "deafening cheers" by an assertion that it was the Government's intention to make English the language of the Province." These words pledge him to nothing, and only men willing to be humbugged could find in them anything to cheer for.

When the Orangemen collected evidence and made charges concerning the conditions of bilingual schools in Eastern Ontario — evidence and charges which have borne out by Dr. Merchant's report in many cases — they were put off with vague assurances, and their reports were pigeonholed. It was not until Bishop Fallon took a hand in the affair that the education department made a move.

One of Dr. Pyne's duties is to administer soothing syrup to his Orange brethren. He felt he could count on their party loyalty to make no trouble for the Government over the school question. But the Seven Sleepers fairly jumped out of their berths when Bishop Fallon prodded them. The publication of the Hanna letter fell like a bomb in the Toronto Castle of Indolence.

Dr. Pyne must have laughed in his sleeve when the Grand Lodge gave credit to the Orangemen for the Merchant report. It was not until Bishop Fallon demanded a remedy for crying abuses that there was any notion of a commisaion of inquiry. So far as the education department was concerned, the Biship's little finger was thicker than the Orange Order's loins.

WHY SHOULD WE RAGE?

(Toronto Star.)

"The eloquent advocate of provincial rights turned coercionist, and Mr. Bourassa was permitted to draw those clauses in the authority bills which deprived the two prairie States of their constitutional right to formulate their own educational policies. To-day Mr. Bourassa rages because the new Prime Minister has refused to let him insert a similar dual school clause in the Manitoba Boundary bill. Yet not a single Liberal newspaper in Toronto or in Ontario, so far as we have seen, has had the grace or the decency or the honesty to admit that Mr. Borden has stood by the constitution while Sir Wilfrid Laurier has played the renegade, the slave, and the trickster."—Toronto News.

Mr. Bourassa was not permitted to draw the educational clauses of the autonomy bills. Mr. Bourassa was not satisfied with those clauses. Mr. Bourassa bitterly opposed those clauses. In Mr. Castell Hopkins' year book of 1906 we find this passage:

"Addressing a great mass meeting of French-Canadians in Montreal on April 17th, Mr. Henri Bourassa, M. P., aroused intense enthusiasm by his defence of Separate schools, and his denunciation of the autonomy bill for not more fully guarding the rights of the Roman Catholic minority, his criticism of the amended clause as ratifying 'unjust, illegal, oppressive, and unconstitutional territorial ordinances.'"

The writer of the year book goes on to say that Archbishop Langevin of St. Boniface declared that the Laurier government had robbed the Catholics of the new Provinces of the rights to denominational schools. The archbishop added: "We are once more sacrificed to sectarian fanaticism." La Patrie published a long letter from Mr. Bourassa denouncing the Government's amendment as reducing the guarantee of the minority to almost nothing. "It insures them neither language nor faith nor separation." And this is the Bourassa who, according to the News, drafted the educational clauses of the bill!

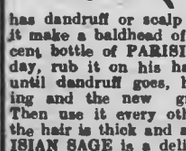
Why should the Liberal papers, on the strength of the News' radically inaccurate statement, be called upon to denounce Sir Wilfrid Laurier as a renegade, slave and trickster? How can they acquire a reputation for grace, decency and honesty by perverting history, as written by a Conservative?

Husband's Hair

How About It Madam, Is It Falling Out or Growing Thin?

Don't Lose It

Most husbands are careless regarding their hair—many are skeptical regarding hair tonics, restorers and the like.



It is only when their hair comes out in combs full that they really sit up and take notice.

If your husband's hair is falling; if he has dandruff or scalp itch, don't let it make a baldhead of him, get a 50-cent bottle of PARISIAN SAGE today, rub it on his hair every night until dandruff goes, hair stops falling and the new growth appears. Then use it every other night until the hair is thick and abundant. PARISIAN SAGE is a delightful, refreshing hair dressing for men, women and children. It will do as advertised, or your money back. Girl with Auburn hair on every carton and bottle. Sold by Wm. Madill and dealers everywhere.

TIT-BITS

"Before permitting you to pass to the front," said the Italian officer to the war correspondent, "I desire to know whether you are qualified to report our actions in the field."

The war correspondent bowed and awaited the pleasure of the great man.

"In the first place," continued the soldier, "I should like a definition of the phrase 'fiendish atrocity.'"

The correspondent smiled, as if he considered the question altogether too easy.

"Fiendish atrocities," he said, "are murders committed by the other side."

"Correct," returned the officer. "Now, what is just vengeance?"

"Just vengeance," answered the correspondent, "is the term used to designate murders committed by our side."

"Correct again," returned the officer. "I will give you an order that will take you thru all the lines." —Pearson's Weekly.

HOW AGGRAVATING.

Brown—"I saw a man drop twenty stories the other day, and it was a caution the way he swore."

Greene—"Swore after dropping twenty stories?"

Brown—"Yes. They were in a magazine he had just purchased, and he dropped it in the mud."—Judge.

Presence of mind recently saved an actor his gold watch and chain. While crossing a bridge in a thick night mist a suspicious-looking man suddenly loomed up out of the obscurity.

"Can you tell me the time, guv'nor?" he gruffly inquired.

"You are too late, my dear sir," replied the actor suavely. "A gentleman who passed a minute ago stole my watch!"

CAPITAL IS ENTITLED TO ADEQUATE PROTECTION

(Monetary Times)

As one would expect, Judge Mabee, chairman of the Dominion Railway Commission, has a high appreciation of the claims of the investor in Canada. In January last year, the Railway Board issued an order reducing the rates of the White Pass and Yukon Railway by one-third. An appeal was made, and the Board has now decided to rescind its previous order, although it has secured from the company an agreement to reduce considerably the existing rates. The chief reason for the Board's change of opinion is that evidence was submitted making it clear that if the reduced rates had gone into effect, the company would have defaulted in the payment of the interest to British bondholders to the extent of $127,000.

Judge Mabee stated that while the public should not be allowed to be robbed by railway companies, it is equally important "that the capital invested in transportation companies should be permitted to earn fair and reasonable dividend. Railway construction in Canada depends entirely on outside capital, thousands of millions, that must be borrowed within the next generation or two. We have in Canada less than thirty thousand miles of railway as against more than 235,000 in the United States. The money for the construction of this must, for many years at least, largely come from abroad; and how long would these investments continue if it were known that their earning power might at any moment be terminated by the intervention of this board?"

This is the proper view. A borrowing country, such as Canada, must take especial pains against undermining or destroying the confidence of the investor. We raise loans publicly in London at the rate of $200,000,000 a year, and probably half or equal that amount again, comes to Canada through private sources. The Canadian public must not be squeezed by corporations in order to satisfy the interest rights of the British and foreign investor. On the other hand, our governments must see that capital throughout the country gets a fair deal. With the growing tendency of government and municipal ownership, this is the more important. Capital competing with government capital and enterprise must have competition as fair as when it competes with corporation capital.

Riding the high horse of government authority into any field, creating government monopoly and destroy vested interests will not be tolerated by the Canadian public any more than would similar action on the part of corporations. In the former case, however, there has been a disposition sometimes to use the powers of government to weaken the fight of private capital. Any such effects will prove very displeasing to the investor who will show that displeasure by withdrawing his funds. We have had capital from Great Britain amounting to $2,000,000,000. That alone should be sufficient incentive for Canada to give the investor the best possible protection.

MR. BROCK TO ADDRESS THE LOCAL AD. CLUB

Some ideas gained from many years of practical experience in large retail stores will be given out by Mr. I. Brock, who will be the principal speaker at the A Club meeting tomorrow evening, Tuesday, March 19. His subject will be "'Good Goods at Good Prices as Opposed to the Bargain Idea."

Previous to coming to Peterborough, to manage the Brinton Carpet Company of Canada, Mr. Brock was connected with the Robt. Simpson Company's Departmental Store in Toronto. While he is now one of our local citizens and has charge of a local industry, having 180 on its payroll, Mr. Brock will have to his advantage in addressing the club that outside viewpoint which has made previous meetings of the local Ad Club so valuable to those in attendance at the same.

Local business men other than Mr. Brock will also address the meeting, one of these taking up the subject, "The Value of the Farmer Trade, and Some Suggestions as to How Better to Appeal to It."

The meeting is called at 8 o'clock sharp and will be held in the Dominion Bank chambers which same must be closed shortly after 9.30, hence all will get away early. Other than the addresses which will be of a most valuable nature, some important business will come before the meeting for discussion, and it is desirous that all interested local business men be present.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

ARTIE EDMUNDS TO BOX TONY HUDSON OF DETROIT HERE TUESDAY, MARCH 26

Instead of one big bout, the Peterborough fight fans will be given two head-liner matches a week from to-morrow night in the Grand Opera House. The management had matched Harry Westerby of Toronto and George (Kid) Ryan of Rochester, and this was to have been the main bout. Fortunately, however for local followers of the game, Artie Edmunds the "peachy Hercules" of Toronto, has been hooked up with Tony Hudson of Detroit, and this bout will head the bill, with the Ryan-Westerby battle as the semi-final windup. In addition, there will be two good six-round preliminaries, so that altogther there are thirty-four rounds of fast boxing on the programme. Edmunds is well known here, having wrestled and given a physical culture demonstration, but has never been seen in action with the gloves in Peterborough. He made a great record in New York a year or so ago. In Hudson he will have a worthy opponent, as the Detroit boy is a comer. They will go ten rounds at 122 pounds, while Westerby and Kid Ryan hook up for twelve rounds at 125 pounds.

LONDON TEAM SIGNS THREE PROMISING PITCHERS

The London Advertiser says:

One of the features of the London Canadian League team this season will be the strength of the pitching department. The local management has signed up three new men, and, together with the best of last season's staff, the London club has about the best bunch of twirlers that will be found in the league.

Great things are expected of Merritt and Zabell, two of the three new men signed. Both are in Detroit at present and Merritt is reputed to be the best semi-pro. pitcher that the Michigan city has turned out in years. Last season he had a splendid record, and a couple of South Michigan clubs were after him. However, he was recommended to the London officials by a couple of last season's players who live in Detroit, and Merritt signed a London contract, before the others could locate him. He is a young fellow with lots of speed and curves, and has only lost four games in the past two years out of about thirty played in the semi-pro. leagues in Detroit.

Zabell spent the last two seasons on the coast, where he was a sensation. Spokane held him last summer and he was one of the best in the league. He was out of the game for a while owing to his injuries, and later obtained his release. This season he wanted to sign up with a Canadian aggregation, as many of his former team-mates has joined teams in the new league. He was recommended to the London management and it was not long before he signed a London club contract. Many of last year's London players know Zabell and have seen him pitch. When it was announced that he had signed with the Cockneys the local management received many letters from the players congratulating them on landing him, and declaring that he will have no trouble in making good. Zabell himself expresses great confidence in his ability to make good in the Canadian League and all he asks for is a chance to show what he can do.

Another pitcher on whom the London club will depend this season is Johnny Farquhar of Belmont. Farquhar is well known in London, and many of the fans have seen him work. He has beaten about everything that he has ever pitched against in this part of the country, including several fast City League teams from London. He pitched against a picked team from the East End League in a game last Dominion Day and struck out seventeen men and won the game in easy fashion. He would have received a try-out on the London team last season only for the fact that he could not get away, but this year he is free to join the club and there is no doubt but that he will become one of the best pitchers in the league. Although only a youngster, Farquhar is nearly six feet in height and built in proportion. He has spent most of his time on the farm and pitching seemed to come natural to him.

LONDON ENTHUSIASTIC OVER THE LEAGUE PROSPECTS

(London Advertiser)

Just two months more, and the baseball season in London will open. The Canadian League will commence the season on May 14, which is about the same time as it started last year. The season will be closed a week or so earlier than last year, but the teams will play about 30 more games. The schedule has been left in the hands of Secretary Robinson and H. L. Walsh, and it is expected that it will be announced in a week or two.

The meeting at Hamilton was a most enthusiastic one, and the owners of the different teams are looking ahead to a great season. The London representatives arrived home last evening, and they speak in glowing terms of the enthusiasm which marked the gathering.

The Peterborough and Ottawa situations are in splendid shape, and it is expected that these two cities will be splendid additions to the circuit.

Frank Shaughnessy Liked.

The local representatives like the looks of Frank Shaughnessy, the owner of the Ottawa team. Shaughnessy is a fine-cut young fellow, and is very popular in Ottawa, where there is a great deal of disappointment over the fact that he may not be able to play for the Ottawa team next season. However, the team will be left in good hands, and the following season Shaughnessy will be in full charge. He is making a big effort to buy his release from the Fort Wayne club, but Owner Varnell will not part with him, as he fully realizes his value. The Ottawa Club has only a few men signed up at present, but they have all kinds of applications, and as soon as Shaughnessy finds out where he is at, the players will be signed.

Peterborough Solid.

The Peterborough situation has now gained a firm footing, and the fans in the Lift Lock City are very enthusiastic over the prospect of seeing Canadian League baseball in that city this summer. Templin should make a good manager for the team, as he is a good player himself, and knows the game thoroughly. He has long been striving for a managerial berth, and now that he has at last landed one, it is expected that he will build up a strong team.

The London club will have all its players here by the last week in April, and spring training will commence about that time. It is thought that a couple of weeks' good stiff practice will be enough to give the management an idea of who to keep and who to let go, and with a good manager at the head of the team, the outlook for a pennant winner is indeed bright.

No Manager Yet.

The management have not yet decided upon a manager, although they have been swamped with applications. There might be a possibility that Joe Delehanty, who was given his unconditional release by the Toronto Club a few days ago, will get the job, as he has been recommended by President McCaffery, of the Toronto Club. The matter of salary will cut the figure in landing Joe, as several other clubs are after him. There is no particular hurry about getting a manager just yet, as about all players have been signed, and a manager will not be needed until the time comes for the players to report.

HOCKEY HAPPENINGS

Manager Jack Thirtbeck of the Midgets requests the following men to be out at practice to-night between 8 and 10 o'clock in preparation for their junior cup game to-morrow night with the Northern Lights: Walker, Dwyer, Davidson, Callaghan, Halpin, Carew, Barrie, Rose, White.

Curling Notes

One more stage of the local bonspiel was safely tucked away on Saturday when Skips Foote and Fitzgerald entered the last lap of the contest, each with a seven shot lead to their credit. Good curling featured the games throughout. This fact, augmented by good ice, was the occasion for some fine exhibitions of skill on the part of the curlers. The winners of both rinks emerged from the contest with identically the same margin of safety, namely seven shots. The score in both cases was a 14-7 tally.

It now remains for Skips Foote and Fitzgerald to hook up in the finals, an event which will be of more than passing interest to curling enthusiasts. With two strong rinks, such as the contending skips will provide, a red hot contest is assured. If the weather man refrains from butting in in too obstreperous a manner, the final game in the consolation fixture will be obliterated to-night.

FOOTBALL

There is a letter at this office for the Secretary of the Midland Football League.

BASEBALL

Ned Lake, the new Providence manager, says the Greys will make the other seven teams hustle this year. The Greys always do—at this time of the year.

Hub Perdue is of the opinion that more "hope head" plays are pulled off regularly in the National League than in the Southrew.

"Lefty" Russell, Connie Mack's $12,000 beauty, claims his arm has now recovered its full strength, and he expects to show some of the class which he displayed while a member of the Baltimore team.

"Slim" Sallee, of the St. Louis Cardinals, has come out with the statement that Johnny Bates, the clever Cincinnati outfielder, gives him as much, if not more, trouble, than any lefthander that faces him.

Pitcher Bell, who was sold by Brooklyn to Newark, has kicked over the traces and refuses to report to McGinnity. He does not like the idea of leaving the big show.

Harry Davis, the manager of the Cleveland team, denies the new cork centre makes the ball livelier than the old rubber core style. He claims the new sphere is no better for long hits than the old, but that it holds its shape better.

Claude Ritchie, the old Pittsburg and Boston second baseman, has asked Manager Hemphill for a trial with his Atlanta team.

William C. Niesen, owner of the Columbian League franchise in Chicago, who has been hobnobbing with United States League magnates, says there is room for a third club in the Windy City. Now let's hear from C. Webb Murphy.

And still "Lefty" Leifield has not succeeded in swapping himself to another team. Sometimes players who imagine certain managers are worrying themselves bald-headed trying to devise means for acquiring their services wake up and find that fame is but a fleeting, fickle, thing, after all.

Some Bostonian has invented a new plate to be worn on the shoes of baseball players and he has sent samples to President Dreyfuss, who refuses to enthuse over the invention. The only spike that will ever meet the approval of the Pittsburg club owner is one that is guaranteed not to cut, bruise or maim one of his players, just when the Pittsburg club has a chance for the pennant.

The famous fallaway slide which Manager McGraw has so well perfected among the Giants, is said to have been first used successfully by Mike Kelley, the famous $10,000 beauty. Fred Pfeffer, the old-time ball player, says that Kelley could slide into a base just as gracefully as Ty. Cobb. It was when "King" Kelley first introduced the trick into the game that the slogan "Slide, Kelley, slide," was originated.

Mike Donlin is anxious to try for the first base job in Pittsburg. Manager Fred Clarke, when asked about it the other day, said that Donlin would be given a chance to show his ability as a first baseman. This new angle of Donlin's ambition isn't taken very seriously, as it is believed he will be the successor of Tommy Leach in the outfield. Leach had a poor season last year, and he will probably not be seen very much in action this season.

Flattering reports from the training camps about former Interational Leaguers. Tesreau is pitching in fine style for the Giants, while Kocher is sure of a regular berth with Detroit. Cozy Dolan, who was with the Jerseys last season, is delivering the goods for Harry Wolverton's team, and should bolster up the Yankees' breastworks considerably. Jimmy Lavender and Joe Alger are showing what they can do with the Chicago Cubs. Lavender is being used to hurl to the batters, while Joe is being given an opportunity to take Chance's place at first base. Much has been said about Morris Rath of the White Sox, who continues to keep up his good work.

The fans expect Ben Egan to land a permanent job with the Athletics. He has been showing up well with Mack's youngsters and is doing the receiving in the exhibition games. Ben also is clouting the ball for extra bases. John Dutuc, the former Montreal hurler, and Hank Perry, the ex-Clam, are with the Tigers, and from all accounts are making good. Wolverton is pleased with George McConnell, Simmons and Osborn, the trio of former Rochester players. Simmons, if he shows speed may be carried along as a second baseman or a utility infielder. McConnell is expected to take his regular turn in the box, while Osborn, if his batting warrants it, will be given a trial to make good in the outfield.

The correct dope on Hans Wagner is that he was born in Carnegie, Pa., on February 24, 1874. Incidentally, Wagner has led the National League hitters in 8 out of the past 12 seasons.

Ralph Glaze, the old Dartmouth and Providence twirler, who went to Utica via Montreal, has decided to pass up the game and devote his time to his store down in Waco, Texas.

The dope book says Fred Lake piloted the Lowell team when it won the New England League flag in 1903. The new Providence manager held down the first station and walloped the home-hide at a .293 clip that season.

Jack Lively, the ex-Tiger twirler, who joins the Grays at the Savannah training camp, was rated as one of the fifteen best twirlers in the American League last season. He won seven games and lost five, was taken out four times, and put in to finish one battle. Lively's best season was in 1910, when he was on the Oakland firing line. He led the Pacific Coast speed merchants, winning 31 games and putting 15 in the lost column.

From all reports that come from the Brooklyn training camp, it looks as if Herbie Moran, the ex-Rochester out-fielder, would land a steady job with the Trolley Dodgers. Manager John Ganzel of the Hustlers is already scouring the country for a fast fielder ot fill Herbe's shoes.

The toss of a coin decided the election of president of the Wisconsin-Illinois League. A tie vote between F. S. Edmison, of Rockford, and Frank Weeks, of Green Bay, brought the coin into play and Edmison called the turn.

Newark has signed an outfielder named Dave Yates, a Brooklyn college player.

In training with the White Sox at Waco, Texas, Morris Rath, the former Oriole, has made an excellent impression with Manager Jimmy Callahan. In a practice game Rath, playing the keystone bag for the regulars, made two hits and accepted five chances without a slip.

The Toronto Club has paid $2,000 as bonuses for two American college players for the team of 1913. These players are the most promising in the American colleges.

Catcher Dick Treinor has signed a contract with the Syracuse Stars of the New York State League.

Lee Meyers, second baseman, has been released by purchase to the Trenton, N.J., club of the Tri-State League.

Syracuse will be one of the few clubs to have a trainer this season, James Dunbar, a former pugilist, having been signed to take charge of the club.

Manager Needham of the Guelph Canadian League team has signed a new left-hander, and with Schumann Orth, Mason, and Neher, the Guelph team's pitching staff is now complete.

The Bisons will not leave for the South until Wednesday, instead of Monday. Geo. Stallings, who there has been constant rain in Augusta, Ga., for the past two weeks.

The Jersey City players sailed Wednesday from New York to the Bermuda Islands.

A Baltimore dramatist says that Cy. Seymour has agreed to terms with Newark, and that Jack Dunn has let the hard-hitting and eccentric outfielder go there.

Clarke Griffith of the Washington team has turned down an offer from Manager John H. Ganzel of $2,500 for Firstbaseman Chester Spencer.

President McCaffery said last night that if it was true the Federation of Labour had declared a boycott against the Atlanta, Ga., Baseball Association, the Toronto Ball Club would not play its scheduled exhibition games in that city on April 1 and 2.

Providence Journal: Tim Jordan, Amby McConnell, Ed. Holly, and Bill Bradley will surely make the fans sit up and take nourishment this season.

"Buck" Freeman declares he has a winner in Scranton with Phil Ferland, Raymond Friel and 'Lanky Bob' Peterson, a trio of Gray discards, on his pay-roll.

The Pacific Coast League will be the first circuit to start the 1912 season. Beginning with April 2, the coast players will be fighting for the flag until October 20, or nearly seven months of strenuous ball tossing.

FACE WAS LITERALLY COVERED WITH PIMPLES.

Four Different Doctors Did Her No Good.

Two Bottles of BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS Cured Her.

Bad blood is directly the cause of the face breaking out in pimples, and it is impossible to eradicate them unless you put your blood into good shape

Burdock Blood Bitters is compounded from roots, herbs, barks and berries, and is without a doubt the best remedy procurable for the purpose of driving all the blood impurities out of the system.

Mr. Geo. E. Miller, Clavering, Ont writes:—"Last fall I was very much troubled with pimples. My face was literally covered with them. I went to four different doctors, but they could do me no good. One day a friend advised me to use Burdock Blood Bitters, so I got two bottles, and before I had taken all the first one, the pimples had nearly all disappeared, and by the time I had taken all the second one the pimples had disappeared completely, thanks to Burdock Blood Bitters. I would advise anybody who is troubled with any blood trouble to use Burdock Blood Bitters.

AN IRREGULAR PROCEEDING

A Short Story

BY H. B. PEYTON.

"My dear, he is positively delightful, and as for his skating." Miss Hilarie Vaughan was quite at a loss for an adequate expression of admiration for the tall, good-looking stranger who had been within an ace of laying her in an undignified position on the rink. Pausing, while the object of her eulogy passed again, she added with determination. "And I mean to know him. Sit down, Fanny, and let's arrange it."

"Hilarie, you are incorrigible! How can you think of such a thing? The man may be a tradesman, or a bookie, or something just as horrid. But you never could behave yourself. Please remember that you are under my care, and that picking up on a seaside rink is quite out of the question."

"That depends dear on how the term is applied. A few minutes ago he might have been obliged to have picked me up in common politeness. It has just occurred to me that a judicious and practical combination of the two meanings of the expression might have a highly satisfactory result."

"Good heavens! You mean that you would cause a spill?"

"Exactly."

"Then you must understand that I, as your hostess and chaperone, and a married woman—"

"Of six months!"

"Most emphatically I protest against such a scandalous proceeding. What on earth would your father—"

"My father? Oh, I had forgotten that you don't know. To think I have been here nearly twelve hours without telling you the real reason of my visit. I suppose you think I have just come to stay in the ordinary way."

"Why, of course."

"Well, I haven't. I left home in a downright tearing rage, and I swore I would never go back again until—There he goes again. Isn't he great?"

"If every one caused the world as much trouble as you do! What is the matter now?"

"Come and have tea," said Hilarie. "And I'll tell you the story."

They selected a table in a secluded corner. Hilarie assumed an expression of righteous indignation. "Can you believe it? They want to insist on my marrying my cousin Harry, who has been abroad for the last ten years. I have only seen him three times in my life, and I must say he seemed a nice boy then. He certainly has not kept up his niceness."

"How do you know that?"

"Because he has actually written to my father saying that he is arriving in this country in a few days, and asking permission to pay his addresses to me. Did you ever hear of such a thing? Think what sort of a person he must be. Of course dad thinks it quite right, and says it will be a very good match for me; for it appears this precious cousin is a walking gold mine. He was quite horrified when I said that Harry P. Saunders must be the worst kind of a prig, and that I wouldn't even see him. I got so wild about it at last that I packed up and came straight here, leaving a note saying where I had gone. I don't know what is going to happen. But I simply won't marry him."

"He may be very nice really."

"He couldn't be after writing such a letter as that. But let's forget him now, and think about this other little affair. I am going to work it at once. You can sit here and watch, and for heaven's sake don't rush in thinking I am hurt, because I shan't be."

"Well, I still protest, but I suppose you will have your own way, and—I think you had better introduce him to me as soon as possible, so that I can see that he is quite—" Hilarie glided gracefully round the rink.

"By jove, I'm awfully sorry. Abominably careless of me. I hope you are not hurt?" They were reclining in a complicated position on the smooth, but hard surface of the rink. The tall stranger rose to his feet at once, but when Hilarie made an effort to do likewise she uttered an exclamation of pain. "It's my ankle, I'm afraid. I can't put that foot to the ground. Thanks so much. Be careful, I can only stand on one skate. Oh-h!" The plaintive groan evidently distressed him.

"I really can't apologize sufficiently," he began.

"Not at all," said Hilarie. "It was as much my fault as yours. If you would help me off—"

"Stand quite still," he said; "and I'll run you to the side." He put his arm round her—this being necessary for the purpose of supporting her on a single skate—and ran her off the rink. Assisting her to a chair, he tugged off his own skates and proceeded to unfasten hers. He was certainly very handsome, and obviously a gentleman. His manner was delightfully easy, quite that of a man accustomed to society. He glanced up, meeting her scrutiny with a smile. "There," he said, rising, "it will ease the ankle to get the weight off. I am really disconsolate at having caused you this pain." He regarded her with frank admiration. Certainly she did not discourage him. "You skate excellently," he said. He loosed himself strapping her skates together. "The fact is," he admitted, "that I was longing all the afternoon to ask you to do some figures with me, but I am afraid my courage was wanting at the crucial moment. It would have been delightful." I am sure we should drop three very well together."

"We certainly dropped two very well together just now," remarked Hilarie. She glanced up and caught sight of an observant face through the rails of the gallery. "Another time I will do some figures with you. And now I must go. The bell is just going to ring."

"But your ankle?"

"Is much better. See, I can walk quite comfortably now." She turned smiling. "Good-bye," she said.

"I shall probably see you on the front to-morrow morning." Decidedly he could be bold when he wished. "And I hope I may inquire if you are none the worse for our collision?"

Yes, he might. She did not say so, but he knew. Her smile told him, and the tone in which she said "Good-bye."

"He is delightful," said Hilarie. "And he is not a tradesman or anything of the kind. He is a gentleman to the finger tips—I—I am going to meet him on the front to-morrow morning."

"Hilarie!"

"Why not? I'd much rather meet him than my lovely virtuous cousin Harry."

"Well, for heaven's sake be careful. And if you must know him, insist on a proper introduction somehow."

"Yes," said Hilarie, reluctantly, "I suppose I must do that, though I don't see how it is going to be done. Of course the world is very small, and there is a chance that he may know some one that I know. Anyway the thing must be worked somehow."

"What is his name?"

"I haven't the vaguest notion. We shall get to that stage in the morning. He has a charming voice, and is certainly accustomed to society."

"These are most appalling proceedings. But I suppose you must have your own way, as you always do."

"Dear, submissive thing," said Hilarie.

"Good morning, Miss er—"

"Good morning, Mr. er—"

"My name," he said, "is Grimshaw."

"And mine is Vaughan. Isn't it a glorious morning?"

"Perfect. I see I need not renew my inquiries. The ankle appears to have completely recovered itself."

"Quite, thank you." He sat down beside her, apparently prepared for a lengthy conversation. "Of course," he was saying, "this sort of thing is really quite wrong. It is easy to see that you are not the sort of girl one usually meets at the seaside; and yet you are talking to me, an entire stranger, on an ordinary rink. It is delightful, but irregular."

"Most irregular," admitted Hilarie.

"May I suggest a way out of the difficulty? Agreed that a formal introduction is necessary before our acquaintance can be continued. The world is very small. Possibly there will not be a very long delay. Suppose I undertake to be introduced to you by a mutual acquaintance within a month? May I do so?"

"You may," she told him.

"Of course it will be necessary for you to tell me exactly who you are."

"My name is Hilarie Vaughan, and my father is the ambassador." He did not appear at all surprised or staggered at the disclosure. He only said: "Thank you. Within a month I will endeavor to fulfill the demands of conventionality. In the meantime I suppose there is no harm on our sitting together for a short time this morning, on the understanding that whenever you wish I leave you immediately."

"I don't think there can be any harm," she said.

"Fanny. What does it feel like to be in love?"

"My dear girl, you don't mean to say—"

"Yes, I do,"—defiantly. "And I want to know how it ought to feel, because—because—" She dropped her head on her friend's shoulder. "Because, Fanny dear, I believe—I think—I am in love with him."

"But such a thing is impossible."

"Why? He has undertaken that within a month some acquaintance shall introduce us. Who knows? He may be a prince in disguise."

"Or a beggar."

"Or a beggar," repeated Hilarie. "And if he is I should love him just the same. In love there is no difference between a beggar and a prince."

"But there is a very great difference in Princes Crescent. What on earth would your parents think?"

"I wonder," said the ambassador's daughter serenely.

"Hilarie, have you any dances left?" Her mother spoke. She knew that the dreadful moment had come at last.

"Only one, mother."

"Your cousin Harry has just arrived. He had a cab accident, and could not get here sooner. I hope, Hilarie, that we shall have no more of this nonsensical prejudice. He is a charming fellow. You have a chance for which many girls would give half their lives. Wait here while I fetch him." She moved across the ballroom towards a tall man who had just entered. And Hilarie, watching, turned deadly pale; but the exclamation that passed her lips was one of pleasure rather than pain. She forgot her prejudice—forgot everything except that the man she loved—"Hilarie, this is your cousin Harry." She could not speak. He bowed smiling at her very tenderly.

"Cousin Hilarie, may I have a dance?" Mechanically she handed him her programme. And the music played and the dancers whirled past, but they did not see them. They were alone in the ballroom—he and she.

(To be concluded to-morrow.)

There is a Great Advantage in Buying Your SUIT Early in the Season

Aside from the fact that you have far better choice from complete stocks by purchasing early, there is also the advantage of getting longer and more satisfactory service from your Suit.

Women to whom we have given this advice on former occasions and who purchased their Spring Suit when we made our first displays, have freely expressed the desire to be among the first notified when our new Spring Suit stock arrived. They realize there is a great advantage in buying their Suit early in the Season.

And Now a Word About These New Spring Suits

First of all, jacket lengths of the new Suits range from 20 to 28 inches—a length especially chic in appearance. Sleeves are elbow or three-quarter in length—large armholes are a particularly notable feature of the new styles. The skirts continue narrow, with straight lines, though ample enough in width to give perfect freedom of movement. Serge, Voile, Taffeta Silk, Satins and novelty materials enter largely into the new Suits for Spring.

Coming to the vital question of cost—the Suits shown in this display are moderately priced in every instance.

MATING POULTRY FOR BEST RESULTS

The growing magnitude of the poultry industry in this country and the evolution of many new breeds to meet the demands of the fancier and the practical poultryman, have stimulated the great breeders of the country to renewed effort in the careful breeding of old varieties. The greatest concern of the practical poultry raiser is how to mate up his breeding pens so as to preserve the robust constitution and vigour so necessary in parent stock. The poultryman realizes that these qualities are imperative in the breeding pen if he is to get plenty of eggs strong in fertility and chicks strong in vitality, that will withstand artificial conditions which are bound to be imposed upon them from the shell to maturity, and on through their period of commercial activity.

Requires Careful Study.

A successful ating of any breed now in existence requires careful study of the breed and its characteristics, for all the breeds are made up of two or more crosses, and there is more or less constant war between the composite elements for supremacy. There is no invariable rule to follow in order to secure certain results, and a perfect balance in each individual.

Each breeder follows his own particular method to secure similar results. He is governed largely by his own particular circumstances and the limitations of his individual flock.

Standard of Excellence.

There is a standard of excellence established for each breed. All breeders strive to reach that standard. If they did not there would be no uniformity in any given breed. This state of affairs makes it possible for a breeder to send anywhere in the country and obtain a bird so like his own that he could scarcely tell the difference, provided a careful description of the bird he wished to purchase was given. All the great breeders and many fanciers have a general knowledge of the laws of inheritance and evolution and variation. Without such understanding they would be at sea most of the time in breeding.

Evolution Not Understood.

Evolution is roughly understood to mean the tendency of a breed to keep within a certain circle of growth and development, which constantly revolves upon itself, returning at intervals to the starting point and repeating through a succession of phases the same course.

Inheritance is the tendency shown by all forms of life to transmit traits and perpetuate its kind—the natural law that like begets like.

Variation.

Variation refers to a tendency in certain individuals to vary more or less from the established type. This trait is the one largely depended upon by breeders to introduce new characteristics into the od breed an, thus lay the foundation for a new strain or strengthen characteristics already recognized. A sport is the result of variation displayed in an exaggerated form, producing an individual so differing from the parent stock as to warrant its use as a foundation for an entirely new breed.

New Blood Required.

The tendency to all breeds to revert to the original stock is overcome by the wise introduction of new blood into the flock, thereby breaking the line, and weakening inherited tendencies. Line breeding is practised with the opposite end in view, that of strengthening family tendencies. It takes a wise head and careful breeder of experience to practice line breeding successfully, without accumulating a good many deplorable traits in the stock. It is through line breeding, however, that some of the heaviest laying strains and strongest characteristics have been established.

Most Undesirable Feminine

The practical poultryman should thoroughly understand his pen of females or he is apt to go wrong in the selection of the males to mate with them. If he is raising stock for breeding purposes this matter of mating is of prime importance; it does not follow that the poultryman must have a cockerel of high score or with a collection of blue ribbons to mate with the hens. On the other hand, a cock bearing moderately high may meet your requirements better. If one is a poor judge of poultry in the beginning, engage a poultry expert for the first time, going over the ground carefully and gleaning all you can from him. Pay special attention to the vigour of the flock from which you select your males. Remember that the male represents half the flock if he can stamp a long line of constitutional vigour upon his offspring. A bird may be the picture of health himself and still be offspring of stock weak in constitution and give to his offspring tendencies which render him susceptible to disease under unfavorable circumstances. Breeding pens should be mated up at once that they may become used to the quarters and matings.

A Case of "Have-to"

What Thinking Takes Out of Brains must be Put Back by Food

Every one must rebuild, each day a little, in order to keep the body healthy. The daily energy of brain, nerves and muscles destroys some of the cells and these must of course be rebuilt each day.

Now suppose you observe some trouble with the body and that you are slowly going from bad to worse. Wouldn't you accept the evidence as a hint from Mother Nature that either you are doing some hurtful thing, or more likely, that you are not selecting the food which contains the elements Nature requires for the daily rebuilding.

For instance, suppose you have an increasing tendency towards nervousness or perchance "Brain-fag" and Nervous Prostration. Stop the habit or food which may be the cause and use food which you know contains the things required.

Analysis shows the soft, gray filling of Brain and Nerve centres to consist of Albumin, Water and Phosphate of Potash. Now, unless your food contains these elements, you cannot rebuild and make good the daily destruction of this gray substance, a little being broken down each day by brain work and nervous tension.

There is a safe and sure food which can be relied upon and which does contain the required elements for rebuilding.

A trial will prove its worth to the user of

VESPER MUSICALE AT CONSERVATORY

A highly successful twilight musicale, under the auspices of the Women's Art Association, delighted a very appreciative audience at the Conservatory of Music on Saturday evening. The hall was filled to its capacity, and an excellent and seasonable Irish programme was presented, as follows:

Overture on Irish Airs . . Bendix
Conservatory Orchestra.
Bass Solo, . . "The Minstrel Boy" . . Moore
E. Hanrahan.
Selection "The Shamrock" Middleton
Conservatory Orchestra.

(b) "The Sprig of Shillelagh" . . . . . Lysaght
Mrs. L. J. Pettit.
Duet for clarionet and cornet—
(a) 'The Last Rose of Summer' Moore
(b) "Killarney" . . . . . Balte
Otto and Paul Gliddon.
Group of Irish songs—
(a) "Mavourneen" . . . . . .
(b) "Believe Me if all Those Endearing Young Charms" . . . . . .
(c) "Come Back to Erin" . . . . . .
Miss Mary G. Chalmers, A.T.C.M.
Selection—"Memories of Tara" . . . . . DeWitt
Conservatory Orchestra.
Miss Dean and Miss McKee, accompanists.
Rupert Gliddon, Musical Director.

At the close of the listed programme Mr. Judge Huycke made a few remarks, commending the work of the Women's Art Association, and of the Conservatory, under Mr. Gliddon's direction, special emphasis being laid upon the success of Mr. Gliddon in bringing the 57th Band to the splendid condition of executive efficiency so generally recognized by competent judges of music.

MARKET INCIDENTS

Bought Eggs for 18 cts.—Woman Wanted Highest Price For Butter

There were several little incidents at Saturday's market that afforded amusement to those who witnessed them. A farmer drove up to the rear entrance to go up stairs with two baskets of eggs. A buyer walked up to the cutter and asked the price of the eggs.

"I do not know what they are selling for to-day. Last Saturday I got twenty-one cents."

"Well, they're down to-day," the buyer said, "and you can't do better than 18 cents".

There was a little further argument and the eggs changed hands at 18 cents, the total of the bill being slightly over $3.00.

Upstairs a woman came in about 11 o'clock. Four or five buyers who were waiting for her inquired about the price of her butter.

"I haven't had a chance to find out the price yet," she said, "but I hear it is forty cents."

The buyers tried to tell her that the price was not that high.

"Well, I'll risk it at 38 cents," and turning to one who appeared to be her daughter, she said: "Go and find out what they're getting."

She sold three or four pounds at 38 cents, and then switched to forty.

DEATHS.

COLLINS.—At Mount Forest, Ont., on Monday, March 18, 1912, Robert Durham, second son of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Collins, aged seven months.

THE GIRL NEXT DOOR

(Short Story.)

Dawson Street was highly respectable and somewhat aristocratic, and Professor Hamilton Stanhope had never taken up his abode there. Having satisfied himself in regard to these particulars, he settled down to work and gave the street and its occupants no more thought.

His apartments were on the third floor, and when tired delving in musty old tomes, he occasionally rested his eyes by gazing out along the sky line of treetops. Upon the first of these occasions he had noticed what a wide driveway separated the house in which he lived from the somewhat pretentious one next door.

"Of course," he mused absently, "that is why these rooms are so sunny. Southern exposure, broad space to let the sunshine in, bright and healthy; I am fortunate." And with a feeling of pleasure, because of his agreeable situation he returned to work.

One glorious morning the professor threw open his window to get a breath of the clear, sparkling air; in place of that he almost lost what he had.

In the driveway below the prettiest girl he had ever seen frillicked best girl he had ever seen frollicked a dog. In his entire career he never had seen a girl whom he had cared to look at the second time, and, lover of dogs that he was, useless little pet dogs had always been his particular aversion.

For a moment he quite forgot himself and gazed down in rapt admiration. The girl looked up, flushed delicately, then she and the dog quickly disappeared around the corner of the house.

The professor found it very difficult to concentrate his mind again upon the course of scientific articles that he was preparing, and finally persuaded himself that he needed exercise. He proceeded to take it by going for a brisk walk; in so doing he managed to pass the adjacent house several times and was rewarded by seeing the face of his mental disturber at one of the second storey windows.

Apparently the professor's health grew rapidly worse, although no one would have suspected it from his looks and appetite. But his work was neglected and he was compelled to take long, aimless walks and to spend much time in the big chair by one of his windows.

Before another week rolled around the professor began to realize that he had a serious case of heart affection.

The situation was tantalizing, for by the utmost contriving his logical mind could conceive of no sequence of circumstances likely to lead to a proper introduction.

He produced a book of heraldry, and made an elaborate family tree, which proved beyond a doubt that his ancestor and William the Conqueror had been intimate friends of not near relatives. But a family tree was of no avail in this case. He could neither climb up its branches and besiege her windows nor her heart.

He might not even send it by mail addressed to "The Girl Next Door," for in the course of the last week he had discovered that there were several girls next door.

As he sat one afternoon gloomily trying to strike upon a feasible method of introduction, he glanced at one of the second storey windows. Now Professor Hamilton Stanhope was a gentleman, but what he saw caused his heart to stop beating and momentarily robbed him of the power of motion or retreat.

The sun was shining brightly into the windows in question and a long cheval mirror reflected a most remarkable scene. His divinity was attired in a strange costume, not unlike those worn by Turkish gentlemen of rank when they sit for their photographs. Even in the midst of his shocked astonishment he grudgingly recognized that it was immensely becoming. With fascinated gaze he watched the weird antics that the mirror showed him.

The reflected figure bent backward until he feared it must break; it rotated its body from the waist until the beautiful face in the mirror was scarlet; it swayed from side to side until he himself grew dizzy; it careened and pulled wildly at a strange gearing of ropes and pulleys fastened to the wall; it ran about on all fours and balanced lightly on a finger and a toe.

But when the figure essayed sundry high kicks he groaned aloud. He had an inner consciousness that he ought to hide his eyes, but he failed to do so.

As if to set at rest any question as to the identity of the original, the girl herself appeared within the range of his vision. She approached the mirror and made all sorts of grimaces and facial contortions at her own image. She twisted her head until he trembled lest she should wring her neck. She swung her arms and struck fiercely at unseen foes.

The professor could stand no more. He arose and paced the floor.

"So young, so beautiful," he muttered again and again. "The face of an angel and the form of a goddess, but so evidently insane. What a fate for her! What an empty air castle have I builded for myself! Back, fool, back to your researches among the ruins of the past. There, at least, things are what they seem!"

But the professor failed to obey the voice of reason. He tried earnestly to concentrate his thoughts, but between him and his work there was always the vision of her lovely upturned face as he had first seen it.

He sat resolutely down to work, when the sound of a voice that he knew instinctively to be hers drifted in at the window.

"Oh, promise me
That some day, you and I,
Will take our love together to some sky."

He threw down his pencil and leaned back to listen. There was such a world of yearning pathos in the voice that he could feel a lump coming into his own throat.

The clear, sweet notes thrilled out and were lost in the rustles of the trees without. He moved to the window as if drawn by a loadstone. She sat at the rear of the house in a cheery patch of sunlight beneath the empty clothes lines. A garment, soft, silky and brightly Oriental enveloped her form with clinging folds.

Upon her head, perched a broad-brimmed hat from which the crown was missing. Through this opening her hair was drawn and arranged so that it fell and rippled about her neck and shoulders like the waters of a golden fountain. This time the professor shivered.

"Poor little girl," he murmured, "who knows what may have brought this all about!"

He made no attempt to resume his work. His castle was in ruins. The maid rapped the third time at the door before she was bidden to enter. The letter which he received from her maid he tore open indifferently.

"If it isn't a letter from Jack Weatherson," he exclaimed with pleasure. The letter ran:

"My Dear Old Chap,—You see that I am still alive and ready to come bobbing up serenely when there is anything to bo! for; otherwise you will agree with me that it is a vital waste of energy.

"Sis—in other and more formal parlance, my esteemed sister, Miss Irene Elizabeth Wetherson—is in Boston attending the Conservatory of Music, and she writes me that she is horribly lonesome. Something struck me as strangely familiar about her address, and upon looking up your six months old letter, I see that she is next door to you.

"She misses her outdoor sports fearfully and has plunged into physical culture or some fool thing of that kind as a substitute.

"Call on her, old fellow. Go the first time for my sake. Possibly the next time you will go for your own—and God bless you, my children.

"Yours fraternally,

"JACK."

A great light was dawning upon the mind of Professor Stanhope.

"So that is physical culture; well, I'll be jiggered!" he declared with shocking disregard of his own teachings upon slang. "And doubtless the Oriental court in the back yard was a special session of beauty culture. I guess, Hamilton, my boy, you are losing touch with the present and becoming as rusty as the past itself. Possibly I'd beter stop scorning present-day affairs and furbish up my wits a bit as to feminine concerns, at least. Maybe I can interest her, bless her heart, in archaeology. Well, here's for a try."

And tossing the family tree into the fireplace, he tucked Jack's letter into his pocket and started downstairs to call upon the Girl Next Door.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Rev. C. E. Cragg preached the first of a series of sermons on the Book of Revelations last evening to a large congregation, in the Mark street Methodist church. The sermon was full of interest and was appreciated by the congregation.

When The Food Ferments

Chronic dyspepsia is essentially a disease of the intestines rather than of the stomach. The trouble is caused by the food passing too slowly along the alimentary canal and fermenting instead of being digested.

It will be found that the liver is sluggish and the bowels constipated. The fermenting food gives rise to gas, which crowds the lungs and heart, gives rise to belching wind and to smothering sensations. The stomach gets sour, the food repeats and leaves a sour taste in the mouth; you feel out of sorts and are unfit for work or pleasure.

By using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you can get rid of this congested condition of the digestive organs in quick time. The liver is awakened at once, the bowels are regulated and the system is thoroughly rid of the poisonous waste matter which has been causing so much trouble.

TIME FOR FACTS

Evidently a very healthy spirit of rivalry is growing up between Vancouver and Prince Rupert, its ambitious young rival, as Pacific ports. "Why can't the truth be told about Prince Rupert's climate?" plaintively inquiries the "Weekly Empire" of that place. "If ever a city was maligned, misrepresented and unfairly criticized from the standpoint of weather, that city is Prince Rupert.

"It's about time facts were told. It's time that people were made aware that here is a city where the mellow richness of Indian Summer lingers till after midwinter and where the summer months are unsurpassed for beauty and salubriousness.

"Down in Vancouver it's a favourite and miserable sort of a jest to advise travellers to Prince Rupert to be sure and take their mackintoshes and rubbers. A thread-bare and hollow joke. The other way round would be more appropriate."

DONATION ACKNOWLEDGED.

The Examiner has been requested by Mr. R. Dunbar, secretary-treasurer of the National Sanitarium Association, to acknowledge through this paper the receipt of a contribution of $10 from a friend in Peterborough to the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives.

As the donor did not give any name they are unable to make acknowledgment direct.

A Comprehensive Assemblage of Authoritative Millinery Creations

Now on Special Display in our Millinery Salon on the Second Floor.

EXTENSIVE VARIETY is the dominant feature of the exquisite Millinery now being shown in our Second Floor Department. And truly a beautiful picture it presents revealing as it does a wealth of brilliant colour harmony and an exclusive range of new, attractive shapes.

Here are assembled the favoured creations of Paris and New York and our own workrooms contribute their most generous share to the completeness of this comprehensive display.

The Millinery of the present season being copied from three distinct periods—Francis I., Louis XVI. and the Directoire—afford the millinery artist unlimited possibilities in the production of Hats that are wonderfully becoming and will enhance the beauty of each particular face.

Prominently exploited one will find a great showing of "black and white" combinations which promise to be exceedingly popular. The "American Beauty" shades varying from pale pink to deep red are in good position, as are the new Paris tans and leather tans and the staple shades of blue and green. Shot or changeable effects in straws, flowers, ribbons and silks are being employed to an unlimited degree.

With Easter less than three weeks away—the Millinery Opening over—and the style tendencies for the season established, would it not be wise to Choose Now, thereby getting the "first pick" and escaping the late Easter rush.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

"NO life can be pure in its purpose, and strong in its strife, and all life not be purer and stronger thereby.

—Owen Meredith.

In a sermon which I heard the other day, I was much impressed by one thought. The minister said — I quote from memory, so you may ascribe any roughness of phrasing to me, rather than to him — "We are all anxious to be something or do something big ourselves. Perhaps it is not included in the scheme of things that we should, but it may be that, instead, the Lord means to let us say or do some little thing that shall help or inspire someone else to great things."

Almost every one of us in his early youth confidently expects to astonish the world in some way. He may have some talent which he secretly rates as great genius, and may expect to accomplish wonders with it. Or he may not have any such definite notion of the exact direction his wonderful career is to take. But of two things almost every youth is certain — that he is a little different from other people, and that he is going to be great in some way. As he grows older, and begins to deal with the iron of realities, instead of with the phantom stuff of which dreams are made, he begins to have vague, unpleasant suspicions that there is a chance that he may be mistaken in this high rating of himself. These doubts grow more and more common until some day, some day when the vision splendid has begun to fade into the light of common day, he must definitely face the realization that he is just of common clay after all, that he will do well if he holds his own and keeps his family in comfort and that there is no likelihood that he will ever astonish the world.

After the splendid hopes and beliefs of youth, this is indeed a grey outlook, but it need not be such a depressing one if we will but let in the sunshine of the minister's thought. We cannot be great ourselves, but who knows but we may do or say something — all unwittingly perhaps — which shall inspire or bring out, or help on greatness in others?

Charles Spurgeon was a wonderful preacher with a great influence on many lives. He tells us that the desire to be something worth while was aroused in him by a sermon which he heard from a country minister. So a share in Charles Spurgeon's greatness belongs to that obscure country minister.

Into every great man or woman's life there enter innumerable influences and inspirations which help to make them what they are. Is not each personality which contributed towards the great end, a silent partner in the importance and value of the successful man or woman's life?

It may be as a mother or sister, as a brother or father or friend, it may be as a teacher or preacher, it may be as an example of the honesty and dignity possible in business life, it may be in any one of a thousand ways that you are influencing or inspiring some other life which is to have large meaning for the world.

Is it not a sunshiny thought that even if you cannot be great yourself, the Lord gives you the opportunity by doing your corner of the world's work to the best of your ability and being the best kind of a man or woman you know how "to say or do some thing that shall inspire someone else to great things"?

We Stand Alone

The Made-In-Peterborough Exhibition Is To Open On The King's Birthday

The "Made-in-Peterborough" Exhibition to be held under the auspices of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Peterborough Health Association will burst forth in all its splendour on the 3rd of June, the 47th birthday of our beloved sovereign King George V., and will last the entire week.

Owing to the great coal strike in England King George and Queen Mary have indefinitely postponed their trip to the colonies, so it will be impossible to secure them for the opening ceremonies, but it may please his most gracious majesty to send his illustrious uncle the Duke of Connaught to press the button and incidentally draw a crowd.

Be that as it may, the opening week of June was a most happy choice. It is the lull between seeding time and the holiday season. The farmer has completed his spring work, and if one hundred and one things have not happened to stunt the growth of his grain he is happy, and when he is happy everyone else is happy. In fact, June is the month when everyone is in love with everybody else,—when the young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love.

By this selection of a date the ladies of the Auxiliary have shown themselves to be keen students of human nature for there is no time of the year when the hearts of men and women can be so easily moved to deeds of charity for the amelioration of suffering among their unfortunate brethren.

The purpose of the undertaking is to provide funds for the engagement of a District Nurse, whose duty will be to superintend the nursing or treatment of all cases of tuberculosis among the poor of the city, and the purchase of medicines, food and clothing for those who are not able to buy them.

It is true we have Sanatoria in Ontario for tubercular patients, but they are few and far between, and in most cases only those who are fortunate enough in having a long pocketbook can afford to attend these institutions. I fancy I hear someone say: "Is there not a free hospital at Gravenhurst?" Let me inform you that it is not as free as its name would indicate. I grant you that they claim in their advertisements that "not one single applicant has been refused admission because of his or her poverty." That statement may be true to the letter, but it is not true in spirit. They do not tell you how long some "poor" patients have to wait. As long as they can fill the "San." with patients who can pay it is quite an easy matter to put applicants off owing to lack of room.

It is for these poor unfortunates who have to wait possibly till it is too late that the women of Peterborough are expending so much energy and sacrificing so much time.

When we realize that consumption causes the death of one Canadian citizen every hour during the day, and one every half hour during the night, and at an age when they are most useful to their families and the community, it is a most serious state of affairs; but when we further know that it is within our power to lessen this mortality at once by united action, and eventually to stop it, we cannot be otherwise than distressed at the suggestion that anyone refuses to take his or her stand in rendering such assistance as is reasonably within their power.

To provide the money for this great work the women of our city have decided to hold a "Made-in-Peterborough" Exhibition in the Armouries. The floor space will be divided off into booths arranged around the walls where the manufacturers will display their wares.

These booths will be constructed in such a manner that a most elaborate scheme of decoration may be carried out, which will present a magnificent vista from any part of the arena.

The corners of the building will be made into four large booths to represent the four seasons.

In the "Spring" both fancy work, the result of the ladies' efforts during the long winter, will be much in evidence, among a profusion of apple blossoms and spring flowers.

The "Summer" booth will be headquarters for ice cream, cool drinks, home-made candies and cakes, flowers will abound and the costumes of the young ladies in attendance will be in keeping with the season they represent.

In the "Autumn" booth afternoon teas will be served, and in the evening hot coffee and good home-made dainties will be dispensed.

The "Winter" booth will be resplendent in Christmas decorations, and High Tea will be served every evening. The ladies in charge of this booth will also have charge of the theatre, which will run a continuous performance to be given entirely by local talent.

The days will be spent in sightseeing, but the nights will be given over to merrymaking. These festive occasions will be ushered in each evening by a grand promenade, in costume, all the ladies and attendants of the various booths taking part in a magnificent spectacular grand march to the martial music of the City Band.

An automobile annex will be a special feature of the Exhibition, which will give all those afflicted with the "motor-bug" an opportunity of feasting their eyes.

Nor are the children to be forgotten, for, almost in the centre of the show there will be a Fairy Castle filled with dolls of every size and nationality. This will form the children's paradise.

Lastly, but most important of all, will be the "happy hunting ground" of the bargain hunter—the Rummage Sale. Here things will be slaughtered off at ridiculously low prices, low enough to suit the tastes of all.

"For those who are early are happy.
They may struggle and call for their size,
But if they look sharp and keep busy
They may yet come away with the prize.
And they never will fuss about money,
But just for the joy of the game,
They will wait at the door, then scramble
With a mob which is doing the same."

All these special features are put on as drawing cards, pulling the people in, primarily to see the exhibits of our manufacturers; for after all, this is the chief factor to be reckoned with since they are responding so nobly to the call of the ladies. If all the other citizens do as well accordingly as the manufacturers, the success of the undertaking is assured. It will not only prove a splendid advertisement for them but will be the means of producing a more efficient class of employees, for the indirect result of the Exhibition will be a general uplift of the health of the community, enabling each employee to give a better day's work, thus increasing the output at a diminished cost. In addition, it will create an esprit de corps among the workers when they discover that their firm is taking such a magnanimous part in such a popular movement.

A number of the local Clubs and societies will seek to have conventions of their orders here during this first week in June, which will make it a memorable occasion for the citizens of Peterborough converting it into a veritable "Old Home" week.

We understand the Canadian Baseball League will arrange their schedule so that the entire week will be given over to the "roaring game" when the local "fans" will be able to tickle their fancy.

There will be an opportunity for every citizen to take part in helping along the good cause, and some of these opportunities will be pointed out in future articles.

ECZEMA ON THE HEAD

Mr. Peterson, South Bay, Ont., writes: "For years I suffered a sort of eczema on the head. I tried four different doctors, giving each a fair trial, but the disease grew worse and spread to my arm. I got Dr. Chase's Ointment, and it has entirely cured me. I give you my name because I want other sufferers to know about this splendid Ointment."

CONSERVATION PROPOSAL FOR LINDSAY.

Will Send Delegation to Look After Town's Interests.

Mr. Walter Reesor of the Light, Heat & Power Co., is in receipt of a letter from Mr. W. Munro, secretary of the Central Water Conservation which met recently in Peterborough.

Mr. Munro asked Mr. Reesor to furnish Mr. Munro with a list of names of local citizens directly interested in the project.

This will be entirely satisfactory in so far as this town is concerned, and the local delegation can be depended upon to look carefully after our interests.—Lindsay Post.

Sections Of The City Bill That Will Be Presented On Thursday

The city's bill, which will be presented in the Legislature on Thursday, is an amendment to the Acts respecting the city's power to expropriate the plant and appliances of firms engaged in supplying light, heat and power for sale within the County. There is only one clause with the following sections:

Notwithstanding anything contained in any general or special Act of this Legislature or in any by-law or agreement hertefore passed or entered into, the Corporation of the City of Peterborough may, without the consent of the owner or owners thereof or persons interested therein, enter upon, acquire, take possession of, expropriate and use any lands, waters, water privileges, water powers, property, erections, machinery, works, plant and appliances within the County of Peterborough, suitable for or acquired, held or used for or in the generation, transmission, supply, delivery, or distribution of electrical power or energy or owned, leased or otherwise held by any person, firm or corporation engaged in the business of developing, generating, supplying or distributing electrical power or energy for light, heat or power purposes, paying for what is acquired or taken possession of such sum as may be agreed on, or in default of agreement, as may be determined by arbitration in accordance with the provisions of The Consolidated Municipal Act, 1903, and amendments thereto.

Nothing for Franchise.

Where in any contract heretofore entered into between the Corporation and a company, the company has agreed that should the Corporation thereafter purchase or take proceedings to acquire the works and property of the company, or any part thereof that in determining the price to be paid therefor either by arbitration or otherwise, nothing should be taken into account or allowed to the company for prospective profits or because of the granting to or enjoyment by the company of the rights or any of the rights granted by the agreement, then upon proceedings being taken under this Act to acquire the works and property of such company or any part thereof, the amount payable by the Corporation for such works and property, or any part thereof, to be acquired under this Act shall be determined according to the terms of such agreement, and the Company shall be bound thereby.

The powers conferred by this section shall not be exercised by the said Corporation except under a By-law or agreement which, before being finally passed or entered into, has been submitted to and has received the approval of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario.

PRESENTATION TO MRS. PRUST

One of the most pleasing features of the Grenfell Agricultural Society banquet on Thursday evening was the presentation to Mrs. (Dr.) Prust, of a handsome set of silver tea and dessert spoons, each engraved with the word "Grenfell." The presentation was made on behalf of the society by his Honour the Lieutenant Governor, who referred to her valuable services as organist and musical director at the various social functions held during the past four years by the society and also to the high esteem in which she is held by the community.

Mrs. Prust, who is leaving to take up her residence in the near future, in Edmonton, expressed her surprise and gratitude in a few well chosen words, which were greeted with enthusiastic applause.—Regina Leader.

Mrs. Prust was formerly Miss Vina Belleghem of this city.

ESTIMATES ARE LESS

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, MARCH 18.—Hon. Winston Churchill, the first Lord of the Admiralty introduced the naval estimates in the Commons this afternoon, calling for twenty-two million dollars, or a million and a half less than last year. In connection with this introduction Churchill gave a hint to Germany that Britain would only retard or augment its naval construction as Germany did. Churchill said he didn't think the two to one standard was necessary any more. He proposed sixty per cent. superiority over Germany in battleships and cruisers.

BOURASSA IN TORONTO.

He Tells Irishmen Quebec Will Not Stand Any Humiliation.

Toronto, March 19.—References to the Keewatin school question and the action of the Borden Government roused Henri Bourassa to enthusiasm at the St. Patrick's Day assembly of the A.O.H. in Massey Hall last night, and his voice was husky with emotion as he described how the educational systems of the provinces were to be conducted by the provinces, after the solemn pledge of the crown had been given and ratified by an act of Parliament that the rights of the minority were to be preserved in every province of the Dominion.

"Gentlemen of Toronto," he pleaded, "I appeal to your straightforwardness and manliness to say that a solemn compact made by the Parliament of Canada should be preserved. (Applause.)

"Would you call those schools 'national' in which the minority are imposed upon by the majority — when those so-called schools deprives your children of what may be called their birthright."

From Mr. Bourassa's description of it, the so-called alarming reference of a leading Toronto daily to the effect that there are 157 schools in Ontario in which the French language alone is used on the playgrounds, was worthy of ridicule.

"Why, in that obscure, barbarous and mediaeval Province of Quebec," said he, "we learn to speak in both languages. We are very antiquated, I know, but I tell you frankly we are going to remain that way." At this stage of his discourse, Mr. Bourassa waxed particularly eloquent.

"I like to speak," said he, "in the language of the majority of the people of this country. I like to imbibe the great literature of the English language and read what the great British statesmen have said, but I also want to tell the majority of the people of Canada in their own language that neither I nor my race will stand for any humiliating treatment in the Dominion of Canada." (Applause.)

ADMIRALTY WANTS NAVAL AID FROM THE DOMINIONS

Sir Gilbert Parker Asked If Canadian Government Had Divulged Plans for Aid of the Empire.

A HOLIDAY SUGGESTED

London, March 9.—Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, yesterday introduced the naval estimates for the coming year in the House of Commons. The appropriations called for amount to $239,627,000, a decrease of $1,535,000 from the amount spent last year.

The First Lord accompanied the introduction with a straight talk to Germany, promising an augmentation or a retardation of British naval construction to correspond with Germany's naval program.

He said, he regretted the necessity of referring specifically to Germany, but continued:

"The Germans are a people of robust minds, whose strong masculine good sense and high courage do not recoil from, and are not offended by plain, blunt statements of fact, if they are expressed with courtesy and sincerity."

Mr. Churchill then went on to tell of the conditions under which naval competition would be carried on during the next few years.

He prefaced his remarks by the statement that the "two to one" standard was not necessary at present, although it would possibly become so.

"The 'two-power standard' has been extended by some of its supporters," continued Mr. Churchill, "to include the United States and by this means it has lost both good sense and reality."

The First Lord laid down a 60 per cent. superiority in battleships and battle cruisers of the Dreadnought type, as compared with the German navy, as a convenient basis for the next four or five years. He pointed out that Great Britain at present possessed an enormous superiority in pre-Dreadnought vessels, but as these established fighting value, the British action of new construction would have to rise above the 60 per cent. standards.

Mr. Churchill said that it would be necessary for Great Britain to construct four and three Dreadnoughts every year alternately for the next six years.

The First Lord continued: "This is our position, that the Germans will not be gainers in naval power by any increases they may make and will not be losers from the basis I have laid down by any diminutions.

"Here is a perfectly plain plan and arrangement by which, without diplomatic negotiations, without bargaining, without the slightest restriction of the sovereign freedom of either power, this keen and costly naval rivalry can at any time be abated."

During the discussion of the navy estimates last night Sir Gilbert Parker said he regretted the First Lord had omitted to take notice of one aspect of the naval policy. This was the co-operation of overseas dominions, and he invited the right hon. gentleman to say whether the Government had any further information as to the intended policy of the Prime Minister of Canada and his Government with respect to the imperial naval policy. It was because the dominions thought their efforts were despised that they hadn't co-operated in a more effective, substantial form.

Norton Griffiths said there was undoubtedly a belief in distant parts of the Empire that their co-operation was looked upon as of small consequence, and he hoped the First Lord would make some precise, clear statement that the Admiralty did welcome the co-operation of the dominions. It was a cry often heard in Canada that if co-operations of the Dominion was desired they should have some representation.

Canadian Ministers were shortly expected in the country and he urged they should be sent back with a message to assure Canadians that the Admiralty wanted their co-operation and would give them some representation. Such a message would make their work much easier.

Asks The Government To Decide A Naval Policy

Naval Estimates an Endorsement of the Laurier Policy-- Pelletier's Pre-election Statements Assailed

LIBERALS CRITICIZE DELAY

Ottawa, March 19.—Fireworks of superheated oratory flashed across the Commons chamber yesterday afternoon and evening when the naval estimates were under discussion. It was largely a duel between Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux and Hon. L. P. Pelletier. The ex-Postmaster-General made a determined attack on his successor in office on his alleged anti-naval campaign in Quebec.

Hon. L. P. Pelletier denied absolutely the insinuation. He had never declared there would be no naval policy. He was opposed, however, to the Laurier navy, which would be of no effective fighting value.

The debate at times got out of hand, shouts, threats and jeers were hurled across the floor of the House and the members sailed as close to the wind of Parliamentary language as was convenient.

Hon. J. D. Hazen used an expression which might perhaps be regarded as significant when he declared that the navy should not be subjected to a divided control which would destroy its efficiency in action.

The House passed the Quebec and Ontario boundary resolutions and the bill founded on them were introduced and read a first time.

When the House went into supply on the naval estimates, Hon. J. D. Hazen explained that the item of $1,000,000 asked for was based on the idea of maintaining the present naval establishment, without adding new ships of equipment, pending consultation with the Admiralty and the formulation of a complete naval policy.

Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux declared that he was surprised to see such a large amount of money appropriated for the maintenance of the Laurier naval policy. Each and every one of the Quebec Ministers in their constituencies had given their solemn promises that, as soon as the new Government came into power, every sign, every vestige of the naval service would disappear, that the Laurier policy was suicidal.

"Is it not time?" asked Mr. Lemieux, "to know distinctly whether Canada will do something or not. Let not my hon. friend be afraid. In the Province of Quebec he will find a majority of His Majesty's loyal Canadian subjects ready to stand by the policy of a Canadian navy."

Another Lesson

From

J. W. BRYANT Optometrist

YOU are a parent. Your child is in school a certain number of hours each day, using the eyes constantly. Each year the lessons become harder, books are taken home, studies are continued in the evening, the eyes are being overtaxed, the delicate muscles are strained; yet perhaps no thought is given to helping the eyes. We know that injury results from this neglect. We must realize that, if there is a cause for eye strain, there must be a remedy; the remedy most naturally would be rest for the eyes; this rest can be obtained by wearing resting Glasses. Come and let me explain to you scientifically why resting Glasses should be worn.

We believe that parents are wise in caring for their Children's eyes, the remedy is simple and the cost is slight.

The Peterborough Optical Institute

MARKET BUILDING

Hon. L. P. Pelletier declared that Mr. Lemieux was not stating facts as they were. He challenged him to name one occasion on which he had declared himself opposed to a naval policy.

Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux declared that the Postmaster-General had made a speech at Lorette when he was elected by acclamation, in which he had declared for the repeal of the Laurier naval policy.

"I said then and I say now that I am opposed to the Laurier naval policy," replied Hon. Mr. Pelletier. "The leader of the Government made in the debate on the address statements perfectly satisfactory to us and the Province of Quebec."

"Weeping, incendiary speeches," declared Hon. Mr. Lemieux, "were delivered by the Postmaster-General, the Minister of Inland Revenue and the Minister of Public Works, and, despite this, we have a majority in Quebec. If the Minister of Marine and Fisheries comes back from England with a sane imperial policy, he will have my support, despite the firebrands that I see opposite."

"The hon. gentleman sees fit to throw mud," exclaimed Hon. Mr. Pelletier.

This caused a scene of disorder which lasted some minutes, countercries of "take it back," being hurled across the floor of the House.

"I am not afraid to place my stand," said Hon. Mr. Pelletier, "beside that of the hon. member for Rouville (Lemieux), who, in 1899, said in a letter that he was absolutely opposed to helping England in her wars." (Shouts of "read it.")

"I am sorry I have not the letter here," said Hon. Mr. Pelletier, "but if some one will fill in the gap I will go and get it," and he went, cheers accompanying his exit.

Hon. Wm. Pugsley had hardly got started on the task of gap filling when the Postmaster-General returned with a big stack of copies of the letter, which he proceeded to read.

"Who is it addressed to?" he commented, "Henri Bourassa, my dear colleague."

"I want a copy," called out Hon. Mr. Lemieux. "Give him two or three, one for his leader," said Hon. Mr. Pelletier, to the page, to the great merriment of the House.

The point of the letter was an expression of sympathy with Mr. Bourassa in his protest against the naval resolution of the congress of Chambers of Commerce, and quoting Sir Wilfrid Laurier in opposition to Canada being plunged into the "vortex of militarism."

"To those people who rise in their seats in this House and call us arch-traitors, because of what some people have said," declared Hon. Mr. Pelletier, "I would say that we have gone as far as they have."

Hon. Mr. Lemieux declared that he stood by his letter. The principle at issue was that of a direct contribution to the British Exchequer versus Canadian navy. He had never been against helping the Mother Country, but certain persons in England and in Canada wished to drop us into militarism. To his friend opposite he said: "Let them bring a bold and Canadian policy and it will have the support, not only of their friends, but of the Liberals and especially of the French-Canadians of Quebec."

Sir Wilfrid Laurier declared that the Postmaster-General knew well that the bogey of conscription was paraded in Quebec. "Nothing will be better for the peace of the world," he added, "than to have from his lips and those of his associates the declaration that Canada owes something to Great Britain."

UNDERGROUND WIRES BILL

Was Attacked by Leaders in the Legislature—Too Drastic the Premier Said

$400,000 FOR MUSEUM

Toronto, March 19.—Not a gentle slap on the wrist, but a real healthy swat on the solar plexus did Geo. H. Gooderham's bill, embodying twelve clauses to amend the Municipal Act, receive when it came up for its second reading. After Hon. W. J. Hanna and Sir James Whitney had taken many biffs at it, the bill was sent to the municipal committee, where, by the looks of things, it may be still more rumbled.

Hon. Mr. Hanna considered that clause three was extraordinary. This clause aimed at street railways, telegraph and telephone companies, compelling them to remove all poles and wires from the streets and placing the wires underground.

"I scarcely expect to see this passed in the committee," said Mr. Hanna. "It should not be given much consideration, and, besides, there is another bill now before the House in which these matters will be taken care of."

Number nine clause, thought the Provincial Secretary, was decidedly far-reaching. It was worded this wise: "For preventing, regulating and controlling the location and erection, within cities having 100,000 or over, of garages, apartment houses, tenement houses, or any buildings designed or intended for any purpose other than that of a dwelling for one private family, and alterations of any existing building for any purpose other than that of a dwelling for one private family."

"This practically means, if the bill goes through, that a private family can't have a boarder," said Mr. Hanna. "Rather drastic, I believe. It would be pretty hard on some people."

Clause twelve gave a city with over 100,000 population, meaning Toronto, only, full power to designate the width of any street. The present act required a width of 66 feet. This, too, was pretty far-reaching, thought Mr. Hanna.

When the Provincial Secretary had concluded his onslaught, Sir James Whitney took up the attack. Mr. Gooderham's bill, said the Premier, might pit one city against another. Toronto would be the only city affected by such legislation, as it was the only one with 100,000 inhabitants. Regarding the clause to compel the placing underground of all wires, he said: "If this legislation is allowed to pass, we might as well give up all pretence of private rights and the protection of private property in this country. I am sure there will be no voice in support of it."

One clause which miraculously passed muster in the South Toronto member's bill was that relating to the erection of spite fences, of which Toronto residents have suffered considerably.

W. D. McPherson's bill respecting town planning, was sent to the municipal committee in company with a bill on the same subject introduced by Mr. Ellis of Ottawa West, and they will be revised.

Interprovincial registration in medicine throughout the Dominion is proposed by an amendment introduced by Dr. Jamieson, South Grey, to amend the Medical Act. The new amendments are to bring into force the Reddick bill, which means "reciprocity" in medicine between the provinces.

Another amendment introduced by Dr. Jamieson is to place such restrictions and conditions on the practice of osteopathy as seem desirable to the medical council. The osteopaths have been clamoring for recognition and for the legalizing of their profession. The amendments proposed will grant their requests, but under such conditions as will compel them to spend some years in study and pass such examinations as will place them on a much higher plane than at present.

To provide $400,000 for the erection of a provincial museum was the substance of a bill introduced by Hon. Dr. Pyne and given its second reading. The Minister of Education said that a museum had got to be a necessity because of material being scattered in different places throughout the city, with no proper accommodation. An institution of the sort would also be a great educational asset. The University of Toronto would provide the site and the rest of the cost would be split up between the university and the Government.

Jap Sailor Is Shot.

Swatow, China, March 19.—A detachment of marines from the United States monitor Monterey was landed here yesterday in consequence of the continuous disturbances all over the city.

Heavy fighting between the Kakka tribesmen and the troops from Canton went on for eight hours yesterday in the streets of the city. Forty natives are known to have been killed. A shot from one of the combatants, who were firing wildly, killed a bluejacket on board a Japanese warship in the harbor.

OTTUMWA WOMAN CURED

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Ottumwa, Iowa.—"For years I was almost a constant sufferer from female trouble in all its dreadful forms; shooting pains all over my body, sick headache, spinal weakness, dizziness, depression, and everything that was horrid. I tried many doctors in different parts of the United States, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done more for me than all the doctors. I feel it my duty to tell you these facts. My heart is full of gratitude to you for my cure."—Mrs. HARRIET E. WAMPLER, 424 S. Ransom Street, Ottumwa, Iowa.

Consider This Advice.

No woman should submit to a surgical operation, which may mean death, until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial.

This famous medicine, made only from roots and herbs, has for thirty years proved to be the most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism. Women residing in almost every city and town in the United States bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. Her advice is free, confidential, and always helpful.

"INITIALS ONLY"

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

At first, the cadence and full music of the tones conveyed nothing to our far from literary detective. The victim of his secret machinarions was expressing himself in words, words; that was the point which counted with him. But as he listened longer and gradually took in the sense of these words, his heart went down lower and lower till it reached his boots. His inscrutable and ever disappointing neighbour was not indulging in self-communings of any kind. He was reciting poetry, and what was worse, poetry which he only half remembered and was trying to recall—an incredible occupation for a man weighted with a criminal secret.

Sweetwater was disgusted, and was withdrawing in high indignation from his vantage point when something occurred of a startling enough nature to hold him where he was in almost breathless expectation.

The hole which in the darkness of the closet was always faintly visible, even when the light was not very strong in the adjoining room, had suddenly become a bright and shining loophole, with a suggestion of movement in the space beyond. The book which had hid this hole on Brotherson's side had been taken down—the one book in all those hundreds whose removal threatened Sweetwater's schemes, if not himself.

For an instant the thwarted detective listened for the angry shout or the smothered oath which would naturally follow the discovery by Brotherson of this attempted interference with his privacy.

But all was still on his side of the wall. A rustling of leaves could be heard, as the inventor searched for the poem he wanted, but nothing more. In withdrawing the book, he had failed to notice the hole in the plaster back of it. But he could hardly fail to see it when he came to put the book back. Meantime, suspense for Sweetwater.

It was several minutes before he heard Mr. Brotherson's voice again, then it was in triumphant repetition of the lines which had escaped his memory. They were great words surely, and Sweetwater never forgot them, but the impression which they made upon his mind, an impression so forcible that he was able to repeat them, months afterward to Mr. Gryce did not prevent him from noting the tone in which they were uttered, nor the thud which followed as the book was thrown upon the floor.

"Fool!" The word rang out in bitter irony from his irate neighbour's lips. "What does he know of woman! Woman! Let him court a rich one and see—but that's all over and done with. No more harping on that string, and no more reading of poetry. I'll never——" The rest was lost in his throat and was quite unintelligible to the anxious listener.

Self-revealing words, which an instant before would have aroused Sweetwater's deepest interest! But they had suddenly lost all force for the unhappy listener. The sight of that hole still shining brightly before his eyes had distracted his thoughts and roused his liveliest apprehensions. If that book should be allowed to lie where it had fallen, then he was in for a period of uncertainty he shrank from contemplating. Any moment his neighbour might look up and catch sight of this hole bored in the backing of the shelves before him. Could the man who had been guilty of submitting him to this outrage stand the strain of waiting indefinitely for the moment of discovery? He doubted it, if the suspense lasted too long.

Shifting his position, he placed his eye where his ear had been. He could see very little. The space before him, limited as it was to the width of the one volume withdrawn, precluded his seeing aught but what lay directly before him. Happily, it was in this narrow line of vision that Mr. Brotherson stood. He had resumed work upon his model and was so placed that while his face was not visible, his hands were, and as Sweetwater watched these hands and noticed the delicacy of their manipulation, he was enough of a workman to realise that work so fine called for an undivided attention. He need not fear the gaze shifting, while those hands moved as warily as they did now.

Relieved for the moment, he left his post and, sitting down on the edge of his cot, gave himself up to thought.

He deserved this mischance. Had he profited properly by Mr. Gryce's teachings, he would not have been caught like this; he would have calculated not upon the nine hundred and ninety-nine chances of that book being left alone, but upon the thousandth one of its being the very one to be singled out and removed. Had he done this—had he taken pains to roughen and discolour the opening he had made, that it would look like an ancient rat hole instead of showing a clean bore, he would have some answer to give Brotherson when he came to question him in regard to it. But now the whole thing seemed up! He had shown himself a fool and by good rights ought to acknowledge his defeat and return to Headquarters. But he had too much spirit for that. He would rather—yes, rather face the pistol he had once seen in his enemy's hand. Ye it was hard to sit here waiting, waiting——

Suddenly he started upright. He would go meet his fate—be present in the room itself when the discovery was made which threatened to upset all his plans. He was not ashamed of his calling, and Brotherson would think twice before attacking him when once convinced that he had the Department behind him.

"Excuse me, comrade," were the words with which he endeavoured to account for his presence at Brotherson's door. "My lamp smells so, and I've made a mess of my work to-day that I've just stepped in for a chat. If I'm not wanted, say so. I don't want to bother you ,but you do look pleasant here. I hope the thing I'm turning over in my head—every man has his schemes for making a fortune, you know—will be a success some day. I'd like a big room like his, and a lot of books, and—and pictures."

Craning his neck, he took a peep at the shelves, with an air of open admiration which effectually concealed his real purpose. What he wanted was to catch one glimpse of that empty space from his present standpoint, and he was both astonished and relieved to note how narrow and inconspicuous it looked. Certainly he had less to fear than he supposed, and when, upon Mr. Brotherson's invitation he stepped into the room it was with a dash of his former audacity, which gave him, unfortunately, perhaps, a quick, strong and unexpected likeness to his old self.

But if Brotherson noticed this, nothing in his manner gave proof of the fact. Though usually averse to visitors, especially when employed as at present on his precious model, he quite warmed towards his unexpected guest, and even led the way to where it stood uncovered on the table.

"You find me at work," he remarked. "I don't suppose you understand any but your own?"

"If you mean to ask if I understand what you're trying to do there, I'm free to say that I don't. I couldn't tell now, off-hand, whether it's an airship you're planning, a hydraulic machine, or—or—" He stopped, with a laugh, and turned towards the bookshelves. "Now here's what I like. These books just take my eye."

"Look at them, then. I like to see a man interested in books. Only, I thought if you knew how to handle wire, I would get you to hold this end while I work with the other."

"I guess I know enough for that," was Sweetwater's gay rejoinder. But when he felt that communicating wire in his hand and experienced for the first time the full influence of the other's eye, it took all his hardihood to hide the hypnotic thrill it gave him. Though he smiled and chatted, he could not help asking between whiles, what had killed the poor washerwoman across the court, and what had killed Miss Challoner. Something visible or something invisible? Something which gave warning of attack, or something which struck in silence. He found himself gazing long and earnestly at this man's hand, and wondering if death lay under it. It was a strong hand, a deft, clean-cut member, formed to respond to the slightest hint from the powerful brain controlling it. But was this its whole story? Had he said all when he had said this?

Fascinated by the question, Sweetwater died a hundred deaths in his awakened fancy, as he followed the sharp short instructions which fell with cool precision from the other's lips. A hundred deaths, I say, but with no betrayal of his folly. The anxiety he showed was that of one eager to please, which may explain why on the conclusion of his task, Mr. Brotherson gave him one of his infrequent smiles and remarked, as he buried the model under its cover, "You're handy and you're quiet at your job. Who knows but that I shall want you again. Will you come if I call you?"

"Won't I?" was the gay retort, as the detective thus released, stooped for the book still lying on the floor. "Paolo and Francesca," he read, from the back, as he laid it on the table. "Poetry?" he queried.

"Rot," scornfully returned the other, as he moved to take down a bottle and some glasses from a cupboard let into another portion of the wall.

Sweetwater taking advantage of the moment, sidled towards the shelf where that empty space still gaped with the tell tale hole at the back. He could easily have replaced the missing book before Mr. Brotherson turned. He was dealing with no absent-minded fool, and it behooved him to avoid above all things calling attention to the book or to the place on the shelf where it belonged.

But there was one thing he could do and did. Reaching out a finger as deft as Brotherson's own, he pushed a second volume into the place of the one that was gone. This veiled the auger-hole completely; a fact which so entirely relieved his mind that his old smile came back like sunshine to his lips, and it was only by a distinct effort that he kept the dancing humour from his eyes as he prepared to refuse the glass which Brotherson now brought forward:

"None of that!" he said. "You mustn't tempt me. The doctor has shut down on all kinds of spirits for two months more, at least. But don't let me hinder you. I can bear to smell the stuff. My turn will come again some day."

But Brotherson did not drink. Setting down the glass he carried, he took up the book lying near, weighed it in his hand, and laid it down again, with an air of thoughtful inquiry. Then he suddenly pushed it towards Sweetwater. "Do you want it?" he asked.

Sweetwater was too taken aback to answer immediately. This was a move he did not understand. Want it, me? What he wanted was to see it put back in its place on the shelf. Did Brotherson suspect this? The supposition was incredible; yet, who could read a mind so mysterious?

Sweetwater, debating the subject, decided that the risk of adding to any such possible suspicion was less to be dreaded than the continued threat offered by that unoccupied space so near the hole which testified so unmistakably of the means he had taken to spy upon this suspected man's privacy. So, after a moment of awkward silence, not out of keeping with the character he had assumed, he calmly refused the present as he had the glass.

Unhappily, he was not rewarded by seeing the despised volume resored to its shelf. It still lay where its owner had pushed it, when, with some awkwardly muttered thanks, the discomfited detective withdrew to his own room.

CHAPTER XVIII.
WHAT AM I TO DO NOW.

Early morning saw Sweetwater peering into the depths of his closet. The hole was hardly visible. This meant that the book he had pushed across it from the other side had not been removed.

Greatly re-assured by the sight, he awaited his opportunity, and as soon as a suitable one presented itself, prepared the hole for inspection by breaking away its edges and begrimming it well with plaster and old dirt. This done, he left matters to arrange themselves; which they did, after his manner.

Mr. Brotherson suddenly developed a great need of him, and it became a common thing for him to spend the half and, sometimes, the whole of the evening in the neighbouring room. This was just what he had worked for, and his constant intercourse with the man whose secret he sought to surprise should have borne fruit. But it did not. Nothing in the eager but painstaking inventor showed a distracted mind or a heavily-burdened soul. Indeed, he was so calm in all his ways, so precise and so self-contained, that Sweetwater often wondered what had become of the fiery agitator and eloquent propagandist of new and startling doctrines.

Then, he thought he understood the riddle. The model was reaching its completion, and Brotherson's extreme interest in it and the confidence he had in its success swallowed up all lesser emotions. Were the invention to prove a failure—but there was small hope of this. The man was of too well-poised a mind to over-estimate his work or miscalculate its place among modern improvements. Soon he would reach the goal of his desires, be praised, feted, made much of by the very people he now professedly scorned. There was no thoroughfare for Sweetwater here. Another road must be found; some secret, strange and unforeseen method of reaching a soul inaccessible to all ordinary or even extraordinary impressions.

Would a night of thought reveal such a method? Night! the very word brought inspiration . A man is not his full self at night. Secrets which, under the ordinary circumstances of everyday life, lie too deep for surprise, creep from their hiding-places in the dismal hours of universal quiet, and lips which are dumb to the most subtle of questioners break into strange and self-revealing mutterings when sleep lies heavy on ear and eye and the forces of life and death are released to play with the rudderless spirit.

It was in different words from these that Sweetwater reasoned, no doubt, but his conclusions were the same, and as he continued to brood over them, he saw a chance—a fool's chance ,possibly (but fools sometimes win where wise men fail) of reaching those depths he still believed in, notwithstanding his failure to sound them.

Addressing a letter to his friend in Twenty-ninth Street, he awaited reply in the shape of a small package he had ordered sent to the corner drug-store. When it came, he carried it home in a state of mingled hope and misgiving. Was he about to cap his fortnight of disappointment by another signal failure; and the matter by disclosing his hand; lose all, or win all by an experiment as daring and possibly as fanciful as were his continued suspicions of the seemingly upright and undoubtedly busy man?

He made no attempt to argue the question. The event called for the exercise of the most dogged elements in his character, and upon these he must rely. He would make the effort he contemplated, simply because he was minded to do so. That was all there was to it. But any one noting him well that night, would have seen that he ate little and consulted his watch continually. Sweetwater had not yet passed the line where work becomes routine and the feelings remain totally under control.

Brotherson was unusually active and alert that evening. He was anxious to fit one delicate bit of mechanism into another, and he was continually interrupted by visitors. Some big event was on in the socialistic world, and his presence was eagerly demanded by one brotherhood after another. Sweetwater, posted at his loophole, heard the arguments advanced by each separate spokesman, followed by Brotherson's unvarying reply—that when his work was done and he had proved his right to approach them with a message, they might look to hear from him again; but not before. His patience was inexhaustible, but he showed himself relieved when the hour grew too late for further interruptions. He began to whistle—a token that all was going well with him, and Sweetwater who had come to understand some of his moods, looked forward to an hour or two of continuous work on Brotherson's part and of dreary and impatient waiting on his own. But, as so many times before, he misread the man. Earlier than common—much earlier, in fact, Mr. Brotherson laid down his tools and gave himself up to a restless pacing of the floor. This was not usual with him. Nor did he often indulge himself in playing on the piano as he did to-night, beginning with a few heavenly strains and ending with a bang that made the keyboard jump. Certainly something was amiss in the quarter where peace had hitherto reigned undisturbed. Had the depths begun to heave, or were physical causes alone responsible for these unwonted ebullitions of feeling?

A POWERFUL AND EFFECTIVE CURE

For Catarrh, Bronchitis, Coughs, Colds, Asthma.

Soothing Balsams Are Carried to the Sore, Congested Membranes — Cure Quickly and Completely.

Diseases of the breathing organs are, as you know, excited by germs so minute that only the microscope can reveal them; they are lodged in the tissues, develop there, and cause all the trouble. That is how consumption starts.

If the cause of the disease can be carried by air, why not the remedy? This conclusion lies at the root of the Catarrhozone treatment. The instrument through which you breathe fragrant, healing Catarrhozone splits up into minute particles this invaluable healing and curative agent, thereby enabling the air to carry it to the remotest ramifications of the breathing organs, and diffuses itself over their entire surfaces.

CATARRHOZONE ALWAYS CURES.

It would be absolutely impossible to breathe through a Catarrhozone inhaler without carrying this liquid to the remotest parts of the breathing apparatus. Upon healthy tissue it has no action, but upon diseased tissue and upon the micro-organisms which infect diseased tissues its action is so wonderfully curative that the disease is completely abolished. Then the tissue heals.

EARLY TREATMENT IS WISE.

Catarrhozone is an ideal remedy for diseases of the throat, lungs, and nasal passages. If you have catarrh, or bronchitis, or asthma, all are equally curable by Catarrhozone. These diseases are all modifications of an inflammatory condition of the lining membranes of the throat and nasal passages. Under these conditions we call it catarrh. When it extends to the bronchial tubes, we call it bronchitis. The condition is the same, the causes which produce the diseases are identical, and the remedy, Catarrhozone, acts equally promptly and efficiently upon the different forms of this disease. Your case is curable. Get Catarrhozone to-day; two months' treatment (guaranteed) price $1; small size 50c. Sold by all dealers, or the Catarrhozone Company, Kingston, Ont.

The Elevator Ranks With The Indispensable Aids to Modern Business

BUSINESS was transacted without the typewriter, telephone or electric light for thousands of years. Until invention provided these conveniences, no one could realize how absolutely indispensable they would become.

Yet the business to-day that tried to get along without their aid would be a poor last in the race of competition. Many business men have yet to realize that good elevator equipment is as indispensable in the efficient management of the warehouse or factory as are typewriters and telephones in the general offices.

Otis Fensom Freight Elevators have have made themselves indispensable wherever they have been installed. They save labor—reduce the biggest single item of expense in any business, and at the same time remove sources of worry and vexation that otherwise would seriously impair the efficiency of an important department.

OTIS FENSOM FREIGHT ELEVATORS

It will be to your profit to realize now that in doing without good elevator service you have been doing without a really indispensable convenience.

Send me a copy of your book.

ISADORE DUNCAN CLASSIC DANCER

Time Has Robbed The Apostle of National Dancing of Neither Grace or Agility

Miss Isadore Duncan emerged from her retirement in Paris and appeared at a matinee, where she gave an exhibition of classic dancing. With advancing years the apostle of bare feet, or, as she would prefer to call it, natural dancing, seems to have put on weight. She is less sylph-like than some years ago, but time has robbed her of none of her grace or agility. Rodin has said of her: "She borrows from Nature that force which one does not call talent, but genius. She is simple, like the antique, and the synonym of beauty." Certainly her Terpsichorean triumphs owe nothing to her surroundings on the stage, for they are performed in a bare curtained space where the harmonious movements are accomplished to the sound of tuneful music. She was attired in floating draperies which trailed behind her as she moved in time with the soothing strains of Gluck's divine music. After a lively air she interpreted a slower composition, and when, with all the playful abandon of youth, she imitated the young girls of Chalcis playing ball, the audience was so captivated that she had to repeat the number. Another contribution that greatly pleased the spectators was Miss Duncan's representation of the joy with which the daughters of Chalcis hailed the approach of the Greek fleet, dancing for very happiness, and beckoning her companions to join her. That also she had to give a second time. One thing that impressed one as one watched the slim figure on the stage was that none of the movements were stereotyped or hackneyed. They seemed to be spontaneous, to spring from the natural emotions produced by the sentiments which animated her, and so pleasing were the effects she obtained that for the best part of two hours she kept her audience under the spell of her charm. The "Dance of the Scythes" was a lesson in the poetry of motion, and a couple of gavottes were danced in light and graceful fashion. Towards the end of the programme came a mad Bacchan measure, and at its close the theatre rang with shouts of "Bravo!" and "Bis!" The afternoon should have closed with three valses by Brahms, but the audience refused to let Miss Duncan go. Half a dozen immense tributes of lovely flowers were brought on to the stage, and it was only when she had given two more sprightly dances before these charming evidences of appreciation that she was allowed to retire.

OXO Cubes certainly do save the housewife a lot of work and worry—and money, too. Exact—convenient—indispensable in the kitchen.

EVICTED IN PARIS

Apparently Large Families Are Not Wanted by Landlords.

Paris was deeply interested and not a little indignant on reading the pathetic story of a family of eleven who could not find a roof to cover their heads within the walls of Paris. "Too many children," was the common answer given to the head of this family by all the landlords he questioned, not one of whom would accept him as a tenant. As a last resource the man had to fall back on the charity of a well-known philanthropist. M. Unland, the father of eight sons and one daughter is a day laborer. His wife earns about 50 cents a week by her sewing. The eldest child is eighteen; the youngest is not yet two years old. The Unland family has lived, for several years in one of the populous quarters of eastern Paris, and their landlord has never had to complain of any delay in the payment of their rent. Nevertheless, on account of the number of children, he refused to sign a renewal of their lease.

For a month the man and his wife sought right and left for a new apartment. Everywhere they met with the same refusal, and at last, when the order came for eviction, they were without any prospective dwelling place. Their co-tenants sympathetically arranged a temporary modus vivendi. But this could not last long, and was only possible by utilising the landings on the staircase for the beds of four of the children. A few days ago this arrangement had to come to an end. M. Unland, however, had notified the "Tenants' League," an association formed to resist the arbitrary application of the law concerning tenants and landlords, and it was decided that Unland, his wife, and family, and his furniture, should be led in solemn procession to the Department of the Interior, where an appeal was to be made, a number of explanatory signs and notices were hoisted by the members of the league, and away it started. It passed the Elysee, but was then dispersed by the police, and few minutes later the family, the furniture and the friends found themselves in the police station guardroom. Here they waited until a philanthropist, has rented a large house as a temporary home for such castaways, came to their relief.

SOUR, GASSY, UPSET STOMACH REGULATED

Just a Little Diapepsin Ends Indigestion in Five Minutes

The question as to how long you are going to continue a sufferer from Indigestion, Dyspepsia or out-of-order Stomach is merely a matter of how soon you begin taking some Diapepsin.

If your Stomach is lacking in digestive power, why not help the stomach to do its work, not with drastic drugs, but a re-enforcement of digestive agents, such as are naturally at work in the stomach.

People with weak Stomachs should take a little Diapepsin occasionally, and there will be no more indigestion, no feelings like a lump of lead in the stomach, no heartburn, Sour risings, Gas on Stomach or Belching of undigested food, Headaches, Dizziness or Sick Stomach, and, besides, what you eat will not ferment and poison your breath with nauseous odours. All these symptoms resulting from a sour, out-of-order stomach and dyspepsia are generally relieved in five minutes after taking a little Diapepsin.

Go to your druggist and get a 50-cent. case of Pape's Diapepsin now, and you will always go to the table with a hearty appetite, and what you eat will taste good, because your stomach and intestines will be clean and fresh, and you will know there are not going to be any more bad nights and miserable days for you. They freshen you and make you feel like life is worth living.

Old English Plum Pudding.

Take of raisins well stoned but not chopped one pound, currants thoroughly washed one pound, suet very finely chopped one pound; mix them, add quarter pound of flour or fine bread crumbs, three ounces of sugar, one and one-half ounces of grated lemon peel, a blade of mace, half of nutmeg grated, one teaspoon of ginger, half dozen eggs, well beaten; work it well together, put in a cloth, tie firmly, allowing room to swell; put into boiling water and boil not less than two hours. The cloth, when about to be used, should be dipped in boiling water, squeezed dry, and floured, and when the pudding is done have a pan of cold water ready and dip it in for a moment as soon as it comes out of the pot, which prevents the pudding from sticking.

MISS VIOLET ASQUITH

Compares New Mission House to a Dreadnought in Time of War

Miss Violet Asquith, elder daughter of the Prime Minister, made an interesting speech on social reform in opening the Wesley House, in connection with the West London Mission, in Kingsway.

She said she might compare opening of the institute to the completion in time of war of a new Dreadnought—a tremendous power for good. In her inspection of the building she had found accommodation for human beings of all ages and both sexes. There was a creche for babies, a dark room for photographers, a gymnasium for those who desired to use their arms and legs, a number of rooms for study, and a roof garden for those in search of fresh air and peace.

To some of them the opening of this institute was the realisation of a hope deeply cherished by the late Rev. Hugh Price Hughes. It was one fragment of his dream for the reconstruction of society on a religious basis.

According to some people the State had now embarked on meddling with the private lives of the people, but her way of putting it was that it was a period of great social reform. There was no danger that the work of this institute and that of similar religious and social agencies would clash with that of the State or be overlapped by it.

WANTED, A LEADER!

Lord Furness on the Greatest Need of Organised Labor To-Day.

The need of the moment was a leader of labor—a man of acute insight, wide vision and cool judgment—said Lord Furness speaking at Hartlepool. In the matter of competition, he said, the mercantile marine engineering industry of the North-east coast presented a unique example of the utter lack of combined organisation, and gloomily illustrated the evil of competition unrestricted by anything short of ruin to those engaged in it.

The energies of engine-builders were concentrated in "beggar my neighbor," played with a zeal that was bringing a prosperous industry into a condition of unparalleled commercial disrepute. They were resolved upon such a method of action as would result in more rational methods.

One of the greatest losses from which the country suffered was the want of authority on the part of workmen's responsible leaders. They lacked sagacity and wisdom, perhaps because they had given more attention to politics than business, and the clamor of inexperience and irresponsibility overwhelmed everywhere the dictates of sense.

JUSTICE OF THE PEACE

TELLS REMARKABLE EXPERIENCE WITH ZAM-BUK.

SUFFERED FOR YEARS WITH ECZEMA & ULCERS NOTHING SEEMED ABLE TO DO HIM ANY GOOD ZAM BUK CURED HIM

Mr. J. E. Arsenault, a Justice of the Peace, and station master at Wellington, on the Prince Edward Island Railway, says:

"Four years ago, I slipped in the station and fell on a freight truck, sustaining a bad cut on the front of my leg. I thought this would heal, but instead of doing so it developed into a bad ulcer and later into a form of eczema which spread very rapidly and also started on the other leg. Both legs became so swollen and sore that I could only go about my work by having them bandaged. My doctor said I must stop work and lay up. After six months of this trouble I consulted another doctor, but with no better result. I tried all the salves, liniments and lotions I heard of, but instead of getting better I got worse. This was my condition when I got my first box of Zam-Buk. Greatly to my delight that first box gave me relief. I continued to apply it to the sores, and day by day they got better.

"I could see that at last I had got hold of something which would cure me, and in the end it did. It is now over a year since Zam-Buk worked a cure in my case, and there has been no return of the eczema or any trace of it. It would be impossible to find a case where the sores were worse than those on my limbs, and I think Zam-Buk is a marvellous healing balm or it could not have cured me as it did when all else failed."

WHAT ZAM-BUK CURES.

The above is but one example of the wonderful cures that Zam-Buk is daily working. Purely herbal in composition, this great balm is a sure cure for all skin diseases, cold sores, chapped hands, frost bite, ulcers, blood-poisoning, varicose sores, piles, scalp sores, ringworm, inflamed patches, cuts, burns and bruises.

THE death in a federal hospital in Washington, D. C., of Richard Clarence Neal, alias James A. Baker, brought to a close the career of one of the most desperate and youthful criminals who ever operated in this country.

Within a period of ninety days this boy bandit blew and robbed the safes of thirty-six rural post offices and railroad stations, in one instance murdering the operator and setting fire to the body in an effort to cover up his crime. He stole money and express orders in nearly every station looted, and these he forged and had cashed, netting him thousands of dollars. His field of operations extended from Pennsylvania to California. While he was blazing his trail with murder, arson and robbery an army of federal and railroad detectives and police were seeking him. One man got on his trail at the very beginning of his criminal career and relentlessly pursued him for nine thousand miles, and was never more than a day's ride behind him, until he finally trapped him at the general delivery window of the New York Post Office. This was Miles S. Rigor, chief of the Secret Service Bureau of the Pennsylvania Railroad, who graphically describes his transcontinental pursuit of a boy still in his teens, yet a youth who had fled his Texas home for South Africa, where he procured a commission in the English army and fought with distinction.

BY MILES S. RIGOR.

WHEN word was flashed from Washington a few weeks ago that Richard Clarence Neal, alias James A. Baker, had escaped from the psychopathic ward of one of the federal hospitals there every post office inspector and railroad detective in the country was thrown into a panic. They realized that a most notorious yeggman was at large and momentarily they expected to learn of a series of violent outbreaks which would tax their wits to circumvent. They were prepared for the worst and the nerves of all of us were at the snapping point. Imagine our relief a few days later when we learned that the fugitive had been recaptured. In making his escape he had broken a leg and an arm and had remained hidden in underbrush near the hospital for two days and two nights. There he contracted pneumonia and his end soon followed. With his passing every thief taker in the country heaved a sigh of relief.

I, perhaps, am the only detective in the country who knows the life of Clarence Neal from beginning to end. Not only did he lead me the merriest chase that a detective ever had, but when he made his celebrated confession to Post Office Inspector Kincaid and myself he rang in so many sidelights on his checkered career that it took me months to verify them.

Clarence Neal came of a fine family of Texans. He was a high strung and headstrong boy who chafed under the restrictions placed upon him by his father. At the age of fifteen he ran away from home and, arriving in New Orleans, procured a berth on a steamer steaming for South Africa with a cargo of horses for the English army. The Boer war was just starting and the young Texan confided to a friend before embarking that he intended to take a hand in the scrap. He was exceptionally well developed for his age and, arriving in South Africa, he had no difficulty in passing muster and enlisting in the English army.

But this work was too tame for the youthful Texan, so he was transferred to his regiment at the front, and in his third engagement he fought with such valor that he was decorated. Later he saved the life of a staff officer, and for this bit of gallantry he won his spurs. He was promoted to a lieutenancy in the Third Imperial Horse. A few months later he was desperately wounded and put aboard a transport bound for London. There, upon his recovery, he was assigned to a berth in the War Office until, becoming homesick, he asked for and received his honorable discharge. I read all the papers pertaining to his service in Africa and in the War Office, and his record was one any soldier might be proud of.

Young Neal returned to his Texas home, and meeting his boyhood sweetheart for the first time in two years he at once married her. Two months after his marriage he learned she had not been true in his absence and, almost crazed, he left home and came North. He at once fell in with evil companions, among them a notorious yeggman, who constituted himself the youth's preceptor in crime. From then on, until the afternoon of his capture, hardly a day passed that Neal did not commit a robbery of some sort. He was the aptest pupil that ever a yeggman had, and Fuzzy Rugan, his preceptor, soon learned that Neal was travelling too fast a pace for him, and he dropped out, leaving the boy to go it alone.

In the latter part of November, 1907, the railroad station at Thompson, W. Va., was robbed of cash, checks and several express money orders. These checks and express orders were cashed in Wheeling the next day by a young man describing himself as James A. Baker. The next night the Baltimore and Ohio station at Hedenwood, W. Va., was robbed. Cash and express orders were taken and the latter were cashed at nearby points, none for less than $50. Then followed the robbery of the post office and railroad station at Brucetown, Pa., followed almost immediately by the looting of the Pennsylvania Railroad station at Hays, Pa. Among the stuff taken from Hays were ten interchangeable mileage books, the station punch and dater. Thus armed the young bandit was equipped for many miles of travel.

It was when our station at Hays was robbed that I got into the game, believing that the same yeggs, or gang of yeggs, who were looting the Baltimore and Ohio stations were operating on our line. A few days later we heard of the robbery of the station at Clarington, W. Va., where after forcing his way into the station the thief was confronted by Hutchinson, the night operator, who slept on the premises. Hutchinson drew his gun and backed the burglar into a corner, but the thief leaped out upon the agent, wrested the gun from his grasp, and as it exploded the agent fell, mortally wounded. Neal later declared that he worked over the wounded man for an hour, but when he expired in his arms he first sacked the office of all its valuables and then sprinkled the body and premises with kerosene oil and fired it, hoping in this way to cover up his crime.

It was when this murder came to light that George W. Boyd, general passenger agent of the Pennsylvania, ordered me to get the murderer no matter what the expense of running him down might be.

Then began a chase which included two trips to the Pacific coast and back again. Once I saw Neal in Oregon, I later learned. He knew me as a detective and made tracks East as fast as he could. It was not until the bird had flown that I realized that Neal, or Baker, was the yegg I was after.

Going at once to Pittsburg after the robbery at Hays, I traced by means of the stolen mileage books the movements of the thief. There I obtained a good description of the bandit, and as day after day new robberies would come to light I was kept pretty busy. The trail finally led me to East Liverpool, Ohio, several railroad stations and post offices having been looted in that vicinity.

While in East Liverpool I ran across Jack Lewis, a yeggman, and he tallied so vividly with the description I had that I arrested him.

Then came one of the strangest experiences in my career as a detective. Three men positively identified Lewis as the man who had cashed the stolen express orders. A fourth partially identified him, but a fifth declared he was not the man I was seeking. I knew Lewis well, and, while a crook, he wasn't altogether a bad sort. So after a long talk with him I told him he was being held for murder, arson and robbery. He wasn't in the least worried and protested his innocence.

He said he could prove that he hadn't been out of the State for a month. Luckily for Lewis, he kept a diary, and when he learned the date of Hutchinson's murder he showed me an entry in his diary which treated of a real estate deal in East Liverpool, the papers of which he said he had signed as a witness. He gave the name of a prominent banker who he said would verify this statement.

The banker and two of his clerks visited the jail and identified Lewis as the witness to the realty deal, so he had claimed, so that eliminated him, and he was released.

After a three months' chase, which led me twice to the Pacific Coast and back again, with the assistance of Post Office Inspector Kincaid I finally cornered Neal at the general delivery window of the New York post office.

Post Office Inspector Kincaid and I sweated our man for eight hours, when he caved in and dictated his confession to me. Here is the confession, and I regard it as one of the most remarkable documents ever signed by a criminal:—

The Confession.

"The latter part of November, 1907, I met a man named Jack Raymond from Memphis, Tenn. Raymond was a man about twenty-six years of age, five feet six inches in height, 150 pounds in weight, smooth face, light moustache and dark hair. He induced me to assist him in robbing the Thomas station on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, which we robbed about the first of December. We then robbed another station. Between the two we obtained some pay checks and some United States express money orders. We immediately came to New York and went to live at No. 107 West Fortieth street, New York. At this house Jack Raymond filled out the express money orders and checks, while I had them cashed. I left Jack in New York and returned to Philadelphia, where I registered at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel on December 11, 1907, as H. G. Wilson, Oakland, Cal. At this hotel I had four United States express money orders cashed for $50 each.

"On December 12 I left Philadelphia and went to Washington, where I had two express money orders cashed. I also tried to get a position in Washington, but was not successful. I then went to Pittsburg.

"On December 22 I robbed the station of the Pennsylvania Railroad at Hays, Pa., obtaining there interchangeable mileage tickets, with the punch and dates. After leaving the station I walked down to the end of the freight station, stamped and punched the tickets, then threw the dater and punch between the track and lower end of the freight platform. I then boarded the first train over the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad for New York, where I sold some of these mileage tickets to the different ticket brokers, receiving $5, $6 and $8 per book. I do not know what brokers I sold them to. I immediately returned to Pittsburg.

"On the morning of December 29 I left Parkersburg, W. Va., and went to Wheeling. The same night I went from Wheeling to Clarington, W. Va. I walked back and entered the first station after leaving Clarington and obtained some money orders there and then walked on to Powhatan, on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, and got about two dollars in small change, opened a mail pouch, but did not take anything. I then walked to Moundsville, boarded a trolley and rode into Wheeling and boarded the first train, December 30, about eight o'clock A. M., for Pittsburg.

"The following day I left Pittsburg and went to Washington, remaining in Washington over night, then continued on to Philadelphia.

"On January 3, 1908, I went out of Philadelphia on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad and robbed two stations. I do not know the names of them, but think they were Ogden and Boothwyn. I then returned to Philadelphia.

"On Sunday, January 19, 1908, I left Philadelphia over the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad for Pittsburg, arriving there on Monday morning. I immediately had one of the Wells Fargo Express money orders cashed in Pittsburg for $50, then went to Homestead and had another Wells Fargo money order cashed for $50.

"On Tuesday, January 21, I went to Wheeling, W. Va., tried to have four C. O. D. checks cashed, when the agent in charge informed me that he did not have sufficient money and requested that I return again in about an hour. While he was talking to me I noticed on the counter a postal card describing the checks and giving the numbers stolen from Carlton Hill. I was afraid the agent would notice that these were the checks before I returned, consequently I left town and did not return for the money.

"On January 24 I robbed the station at Justice, Ohio, but did not obtain anything. The same night I robbed the station at Strasburgh, where I obtained some express money orders. I then went on to Columbus, Ohio.

"On January 25 I robbed the station at Era, Ohio, and got three money orders. I left Era and went direct to Chicago, arriving there January 26, and registered at the Auditorium Annex as R. C. Neal. At this hotel I had an express order cashed for $50. The same evening I had one of the express orders cashed at a house in Chicago for $50.

"On the morning of January 27 I had Order A C 351,837 cashed for $50 at the Pacific Express Company's office. I then went to the Santa Fe Railway ticket office, exchanged a ticket that I had stolen from Strasburgh for a ticket to California and return. I left on the first train out for California, arriving at Oakland on the evening of January 30, and went to a furnished room house near the station, first street back of Broadway.

"On Monday, February 3, I left Oakland at 6:50 P. M. over the Southern Pacific Railroad, arriving at Omaha, as near as I can judge, about February 6, and immediately went to the Schlitz Hotel, where I stopped under the name of Jackson.

"I remained around the town resting until the night of February 10, when I walked to the station at Waterloo, Neb., and stole a lot of prepaid ticket orders, one hundred and twenty-five pennies and I think eight mileage books good only in the State of Nebraska. I caught a freight about daylight into Omaha.

"On February 11, 1908, I sold the mileage books to the different emigrant ticket agents for $1.50 and $2. The highest I received was $4. I left Omaha on the night of February 11 for Chicago, arriving there February 12. I then went to a little hotel near the Illinois Central station, wrote out an order for a ticket to Omaha and five dollars, which I had cashed, giving the ticket to a tramp. I then went back to the hotel and wrote out three more orders, sold one to a ticket broker for $5, obtaining $10 for another at the Baltimore & Ohio R. R. ticket office and $10 for three at the Pennsylvania R. R. ticket office.

"On the night of February 12 I left Chicago for Pittsburg, arriving there about noon of February the 13th. I then went to No. 129 Johnson street, Hazlewood, to see Miss Hilda Joyce.

"The same night I left Pittsburg for Washington, arriving there on the 14th inst.

"At Washington I fixed up a prepaid Union Pacific order for a ticket to Omaha and $15 in cash and had same bonded at the Pennsylvania R. R. ticket office. I gave the ticket to a man who wanted to go to Pittsburg. I tried to get another cashed over the B. & O. R. R., but was informed by the clerk that they had to wire to the headquarters. I later called this clerk up on the telephone and he informed me that it was all right. However, I then went to the Baltimore & Ohio R. R. office. On arriving there I saw that a man had an order that looked like the one I had cashed and I thought it was not safe to present my order, so left the B. & O. R. R. office.

"On February the 15th I went to the station and boarded a B. & O. R. R. train and rode to Baltimore. Here I tried to have more of the Union Pacific prepaid orders cashed but failed. I then continued to New York, arriving there at 12:05 P. M. February the 16th.

"On arriving in New York I went to the Mascot Hotel and registered under the name of Jackson. I remained at the Mascot Hotel until the night of the 16th, then went to the Lackawanna apartment house on West street, remaining there Sunday night, February 16.

"On Monday, February 17, I pawned my brown suit. The same night I went to Bound Brook, cut across the country and think that I walked fully thirteen miles, and came to the station on the Lehigh Valley Railroad, which I robbed and obtained ten United States Express money orders. I then walked to Bound Brook and took the first train I could get back.

"On the morning of February 18 I left the Lackawanna and went to Smith & McNeil's and obtained a room, and registered there under the name of Jackson. I then went to Brooklyn and had one of the United States Express money orders cashed for $50 at the American Express Company's office on Fulton street.

"I returned to New York, and at two P. M. left for Boston, went to the Essex Hotel, registered under the name of R. D. Neal, and was assigned to room No. 169.

"On February 19 I had two United States money orders cashed at the Adams Express Company's office and one at the Wells-Fargo Express Company's office in Boston for $50 each.

"I left Boston at 2:42 P. M. for Providence, R. I., where I had two more United States Express money orders cashed for $50 each at the Adams Express office.

"I left Providence and went to New London, and stopped at the Crofton House under the name of R. D. Neal. At the Crofton House I got in a game of poker and lost $285.

"I left New London on the Bay State Limited for New York. On arriving in New York I went to the Belmont Hotel and registered under the name of C. R. Robertson, Reno, Nev., and was assigned to room No. 852. I got in an elevated train and rode to Chatham square to get my laundry, but learned it was not finished, so purchased some underwear and continued on to the Post Office, where I was arrested."

Here he balked and I then took up the question with Baker as to his trip to Clarington, and had Baker again admit that he had gone to Clarington on the evening of December 29. I asked him what he did at the station in Clarington, W. Va. He denied ever having been in the station. Inspector Kincaid and I kept at him fully an hour on this subject, when he finally asked for a coin. Upon being handed a half dollar Baker remarked:—"Always before entering a station on leaving a town I decide my action upon the toss of a coin, and will decide that question this way too."

He then took the coin and tossed it up in the air. It came down heads. He thought for some time, and we knew from his manner that the toss of the coin was against him. Finally he looked up and said:—"I will tell you the story."

Continuing, he said:—"I went to Clarington on December 29 on a train arriving there about 7:24 P. M. I went down the track from the station awhile, and about two hours later I entered the post office and did not know there was any one in the station. At this time I went out with about twenty-five cents in my pocket. When I alighted from the train I saw the agent, but thought he would wait on that train and then leave the station. When I returned to the station I did not see anybody about, and went to the back and got in the baggage room, opened the door into the post office and saw the operator lying on the bench, asleep.

"I saw the money drawer and thought that I could get it without waking him. I opened the drawer and the agent woke up. He drew a gun and backed me over to the other side of the station, with my hands up. He went to use the instrument with one hand when I grabbed his hand and we struggled. However, I held his hand in such a position so I always had the gun pointed away from me. In the shuffle the gun went off and he was injured badly. I hurriedly left the station and went up the road, then turned back and tried to see what I could do for him, as I thought I could help him if he was not dead. I made up my mind that I would call for help if he was not dead. I felt his pulse and no signs of life. I then went over his heart and found that he was dead and beyond all help. I then set the building on fire to cover what had happened, as I was in a terrible state of mind. I took the revolver and some stamps. The stamps I sold in New York on the Bowery. I pawned the revolver in Philadelphia, but do not know where. I also got some registered mail letters and about $15 in cash."

Immediately after relating the above Baker said that he felt greatly relieved, in fact, was glad that he had told it, as it had preyed on his mind ever since it occurred. He was taken to Moundsville, W. Va., and there tried. After receiving a life term he was sent to the federal prison at Fort Leavenworth. There he feigned insanity, and so successfully that he was transferred to the government hospital at Washington. Then came his escape and this closely followed by his death.

MARKET REPORTS.

Liverpool Wheat Futures Close Lower, Chicago Higher—Live Stock —Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, March 18.—Two bears to-day frightened short sellers of wheat. The coal strike threatening to interfere with grain supplies at Liverpool caused one alarm, the other followed a rumor of a naval clash which might close the Dardanelles. In consequence the market closed firm at 1-4c to 1-2c advance. Corn scored a net gain of 5-8c to 1c, oats finished the same as Saturday night to 1-16c up, and hog products dearer by 5c to 15c.

The Liverpool market closed to-day on wheat ½d to 1½d lower than on Saturday, and on corn ½d higher. Berlin wheat closed ½c higher, Buda Pest ½c higher and Paris ½c to ½c higher.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, March 18.—There was an improved demand from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat and as prices bid were generally 2d to 4½d per quarter higher than Saturday, a fair amount of business was worked. In sympathy with the renewed strength in the Chicago market for corn, prices on spot were marked up 1c per bushel. A fairly good trade continues to be done in oats for prompt delivery at steady prices.

Corn—American No. 2 yellow, 70½c.

Oats—Canadian western, No. 2, 54c to 53½c; do., No. 3, 51c to 51½c; extra No. 1 feed, 52c to 53¼c; No. 2 local white, 50½c to 51c; No. 3 local white, 49½c to 50c; No. 4 local white, 48½c to 49c.

Barley—Malting, $1.05 to $1.10.

Flour—Manitoba spring wheat patents, firsts, $5.70; seconds, $5.20; strong bakers, $5; winter patents, choice, $5.10 to $5.25; straight rollers, $4.65 to $4.75; do., bags, $2.15 to $2.25.

Hay—No. 2, per ton, car lots, $15 to $15.50.

Rolled oats—Barrels, $5.05; bags, 90 lbs., $2.50.

Cheese—Finest westerns, 15¼c to 15½c; finest easterns, 14½c to 14¾c.

Butter—Choicest creamery, 33½c to 34c; seconds, 32½c to 33c.

Eggs—Fresh, 25c to 27c.

Potatoes—Per bag, car lots, $1.55 to $1.70.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Union Stock Yards.

TORONTO, March 18.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Stock Yards were 87 carloads, consisting of 1672 cattle, 294 hogs, 94 sheep and 44 calves.

Exporters.

There were no cattle bought for export purposes, but there were a few loads of export weights, the bulk of which were bought by Messrs. Kennedy and McIntosh for the Montreal market and abattoirs, at prices ranging from $6.50 to $7.05; bulls, at $5.25 to $5.50.

Butchers

Best heavy steers for butchers' purposes sold as high as the exporters, $6.90 to $7.05; prime picked lots of butchers' weights, $6.35 to $6.65; good, $6 to $6.25; medium, $5.40 to $5.90; common, $5 to $5.30; inferior, $4.50 to $4.90; cows the same from $5.25 to $5.50 a very few choice heavy weights brought more, as will be seen by sales reported.

Stockers and Feeders.

We only heard of one lot of feeders which were sold by C. Zeagman & Sons, 19 steers, 950 lbs. each, at $5.25.

Milkers and Springers.

Receipts of milkers and springers were light and generally of inferior, common and medium quality. Trade for them was dull and prices ranged from $30 to $55 each; they were bought by Mr. Fred Rowntree.

Veal Calves.

Veal calves were in good demand, selling from $5 to $8.50 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

Sheep, ewes, sold from $4 to $5.00 per cwt.; rams, $3.50 to $4.50; lambs, $6.50 to $8, and one extra choice lot sold at $8.20.

Hogs.

W. J. Johnston quoted selects, fed and watered, at $7.50, and $7.15, f.o.b., cars to drovers at country points, which means that the farmer would get $7 per cwt.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, March 18.—At the West End Market the receipts of live stock for the week ending March 16, were 1800 cattle, 135 sheep and lambs, 2200 hogs and 1800 calves. The supply on the market this morning for sale consisted of 650 cattle, 50 sheep and lambs, 1200 hogs and 450 calves.

During the early trading as high as $7.50 per cwt. was asked for full loads of choice steers, weighing 1200 lbs. each, which figure buyers refused to pay, which resulted in bringing sellers down in their views somewhat and finally sales were made at $7.15 and $7 was paid for cattle weighing 1125 lbs. each, and $6.50 to $6.75 for 900 to 1000 lb. beasts, while odd steers of choice quality sold at $7.25 to $7.35 per cwt.

The condition of the market for bull and cows was unchanged as the supply of such was ample to fill all requirements and the top prices realized were from $5.50 to $5.75 per cwt. The demand was principally for good to choice steers and as the offerings of such were limited, buyers in some cases found it impossible to fill their wants, altho bids of $7 were made freely for full loads. The trade in common and inferior stock was slow, the demand for such being very limited.

The strong feeling which has characterized the market for hogs of late still continues to be the main feature of the trade and prices to-day scored a further advance of 15c to 25c per cwt., owing to the small supplies coming forward and the keen demand for the same from packers. In consequence an active trade was done and even at the higher prices buyers in some cases could not fill their wants. Sales of selected lots were made at $8 to $8.25 per cwt., weighed off the cars.

A stronger feeling prevailed in the market for lambs and prices advanced 15c to 25c per cwt., which was due to the increased demand and the small offerings and sales were made at $7 to $7.25 per cwt. Sheep were quiet and firm. The tone of the market for calves was weaker on account of the increased receipts and prices are steadily reaching a lower level.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $7.25 to $7.35; medium, $6 to $7; common, $4 to $5; canners, $3.75 to $4.25; choice cows, $5.50 to $5.75; medium, $4 to $4.75; bulls, $4.50 to $5.75; milkers, choice, each $65; common and medium, each, $45 to $55; springers, $30 to $40.

Sheep, ewes, $5 to $5.25; bucks and culls, $4.25 to $4.50; lambs, $7 to $7.25.

Hogs—F.o.b., $8 to $8.25.

Calves—$1.50 to $10.

WAS SO RUN DOWN

COULD NOT DO ANY WORK.

Thought She Was So Far Gone Nothing Could Cure Her.

MILBURN'S HEART and NERVE PILLS Made Her Strong and Healthy.

Many women get run down, and are unable to look after their household duties, owing to their nervous system becoming unstrung, and when this happens, the heart starts to work in sympathy with the nerves. In Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills is combined a treatment that will cure all forms of nervous disorders, as well as act on the heart itself. Mrs. F. McFadyen, Brookside, Sask., writes:—"It is with the greatest of pleasure I write you stating the benefit I have received from using Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. This spring I was so run down I could not do any work, and one day a neighbor advised me to try your Pills. I told her that I thought nothing could cure me, as I was too far gone. But she told me to get a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, which I did, and before I had finished them, I began to improve, and when I had finished the one box I was as strong and healthy as any person. Anyone who is suffering from heart or nerve troubles should take your Heart and Nerve Pills and they will soon discover their worth."

Price 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

PURITY STRENGTH PERFECTION

Says Ottawa Ill-Treats French.

Ottawa, March 19.—Rev. Father Guertin, parish priest of Hull, comes out with a strong article against Hull being included in the proposed federal district with Ottawa.

He states that the French-Canadian minority in the capital city have been subjected to unfair treatment in the past, referring especially to the fact that, according to the agreement which long existed, the right of a French-Canadian to the mayoralty should have been respected.

He's Senator Daniels Now.

Ottawa, March 19.—Dr. J. W. Daniel, ex-M.P. for St. John, N.B., was yesterday called to the Senate to replace Hon. Josiah Wood, appointed Lieutenant-Governor of New Brunswick.

The new Senator was born at St. Stephen, N.B., in 1845, and entered the House at a bye-election for St. John City in 1904. At the general election that year he was returned, and also in 1908. In the September elections he ran for the city and county constituency of St. John and was returned, but resigned shortly afterwards to provide a seat for New Brunswick's Cabinet Minister, Hon. Mr. Hazen.

Will Promote Efficiency.

New York, March 19.—Leading manufacturers and business experts of the country gathered here yesterday to organize the Efficiency Society, whose purpose it is to develop increased efficiency and skill in commercial and industrial enterprises.

President Taft and his Cabinet, together with the leading bankers and manufacturers of the country, are supporting the organization which is the first of its kind.

Twenty-Five Men Killed.

San Antonio, Texas, March 19.—Twenty-five men were killed by the explosion of a locomotive boiler in the Southern Pacific round house here yesterday forenoon. Many more were injured.

Most of the dead and injured were strikebreakers, who took the places of Southern Pacific shopmen, who went on strike here several months ago.

So fearfully mangled were several of the bodies that it seemed probable they can never be fully identified.

Hammer Handles.

If a new hammer handle be rubbed well with a thin paste made of plaster of paris and linseed oil it will give it a good grip and be nonabsorbent of moisture or grease.

Rugs and the Evil Eye.

Rug makers in the orient consider it an omen of ill fortune if a Christian looks at them while they are engaged at their work. To counteract the influence of the "evil eye," as they regard it, they weave a white spot in the pattern.

Zinc and Soot.

If a small piece of zinc is burned in with the coal occasionally it will cost the interior of the chimney so that soot will not form in it.

Brazil Nuts.

Brazil nuts yield 6 per cent of their weight in oil.

Relics of Great Britain.

The ballads of the "mountain whites" of Kentucky and Georgia are transplanted relics of the British isles, retailing the Anglo-Saxon origin of most of the early colonists.

Women in Bombay.

In Bombay, India, women have the right to vote at city elections and therefore indirectly control the legislative councils, some of whose members are elected by the municipalities.

U. S. War Vessels To Go East.

Washington, D.C., March 19.—The armored cruisers California, South Dakota, and Colorado, under command of Rear Admiral Southerland, sailed yesterday for Honolulu and the Philippines.

Notwithstanding the international significance that is attached to this sudden and considerable reinforcement of the American Asiatic fleet, the naval officials here state that the purpose of the cruise is to enable them to dock at the naval station in Olongapo, and to hold their spring target practice in Philippine waters.

It is rather naively admitted that the practice might be held off the Southern California coast, but then the cruisers would be a long way off from the seat of trouble "if anything should happen in the Far East."

Fatal Fire Incendiary.

Niagara Falls, Ont., March 19.—Coroner Wilson last night opened an inquest into the circumstances surrounding the deaths of Mrs. Charlotte Pattison and her daughter Melta, who lost their lives when the building in which they had apartments was destroyed Sunday. The jury viewed the bodies and adjourned to take the evidence later.

Miss Ella Pattison, who suffered severely from inhaling smoke while endeavoring to rescue her sister, is practically out of danger at the General Hospital. A most rigid investigation of the conflagration will be conducted, the authorities being determined to ascertain whether the blaze was accidental or incendiary. Many citizens incline to the latter belief.

New Excise Tax Bill.

Washington, March 19.—Oscar W. Underwood, Democratic leader of the House, supporting the proposed excise tax bill in the House yesterday, charged that the Supreme Court by its annulment of the income tax in 1895 was responsible for the growth of socialism in the United States.

The pending measure, which probably will pass the House to-day, is expected to raise between fifty and sixty million dollars a year in revenue for the Government. Multi-millionaires, Andrew Carnegie, J. P. Morgan, and John D. Rockefeller, would be compelled to pay their full share of taxation under its terms, the Democratic leaders declared.

Meerschaum.

Meerschaum means sea foam and derives its name from the fact that it is sometimes found floating in the Black sea.

Petate Flour.

The great bulk of the so called potato flour that is sold at retail in the groceries of Germany for cooking purposes is simply finely ground and sifted potato starch. There is, however, a flour obtained by grinding and bolting dried potatoes that is a comparatively new product.

Bulgaria.

Bulgaria has made wonderful progress since it became independent. Its people are wide awake, enterprising and desirous of progress.

Cicero.

Cicero was the first to be named "the Father of His Country."

Salt Water and Frost.

Salt water freezes at a lower temperature than fresh, this varying according to the amount of its salinity, be under favorable conditions the sea does freeze.

The Almanac.

A writer in a Paris newspaper says that the word "almanac" comes from "the moon," for in remote times our forefathers engraved the courses of the moon on wooden cubes, which were known as "al monaght," which signified "all the moons."

Grass Raincoats.

In the tropical regions of Mexico, where heavy downpours of rain are of daily occurrence, the use of grass raincoats is common among the natives. Some of the coats are made with such a degree of skill that they may be worn by a European without looking incongruous.

Fire Insurance.

Fire insurance owes its origin to the great fire of London in 1666.

Marking Linen.

A quick way to mark linen, sheets, etc., is to write the name in pencil, then stitch over the line with a sewing machine, using a coarse thread and long stitch.

Lost and Found in London.

The value of the jewels lost and found in the streets and public places of London sometimes amounts to as much as £20,000 in a year. The London police keep all such property as is delivered up to them for twelve months, advertising it in three daily papers during that period. If it is not claimed and the account given by the finder seems reasonable it is handed over to him, the police deducting the bare cost of the advertisements.

ONE SINGLE PILL GAVE GREAT RELIEF

FOUR BOXES CURED HIM

PEMBROKE, ONT.

"I suffered from Kidney Trouble for several years, and tried numerous remedies and doctors' prescriptions without permanent relief, my case being chronic. After seeing about Gin Pills, and as it is a well known fact that juniper without alcohol is excellent for the Kidneys, I decided to try Gin Pills. One single pill gave me great relief. I have now taken almost four boxes of Gin Pills and find myself completely cured. No more backache—increase in weight—clear eye, fresh color—more strength and vigor. This is what Gin Pills have done for me".

H. POWIS HERBERT.

Gin Pills will do the same for you—if you have any trouble with your Kidneys or Bladder—or if you suffer with Pain in the Back or Rheumatism. Try them before you buy them. TURNBULL'S

THE HOUSE THAT VALUE BUILT

WILL RUSH MEASURE.

Mr. Asquith Hopes to Pass Miners' Bill by Saturday.

London, March 19.—The Prime Minister announced in the House of Commons yesterday that the Government would endeavor to pass a minimum wage bill into law by the end of the week. It was learned last night on good authority that the bill will be a short measure, leaving to district committees the settlement not only of the minimum wage, but also the question of the employers' safeguards. No provision will be made for compulsory power to enforce the minimum or penalties on either the employers or the men for the breaking of contract.

The Labor party last night adopted a resolution not to oppose the bill, and the Nationalist whip issued an urgent request for the attendance of the Unionnites to support the bill.

Pending the production of the bill, there is little to record in the strike situation. The price of coal had a smart advance on the London market yesterday. There is constantly accumulating evidence that the dwindling coal reserves will soon bring to a halt many public and private services unless a settlement is reached. Some minor disorders have occurred in Lanarkshire and Lancashire, and at Middlesboro the dockers refused to unload a cargo of German coal. But taken altogether the strike presented a remarkable absence of disorder.

May Affect Canada.

Cleveland, March 19.—Although the joint conference here on March 20 is between representatives of the operators and miners in the bituminous coal fields of western Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, who are demanding wage increases, all bituminous miners in the U. S. and Canada will abide by whatever decision is reached.

In case of a walkout at the expiration of the present agreement on March 31, 300,000 men would be involved.

Expect Speedy Settlement.

New York, March 19.—The belief that a suspension of work in the anthracite coal mines on April 1 will not be continued long, and that a settlement will be reached, was expressed by coal operators here yesterday. It was pointed out that a similar situation existed when the agreement expired before. There was a refusal of the demands, followed by a suspension, and later negotiations were opened and the old agreement renewed. The miners, however, believe that six weeks' suspension will make a renewal of negotiations, with substantial concessions, an easy matter.

Home Rule in Two Years.

London, March 19.—John E. Redmond, member of the Irish Parliamentary party, presiding last night at a St. Patrick's banquet at the Hotel Cecil, said that the home rule bill would pass the House of Commons by more than 100 majority, and inside of two years would become law. Ireland, then, he declared, was destined to become the greatest human agency in promoting the security and power of the British Empire.

Threshing in Saskatchewan.

Winnipeg, March 19.—In sections of Saskatchewan some threshing is going on where the wheat has been in the fields all winter, just as it left the binding machine, and fair results are being derived, grading six and four wheat, which to-day is worth 60c. and 58c. a bushel respectively.

C.P.R. AWARDS CONTRACT

For Lake Shore Line Which May be Used for the Toronto-Montreal Fast Passenger Service

TENDER WAS $10,000,000

Special to The Examiner.

TORONTO, MARCH 19.—The contract for the construction of the new C.P.R. line through Eastern Ontario from Leaside Junction to Glentae, was yesterday awarded to Deeks and Hinds, of this city. The firm's tender was $10,000,000. Work on the road will be commenced forthwith.

The new line, starting from Glentae, a few miles from Smith's Falls, will in a way establish a double-track between Montreal and Toronto. At the present time the C.P.R. has a double-track from Montreal as far as Glentae, but instead of doubling along the right-of-way of the present track from Smith's Falls to Toronto, the company has decided to follow the course around the lake and the new line from east to west will be 198 miles long. It will run parallel with the Grand Trunk and the Canadian Northern lines, and is to be in running order by December, 1913, and completed in July, 1914.

The contract calls for all grading, construction work, bridge building, etc., and the work will be laid out so as to allow for a double-track along the same route when the demands of the company justify it. When that time arrives the present line from Toronto to Smith's Falls may be abandoned and the lake shore route used for fast passenger service between Toronto and Montreal.

Starting from Glentae, the new line will go through Parkham, Forest Mills, Craydon, Enterprise, Belleville, Trenton, Cobourg, Port Hope, Oshawa, Whitby, Agincourt, and run into Leaside Junction, where it will meet the present line from Toronto.

Surveys on the new line have been going on for the past six years, and the ground has been so well laid out that the construction work will not be delayed in any way. At Enterprise the new line will cross the Bay of Quinte Railway. A number of construction gangs have been organized and work will be started in many places along the line at once.

EVIDENCE CROPS UP EVERY DAY

That Dodd's Kidney Pills Always Cure Kidney Disease.

Quebec Man Who Suffered From Headaches, Rundown System and Kidney Disease Finds Quick Relief and Permanent Cure.

COIN ROND SUR RICHELIEU, Vercheres Co., Que., March 18.—(Special.)—More evidence crops up in this vicinity every day to prove that for run-down people there is no remedy to equal Dodd's Kidney Pills. Among the many who have come forward with statements is Octave Chicoine, a well-known resident, whose testimony can easily be corroborated.

"Before using Dodd's Kidney Pills I suffered always from headaches," Mr. Chicoine states, "in fact my whole system was out of order. Dodd's Kidney Pills cured me, and I have had no return of any of my old troubles."

Dodd's Kidney Pills are popular all over this country, because they not only cure the pains and aches of the different diseases springing from disordered kidneys, but also give new life and energy all over the body. They do this naturally. They cure the kidneys. Cured kidneys strain all the impurities out of the blood, and the pure blood carries nutriment instead of poison to all the nerves and muscles. You have never heard of a person Dodd's Kidney Pills harmed. You hear of thousands who have been benefited by them.

FIVE PEOPLE LOSE THEIR LIVES IN LEVEL RAILWAY CROSSING ACCIDENT

OLD COUNTRYMEN SEND HOME $840 MONTHLY TO FAMILIES LEFT BEHIND

Mr. J. J. Turner in Letter to Aldermen Suggests a Plan to Help Bring the Families Out Here and Thus Have Money Spent at Home—Forty-two Families Concerned.

DETAILS OF SUGGESTION

In a letter to the individual aldermen, Mr. J. J. Turner states that forty-two Old Countrymen, in this city are sending home to their families, a total of $210 a week for their support. To the Aldermen he suggests that something should be done to bring the families out to Canada, and keep this money at home. The letter gives the details of a scheme by which this might be accomplished:

Our attention has been drawn to a matter of vital importance to the city, which we think should be dealt with at an early date. Briefly, the facts are these:

In the city at the present time are forty-two Old Countrymen who are supporting families in the Old Land, chiefly, for the reason that they were unable to bring their families with them when they emigrated, on account of lack of funds. These men are contributing on an average of $5 per week each for the support of their families at home, which means that $210.00 is going out of Peterborough every week, which ought to be spent here where the money is being earned.

Winnipeg's Plan.

There is a plan which has been adopted in Winnipeg with a great deal of success, and it is at the present time being used in Toronto, as a result of an address delivered by Mr. Bulman, Chairman of the Organization known as The Imperial Home Reunion Association of Winnipeg. To overcome sending of money out of the country, a number of men associated themselves together and guaranteed a certain amount according to the needs of the situation. We think if $100.00 each was guaranteed by 50 men, it would create a fund large enough to advance money to assist these men in bringing their families to them. The fund could be administered through the City Clerk as trustee, or some other gentleman appointed to the position, who would receive applications for a loan from the men who desired to ' assisted. This trustee would work in conjunction with an advisory board, selected from the guarantors.

The plan, as we understand it, is that applicants for assistance are submitted to the trustees, who confers with the advisory board, and if, after investigation, the case is approved by them, the applicant deposits one-fifth of the cost of transportation with the trustee, together with a signed agreement protecting the guarantors. The trustee is then authorized by the advisory board to forward the necessary railway and steamship tickets to bring out the members of the family, of whom full particulars are in the hands of an advisory board.

No Loss to Cities.

Experience in other cities shows that the loss to the guarantors is practically nil, while the gain to the various cities taking up such a scheme is great, the moral standpoint is one reason for the existence of such an association in this city; also the business side presents itself, and we must not forget the city's interests in the encouragement of home builders in our midst.

We feel that the matter is of the utmost importance and should be dealt with by the Retail Merchants' Association, Board of Trade, and City Council, so that the matter can be discussed, and the plan adopted to be put into working order as soon as possible in event of receiving favourable consideration.

No Foundation For The Story

Special to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, ONT., MARCH 19—When Dr. J. P. Molloy, M. P., for Provencher, was asked this morning as to a report that he was contemplating resigning his seat in the Commons to make way for Bourassa, he said: "There is absolutely no foundation for the story."

SAYS THE TORONTO LAWYERS ARE SKIMMING CREAM OFF LEGAL BUSINESS OF ONTARIO

OTTAWA, MARCH 19.—"The Toronto lawyers are skimming the cream off the legal business of the province, and the poor lawyer who has to send some of his work to Toronto, has to pay the Toronto lawyer more money for his services than he himself dare charge his clients." It was Mr. Proulx, M.P., K.C., of Prescott, in the Commons this morning, who made this statement, in the course of a discussion in committee of the bill introduced by Mr. Borden to amend the Judges' Act. Mr. Proulx declared the legal practice of Ontario was too much centred in the Provincial capital.

Emperor To Stay At Home

Special to The Examiner.

BERLIN, GERMANY, MARCH 19.—Closely following King George's announcement of his intention to remain home for the present, comes Emperor William's this morning to the effect that the Imperial family would not leave Berlin. While the official reason given is 'internal politics,' it is stated that Churchill's vigorous speech yesterday has necessitated an immediate conference between the Emperor and his advisers.

Bonar Law Says the Minimum Wage Bill is Fatally Defective

GOVERNMENT DISAPPOINTED

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, MARCH 19.—Bonar Law, the leader of the Opposition in the Commons, this afternoon indicated that the Unionists are not disposed to let Premier Asquith's minimum wage bill get through without opposition, notwithstanding it meant a step towards the settlement of the disaster spreading coal strike. Law declared it was an alleged cure that would be worse than the disease. He said it was fatally defective, lacking in provisions for enforcement and bereft of satisfying finality for either side of the quarrel. The government is evidently disappointed with the action of the opposition. Asquith pointed out that the minimum wage clause was only made active for three years and was then withdrawable.

IN INTEREST OF CITY

Strong Delegation When City's Bill is Presented

A meeting of the Legal Committee was held last night, with Ald. Brown presiding. Aldermen Gillespie, Anderson, and Gordon, and Mayor Bradburn were present. A communication was read from Mr. E. A. Peck stating that the city bill would come up in the Legislature on Thursday, March 21st.

It was felt that a strong deputation of the Aldermen should go to Toronto to look after the city's interests and, on motion of Ald. Gordon, seconded by Ald. Anderson, it was decided that the members of the committee should go up on Wednesday night, together with Mayor Bradburn, City Clerk Armstrong, and Acting City Solicitor Mr. L. M. Hayes. Ald. Duncan was appointed in the place of Ald. Gillespie, who said he could not get away on Thursday.

The Bank Statement

Special to The Examiner

OTTAWA, ONT., MARCH 19.—The Bank report for February, issued today, shows demand deposits of three hundred and twenty-one million dollars, an increase of five and three-quarter millions over last month. The total liabilities are one billion, one hundred and sixty million dollars, an increase of seventeen millions. The greatest note circulation during the month was eight millions less than the greatest circulation last month.

BIG CROWD AT RED MILL

There was such a record crowd in attendance at the Red Mill last night that it kept the police busy moving the crowd along and keeping the pavement clear. The superb East Lynne pictures in three films were the drawing card. Every one is familiar with the book, and the play, and should not miss the chance of seeing the pictures, the effect of which is enhanced by the delightful singing of the Red Mill trio. The East Lynne pictures will be shown to-night for the last time.

Peterborough Young Man Arrested in Lindsay at the Request of the Orillia Chief of Police

FEELS HIS POSITION

LINDSAY, MARCH 18.—On Saturday Chief Chilton arrested a Peterborough young man of excellent character on the charge of theft. The offence is alleged to have been committed in Orillia and his arrest was the result of a message received from Chief Reid of Orillia. The young man was never in court before and feels his position keenly.

Fifteen minutes after Chief Chilton received the message from Orillia he arrested the young man in the Benson house.

THE FIRST MOSQUITO

The first mosquito discovered this season was exhibited in the Editorial sanctum of the Examiner this afternoon by Mr. Alfred Cooney, who discovered the insect making an onslaught on his hand. This, coupled with the fact that thunder could be heard rumbling in the distance, this morning, is a sign of fast approaching spring.

Col. Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, Presents Notice of Motion for an Appreciation of the Services of the Veterans of 1866 and 1870

PETERBOROUGH'S VETERANS

OTTAWA, March 19. — According to a resolution of which Col. Hughes gave notice last night, between eight and ten thousand surviving members of the Fenian raids of 1866 and 1870, will have their patriotism and valour finally rewarded by a gift of one hundred dollars each from the Federal Treasury.

The resolution of the Minister of Militia is as follows: "Resolved, that it is expedient to provide for the payment of $100 to every person residing in Canada at the date of the passing of an act based upon this resolution, who was regularly enlisted in and served with the militia called out for active service in the year 1866 by the Governments of Canada, Nova Scotia or New Brunswick, or in the year 1870 by the goverament of Canada, with the exception of certain battalions of riflemen formed for service in the Northwest."

PETERBOROUGH'S VETERANS

Peterborough's surviving veterans of the Fenian Raids number about 25, including the following: Colonel J. W. Miller, Messrs. J. D. Collins, F. R. Yokome, Geo. Stenton, R. Tivey, H. D. Holmes, John Kylie, Wm. Langford, J. Gray, George Rose, Erasmus Green, Edward Green, W. Montgomery, Fred McCorry, Wm. Might, P. Thompson, George Kingdon, R. J. Anderson, W. Anthony, Fred Mitchell, Patrick Kennedy of Lakefield, Dawson Kennedy, J. I. Davidson, Jno. Mowry, Alex. Fitzgerald, Harry Rush, Henderson Nesbitt and J. B. McWilliams.

The grant is given in appreciation of the services of the veterans at the time of the invasion of Fenians from across the border. Their number is rapidly dwindling and every year finds the roll call unanswered here and there and the vacancies in the ranks have to be closed in.

In Peterborough there is a Veterans' Association which meets from time to time and is principally for the purpose of keeping alive the old spirit of the Veterans.

Piles Not Taken Seriously

"Annoying, but not dangerous," seems to be the way many think of piles in the early stages. But gradually they become worse, until they prevent sleep, undermine the nervous system and make a wreck of life.

When the doctor is finally consulted he recommends the surgeon's knife as the only means of cure. It may cure or it may kill. The risk is yours.

But there is an easier and surer way to relieve and cure piles. That is by applying Dr. Chase's Ointment. The earlier you begin the cure of this ointment the quicker the cure. But you need not be discouraged because you have suffered for ten or fifteen years. It would be difficult to imagine worse cases than have been cured by Dr. Chase's Ointment. Relief comes at once and cure is just as certain if you persist in the use of this great ointment.

Man Has Both Thighs Fractured But Crawls Through Snow For a Quarter of a Mile

NO HOPE FOR RECOVERY

Examiner Special:

LONDON, ONT., MARCH 19.—Asa Robertson, Innisknilen, was horribly injured last night while walking home on the tracks near Petrolea, he being struck by a night passenger train. The engine crew knew nothing of the accident. Robertson, with both thighs fractured and ribs broken, lay in the snow drift beside the tracks for some time. Recovering consciousness, he crawled laboriously to the nearest house a quarter of a mile away, and his outcries were heard. He was rushed to the hospital immediately, but no hopes are held out for his recovery.

Miss Hallihan Goes Abroad To Study Singing

She Will Study Grand Opera in London, England, and Later in Paris

Miss Lavina Hallihan, Peterborough's splendid soprano, promises to come into her own, vocally, through opportunity to study grand opera, in London. She leaves on Wednesday next for Halifax, whence on Saturday she will sail for London, England.

Miss Hallihan has long been known as the possessor of a soprano voice of superb natural quality, and it was inevitable that as soon as competent judges of music could hear her singing that her artistic capabilities would be recognized. The first important recognition Miss Hallihan owes indirectly to Earl Grey, and directly to Mr. R. J. Dewey, who assigned Miss Hallihan the leading role in the opera presented by Peterborough talent in the Earl Grey competition in Toronto two springs ago. In this Miss Hallihan made a striking success and revealed the possession not only of vocal powers of exceptional character, but also of splendid dramatic powers. Earl Grey was especially delighted and has since remained her faithful friend, and liberal patron. Not long since, he placed the sum of $600 at Miss Hallihan's disposal, to assist in the promotion of her vocal studies, which she has been pursuing for some time past, in Toronto, with much success.

Recently, Miss Hallihan had the honour of singing for Col. Meighan, the promoter and manager of the Montreal Grand Opera Company, on the occasion of the Company playing a short season in Toronto. He was, of course, delighted with her voice, and dramatic capability; but recognized that opportunity for special study of grand opera, in London and Paris, would result in her making a splendid success. He took more than a casual interest in the young Peterborough vocalist, and by his cooperation with Earl Gray, some generous patrons of music in Toronto and some friends and admirers in Peterborough, Miss Hallihan is afforded the opportunity of pursuing her studies in London, at first, and in Paris, afterwards.

Col. Meighan suggested the special study of certain roles for which she would be specially well adapted. Among these is that of "Marguerite" in Faust, and those who know Miss Hallihan can appreciate what a splendid "Marguerite" she would make, when special training shall have given her voice and dramatic talent the necessary histrionic torsure.

Those who know her best can best judge of her vocal and dramatic capabilities, her devotion to her art, and her industry in study prophesy a successful and brilliant future. The best wishes of her hosts of Peterborough friends go with her across the briny ocean.

Messrs Ennis & Armstrong have pleasure in advising the ladies of Peterborough that their Millinery Rooms are now open for the season and they will gladly show their very up-to-date stock of Millinery. When looking around do not forget to call at Ennis & Armstrong over Payne's Drug Store—Entrance Simcoe St. 1 16

THE POLICY OF ABANDONMENT.

Sam Hunter, in the Toronto World, holds Mr. Borden up to obloquy in cartoon. He represents the Premier "standing with reluctant feet" on a wharf labelled "indecision" and Mr. W. F. McLean bathing in the waters of "A Forward Naval Policy" and exclaiming to Mr. Borden, "Come on in, Bobby, the water's fine." Mr. Borden's indecision, his do-nothing, delay policy in the matter of Canadian naval defence is not only antagonizing such outspoken supporters as Mr. McLean, but is saddening every patriotic Canadian, who stands for the good name and credit of Canada, and also our British brethren who are disappointed that Canada, of all the great dominions, holds back in the work of contributing its share of the burden of imperial defence; instead of taking a forward step, Canada, through Mr. Borden, has actually taken a backward step by cancelling the orders for ships for the Canadian navy, contracts made in good faith. It is humiliating enough that this should be done at all, but it is more humiliating that the Canadian naval policy is abandoned by the party that claims a monopoly of imperial sentiment and British connection sentiment, and abandoned at the behest of a element, hostile to everything British, by whose help the ultra-British government party gained power and holds power. Even an element in Mr. Borden's government condemns, if not specifically, effectively, Premier Borden's hesitating, halting, limping, undecided attitude upon the navy. The Winnipeg Telegram, the organ of the Minister of the Interior in Mr. Borden's government, says:

> "Canada's part is to hold the Atlantic trade route inviolate and to assist Australia and New Zealand in the protection of the Pacific. That is a big programme, but then we are a big country, and can make ourselves small only by shirking our responsibilities."

This means a Canadian navy and Canadian participation with Great Britain in the gigantic burden of imperial defence, a participation that seems to be more urgently called for now than at any other period, when Great Britain is straining every resource to keep the British navy up to the demands which the activity of other nations render imperative. Two years ago Mr. Borden was all on fire with the idea of Canada aiding Britain in the work of imperial defence. He was returned to power and has the power to implement his demands. But Mr. Bourassa interposed the veto and Mr. Borden abandoned the idea of Canadian naval defence and, so far as we have any assurance to the contrary, it is permanently abandoned.

RATHER DANGEROUS POWERS.

There is no denying that the health of the individual and of the community is a supreme matter of import, and we should welcome every proposal that is designed to promote the health interests of the public. Heretofore, municipal boards of health have been ineffective, mainly through their lack of power. They could only give advice, and municipal councils, who are no more inclined than ordinary mortals to act upon good advice, had all the power of carrying the recommendations of the Board of Health into practice. And municipal councils have never shown any undue anxiety to carry out the recommendations of a Board of Health, especially those which involve the expenditure of money.

But we are to have a decided change, possibly an error in the other direction. The Provincial Secretary has introduced a bill relating to the public health, which gives boards of health the powers they have hitherto lacked; and to an extraordinary extent. Under this bill, if it becomes law, boards of health will have a free and unrestrainable hand in the expenditure of money. The bill for any expenditure a board of health may see fit to incur must be paid "forthwith." This is a clause in the bill of so much interest to ratepayers that it is given entire, as follows:

> The treasurer of the municipality shall forthwith upon demand, pay the amount of any account for services performed under the direction of the board, and materials and supplies furnished, or for any expenditure incurred by the board, or by the medical officer of health, or sanitary inspector, in carrying out the provisions of this act or the regulations, after the board, by resolution, has approved of the account and a copy of the resolution certified by the chairman and secretary has been filed in the office of the treasurer.

While, under the old order of things, there was need, in order to make Boards of Health of any practical value to provide some means of giving them some executive power in regard to the expenditure necessary to carry out their plans, the proposed bill seems to give them undue and dangerous powers. This extraordinary power is made all the more objectionable by the means provided in the bill for the constitution of the board. They are to be appointed by the Council and do not represent the people directly. The giving of such a body unlimited, and unquestioned, and unquestionable power to spend the people's money, is contrary to the spirit of our political constitution. It is a well-recognized, fundamental principle that expenditure of the people's money must be made by direct representation of the people. A government, in Canada, cannot expend a cent legitimately without the consent of the people, expressed through Parliament. But under the new bill we have Boards of Health appointed by a Council, given unlimited power to spend the people's money. While Boards of Health may not abuse their power of spending money, yet is a dangerous power to invest any appointed body with. While the Board should have some power in this direction, its power should be subject to some form of modification—some check. Another feature of the bill that eliminates the idea or fact of municipal or popular control is that which makes a medical officer practically a life appointee. The bill provides that "every medical health officer shall hold office during good behaviour . . . and no medical health officer shall be removed from office except for cause and with the approval of the Provincial Board." This is barking back rather strongly to bureaucratic management of local affairs. Altogether, the new health bill will stand watching, and invites criticism, though its object is a desirable one in making Boards of Health practical and effective, and not mere purveyors of advice, which is too often disregarded by municipal councils to the detriment of the interests of the public health.

STAY IN ONTARIO.

(London Advertiser.)

There are just now particular reasons against the Ontario man's going West to farm. It becomes every month more glaringly apaprent that the defeat of reciprocity is a heavy setback to the prairie country. It means depression of prices of western produce so long as the American market is closed. Opportunity came and she is bald behind. The West is tied down to a European market and a narrow outlet through eastern Canada.

Of course the prairie region will go on growing through its own momentum from vast productivity. Good crops will still be profitable, even if the price of wheat remains from ten to 15 cents a bushel lower than in the United States. The profit will be due in part to the cheapness of the land; the land will have to be cheaper as an inducement. To Europeans and Americans needing land the West will still be a magnet. But it does not seem probable that the West can go on increasing at the expense of the older provinces which are so much nearer to the great markets and have an urban population of their own consuming to some extent their produce.

Some day the Hudson Bay route will help the West, the Pacific may be crossed by ships bearing grain to markets of the future in Asia, but just now the eastern farmer may well keep hold of the bird in the hand "Stay in Ontario" is the best advice to a young farmer to-day. The West is for the present bottled up.

A MUTINY IN CAUCUS.

(London Advertiser.)

The Toronto Telegram prints some of the secrets of the Conservative Caucus which it says leaked out through breaks in the pipe line of confidential talk.

The Government decided to temporarily renew the iron and steel bounties, and the decision was communicated to the party caucus by Hon. W. T. White. To quote the Telegram:

> "Then arose Arthur Meighen, M. P., of Port la Prairie, and in the language of the story that reached Toronto 'kicked the whole top of the Finance Minister's head off.' The phrase does not imply the lack of cordiality towards Hon. W. T. White, personally, but emphasizes the fact that the young member for Portage la Prairie tore Mr. White's arguments to tatters and left the bounty proposal without a leg to stand on. Ontario protectionists went in at the breach which Arthur Meighen opened in the wall. Hon. W. T. White was powerless to meet the enemy in the gates, but the old guard came to the rescue in the closure and "by common consent the House adjourned."

PREMIER WHITNEY AND THE ELK LAKE TELEGRAM

(The Globe)

The Opposition will be warranted in bringing the Elk Lake incident before the Legislature at every opportunity until Sir James Whitney either definitely acknowledges authorship of the telegram that announced a wholesale bribe or repudiates it, and promises to punish the person guilty of forging his name to the message.

About the essential facts there is no doubt. The people of the Elk Lake district had been urging for three years or more the construction of a branch line connecting the district with the T. & N. O. The Commissioners had nothing toward its construction. Last summer inquiry was made as to the possible traffic and the engineering practicability of the project, but no decision was come to, or, at all events, announced. When the election came on Mr. Shillington, the Conservative candidate, discovered that the Government's neglect of the transportation question in the North was likely to cost him his seat. He made strong representations to the Government, and a few days before the election Mr. Englehart announced on behalf of the T. & N. O. Commission, that the line would be built.

The people in the North were not deeply impressed by the announcement. They had been promised railway facilities before the election of 1908 that were not provided for years thereafter, and they insisted on something definite. The result was that several telegrams were despatched from Toronto to well-known people in the Elk Lake district confirming the announcement that the line would be built. The bribe — for under the circumstances that is what it was — proved successful. Mr. Shillington was returned. Now, when the Opposition confronts Sir James with his own signature to a telegram that is discreditable to him, the Premier will neither acknowledge nor deny its authorship. In response to a remark by Hon. A. G. MacKay he seems to imply that he did not sign the Elk Lake telegram, but that it was forged and "by someone not in Ottawa here, either."

Sir James Whitney may regard that as humour, but it is a sorry joke. If he signed the telegram he ought to admit that he did so and take the censure that his successful effort at bribery by wholesale justly calls down on his head. He knows, no one better, that the honest thing and the decent thing would have been an announcement at the close of the inquiry last summer or the deferring of that announcement till after the election. As it was, the people of Elk Lake were notified by telegram early in December that the line would be built, yet in mid-March the contracts for it have not yet been awarded. There was only one urgent reason for the Whitney telegram, and that was the danger of the Government candidate in Temiskaming.

If Sir James did not sign the telegram, and did not authorize anyone to sign it for him, he ought to search out and punish the forger instead of pretending that the Opposition had something to do with it. The original of the message is in the office of the telegraph company that handled it. The signature of Sir James Whitney is fairly well known. It should not be difficult to settle the question of forgery. And if the original signature has been altered there is the more reason for inquiry. The Telegraph business in the North country is in the hands of the T. & N. O. Commission. The people are asked to put their trust in that service. How can they do so if there is a possibility of the substitution of the signature of Sir James Whitney for some other during the transmission, or delivery of a telegram of such an important nature?

There is but one thing that will clear up the ugly suspicions aroused by the Premier's method of dealing in the House with the Elk Lake telegram: the production of the original as filed at the office from which it was despatched, and of the message as sent from the office at which it was received. If the telegram was a forgery that will disclose it.

quence of Hon. George E. Foster.

"The caucus dispersed with as much joy as the British troops exhibited in their withdrawal from the scene of Sir John Moore's burial at Corunna."

The Telegram goes on to say that the leaders of the revolt were protectionists "fighting for a divorce between protection and the exploitation of protection for the upbuilding of mergers and other forms of high finance." They were fighting also "for the isolation of the Borden Government from the alliances which made the Laurier Government the servant of private greed rather than the soldier of the public good." The last phrase, of course, is a rhetorical flourish to enable the Telegram to square itself with its Conservative readers. The Laurier Government challenged the forces of private greed on Sept. 21, and the Borden Government won with their help. The Laurier Government abolished the iron and steel bounties, and the Borden Government would have renewed them, on the Telegram's own admission, but for a mutiny in the Conservative ranks. The Telegram says that the mutineers numbered 26, but, with the exception of Mr. Meighen, they would have voted for the bounties rather than for Laurier's restoration to power. What a magnificent assertion of principle!

The Borden Government could not afford to add to its heavy stock of trouble in the present session, but the Big Interests will demand their rewards and will get it in some form. The manipulation of the tariff by means of the proposed commission will give the Government an early opportunity of paying its election debts. Mr. Cockshutt, who speaks for the majority of the Government's supporters in the House, frankly chalks the line which the Administration must toe.

CAUSES SICKNESS

Good Health Impossible With a Disordered Stomach.

There is nothing that will create sickness or cause more trouble than a disordered stomach, and many people daily contract serious maladies simply through disregard or abuse of the stomach.

We urge every one suffering from any stomach derangement, indigestion, or dyspepsia, whether acute or chronic, to try Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets, with the distinct understanding that we will refund their money without question or formality, if after reasonable use of this medicine they are not satisfied with the results. We recommend them to our customers every day, and have yet to hear of any one who has not been benefitted by them. Three sizes, 25c., 50c. and $1.00 a box. Sold in Peterborough only at our store.—The Rexall Store, McDermid and Jury.

ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION

Articles of incorporation of the Southern New England Railway to build a Grand Trunk extension, were filed recently in New Hampshire. The plans call for a line from Lebanon, N.H., through from Vermont at Lebanon, Grafton, Sullivan, and Merrimac Counties to Concord, thence down the Merrimac River to the New Hampshire-Massachusetts State line. The Massachusetts Railway Commission has already aproved the estimates of the Southern New England for its road through Hampdon and Worcester counties in that State.

A BRANCH LINE

It is understood that the Grand Trunk Pacific is planning to build a branch line from Napadoggan, the first divisional point west of Moncton, N.B., to Fredericton, a distance of 45 miles, to provide a more direct route to tide-water at St. John through a connection with the St. John Valley. No final decision with regard to this route has, however, been arrived at as yet.

A Chance For Local Fans To Select Name For Ball Club And Get Free Admission

Management of Peterborough Baseball Club Wants a Suitable Nickname for Their Canadian League Team and Asks the Local Fans to Assist in Securing a Proper Title.

Can you pick a nick-name for the Peterborough Canadian League team?

The Peterborough fan who sends in a name that will be selected by the management will receive a book of tickets admitting him, or her, to ten local games, free of charge.

The local management want a name, and, unable to pick one to suit themselves, have decided to ask the fans to help them out. Here is a chance to show your ingenuity. Send in your selection to the newspapers and, by so doing, you may get a chance to see ten ball games without any cost to yourself other than that of a stamp. The competition will close on April 15th, on which date the Executive will make their selection from the names submitted. You may be the lucky person—it is worth trying, at all events. Most of the teams in the circuit have nicknames. The Ottawa team will be known as the Senators, the London squad naturally are the Cockneys. Guelph Club shares with the Torontos the name of Maple Leafs, and so it goes. Address your selection to the "Nick-name" Editor of the Examiner and you may win the prize.

MANAGER TEMPLIN IS SIGNING UP HIS TEAM FOUR CONTRACTS RECEIVED

Secretary Davidson of the Peterborough Ball Club, received from Manager Templin four signed contracts of players whom he has already rounded up for the local team. The lot includes a catcher, a shortstop, and two outfielders, all of whom have had considerable minor League experience. Their names will be given out in a day or two when Manager Templin will send along some "dope" on their records, etc. In his letter, the Manager states that he has practically closed with a third-baseman, and a cracking good pitcher, who have not, however, yet signed their contracts. He is also negotiating with two more catchers, one of which he will use in the outfield and is after a top-notch pitcher, who is at present the property of one of the Southern Atlantic League teams. He is delighted with the prospects, having already the nucleus of what he considers will be a club that will battle for the rag all through the season. As "Old Folks" has had the advantage of a year in the Canadian League, he should know just what calibre of a team he needs, and the local management regard it as most encouraging that he should speak so highly of the men he has landed.

Edmunds-Hudson Go Should Be Best Bout Ever Staged Locally

Great interest has been taken in the announcement that Artie Edmunds is to box here next week, especially in view of the fact that the Toronto "Pocket Hercules" is slated to go ten rounds against Tony Hudson, his Detroit rival. Some time ago Edmunds was matched to meet Hudson in Porcupine, and went North for that purpose, only to find that Hudson failed to put in an appearance. Ever since then Edmunds has been spoiling for a chance at Hudson, and in the match here next Tuesday night, in the Grand Opera House, he will get his wish. Harry Westerby of Toronto, and Kid Ryan of Rochester, are also billed for the same night, so that there will be two big bouts instead of one, as well as two cracking preliminaries. It looks like the best bill ever offered here.

TWO GAMES FOR JUNIOR CITY CHAMPIONSHIP TO-NIGHT

There will be two games for the junior city championship and the Clarke-Graham Cup at Brock street rink to-night.

The teams have been practising for these games for some time and the youngsters are all in the best of shape. The ice while soft is in better condition than would be imagined from the weather outside and some good hockey should be seen. The Midgets and Northern Lights come together at 8 o'clock, while the Thistles clash with the St. John's Club of Lakefield immediately at the close of the first game.

The Thistles will have the following team:

Goal, Huycke; point, Matthews; cover, Smith; rover, Long; centre, Knapman; wings, Cavanagh, Richardson.

Fred Kelly will referee both games.

Jim Flynn "White Hope"

Every age of pugilism has had its so-called "trial horses," fighters that ambitious scrappers had to go against before being deemed eligible to meet the champion in any particular class.

In the old days it was Joe Chaynski who coveted the heavyweight crown. Later it was Tom Sharkey, and to-day it is Jim Flynn, buster of "white hopes," who stands as a barrier between each budding "hope" and the crown of Jack Johnson.

These are the men whom the champions of the past two decades have looked to as they informed each new challenger to "lick him first and I'll give you a fight."

Kept Out of Championship.

All these "trial horses" have only been kept out of the championship themselves through a misfortune in the matter of size and weight, being too heavy for the middleweight class and too light and small of stature to class with the big men of championship caliber.

Yet, in spite of their handicap in this respect, each was considered of such class that the heavyweight title holder always has been compelled to accept a challenge issued by any fighter who has given these "trial horses" a good fight, while they have knocked out and thus eliminated as championship possibilities many big men who were pounds over their weight and who been freely advertised as coming champions.

Jim Flynn, the present "trial horse," has been prominent as a "buster of white hopes" since that historic affair at Reno, when a black man won the world's heavyweight championship. Considered an impossibility as a "white hope" himself, inasmuch as Jack Johnson, the present champion, had in the pot simply toyed with him in the ring until he got wind and ready to knock him out and Sam Langford had likewise tamed the trick on two different occasions. Flynn's spectacular work as a "buster of white hopes" recently has marked him as now being the best of that brigade, and the only white man in the ring who could give Jack Johnson a battle.

Local Bonspiel Was Concluded Last Evening

The local bonspiel was concluded last evening in spite of the adverse weather conditions. The postponement of the final game was considered inadvisable in view of the lateness of the season. With the fans clamouring for the scalp of the loser and shimmering sheet of sticky ice on which to play the game, the outlook for a match of the brand that all curlers like, was not a very hopeful one. However, about 8.30 o'clock the two contending rinks donned their fighting suits and trundled out the rocks, and to the tune of the rooters who held down the boards, shot the initial stone. It took about twenty such stones before the players began to get wise to the eccentricities of the soft ice, and when they did, the game warmed appreciably. All things taken into consideration the game was fast and full of sensational surprises, which furnished excellent material for the curling enthusiasts to dilate upon as they watched the proceedings from the gallery, while a few of the more venturesome, lined the foot boards, inhaled large quantities of fog and handed out advice freely.

The first half of the match practically decided the outcome, as at this stage Skip Fitzgerald's rink had the game well in hand, being ahead by several shots. But in spite of this, many of Skip Foote's supporters had him booked to win, and refused to take his opponents lead at the conclusion of the tenth end seriously. Both quartettes played a fair average game and the final score hardly does justice to the quality of the game. Several fine plays by Skip Fitzgerald's rink early in the running was responsible for the strong lead of eleven shots, which marked the conclusion of the match.

C. James	J. Brock
L. Dobbin	W. R. Turner
W. T. Hall	R. Best
H. F. Foote	J. E. A. Fitzgerald
Skip 5	Skip 16

Unless the weather tightens up, the curling season is practically over. There only remains one event to be disposed of and that is the annual banquet, which will also be featured by the distribution of prizes. This event will, in all probability, take place next week.

Blood Poisoning Results From Digging Out Corns

To really make a corn go away, to remove it for all time, there is just one way. Paint on Putnam's Painless Corn and Wart Extractor, a soothing helpful remedy that separates the corn from the good flesh, lifts it out root and branch—does it quickly and without pain. The name tells the story, Putnam's Painless Corn and Wart Extractor, price 25c. Look out for dangerous substitutes for "Putnam's," which is sold by druggists.

BASEBALL

The Ottawas expect to do their training at Niagara Falls, using the grounds of Niagara university, which have been placed at their disposal. As Niagara University have a first-class nine, the Ottawas will get the benefit of some good practice games with the students. The training squad will assemble around April 15, putting in a month of training and then coming north for the opening of the season.

The Guelph Maple Leafs in the Canadian League appear to have a strong team gathered for the 1912 season. The players already signed up are: Pitchers Gur, Mason, Windsor; A. L. Orth, Liverpool, N. Y.; Tiny Schuman, Jimmy Neber, Buffalo; a left-hander—Ostchers Gosh All Hemlock, an Indian; Frank O'Connor, Buffalo. First-base, Jimmy Brady of Buffalo. Second-base, Manager Geo. Needham. Third base, Isaac, Toronto; Short-stop, Hackbush, Hamilton, or Richard O'Connor, Buffalo. Centre-field, Swartzmier. Left-field, Jack Fryer. Right-field, Foemh, Buffalo.

The Best Cough Syrup is Easily Made at Home

Costs Little and Acts Quickly. Money Refunded If It Fails.

This recipe makes 16 ounces of cough syrup, and saves you about $2.00 as compared with ordinary cough remedies. It stops obstinate coughs—even whooping cough—in a hurry, and is splendid for sore lungs, asthma, croup, hoarseness and other throat troubles.

Mix two cups of granulated sugar with one cup of warm water, and stir for two minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a 16-ounce bottle, and add the Sugar Syrup. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours. Tastes good.

This takes right hold of a cough and gives almost instant relief. It stimulates the appetite, and is slightly laxative—both excellent features.

Pinex, as perhaps you know, is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, rich in guaiacol and the other natural healing pine elements.

No other preparation will do the work of Pinex in this recipe, although strained honey can be used instead of the sugar syrup, if desired.

Thousands of housewives in the United States and Canada now use this Pinex and Sugar Syrup recipe. This plan has often been imitated, but the old successful formula has never been equaled. Its low cost and quick results have made it immensely popular.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

UNIFORMS ARE ORDERED

Peterborough Ball Club Will Wear White Suits Trimmed With Blue This Season

The Peterborough Canadian League ball team will cavort around the diamond this year in neat uniforms of white, trimmed with blue, it having been decided to stick to the colours that have been worn by all Peterborough sporting organizations for lo, these many years. The uniforms were ordered some time ago and will be here in a day or two. They will be of white with a blue "P" on the cap, and "Peterborough" across the breast.

AN IRREGULAR PROCEEDING

"There is only one left—the present one. Shall we dance, or sit out?" They passed into the conservatory, and sat in an alcove screened by palms. He was bolder now than he had been a week before. He held her hand.

"You are surprised?"

"Yes," in a whisper.

"I have kept my promise. You are not angry with me?"

"No."

"Listen. I arrived several days earlier than I expected. When I called here I was told that you had been offended at a letter which your father had received and unthinkingly shown you, in which I asked permission to pay my addresses to you. You will be glad to hear that I never wrote that letter, and knew nothing whatever about it."

"You never wrote it?"

"Never. It was written as a joke by a friend of mine to whom I had shown your photograph as the prettiest girl I had ever seen. Knowing that I should visit you he prepared a little reception for me by writing that letter to your father, copying my handwriting as well as he could. I do not wonder that you took the first train to the seaside. Can you wonder that I followed you in the next?" He knew he could kiss her—and he was not a man to miss the opportunities.

"I deceived you Hilarie. But I did it for a purpose. I did it because I loved you—because I had loved you ever since I first saw you as a child ten years ago. The dance is finishing; your partner will be here in a moment. I have one more confession to make. That collision on the rink was—well, not altogether an accident."

"Oh, heavens. Then you guessed at the time that I really intended to trip you up?"

"What," he exclaimed. "You intended to trip me up?"

"Y-yes. And you knew it?"

"No, my sweet deceiver; but I do know that I intended to trip you up."

PETERBORO' MILLINERY PARLOUR'S OPENING

A visit to the Peterborough millinery parlours will well repay the time spent. The rooms which formerly constituted the old T.A.S. quarters have been entirely remodelled at considerable expense and are admirably adapted to the use for which they are intended. The apartments, which are located over the Canadian Express office, George street, are divided into two rooms, one for show purposes and the other as a work room. Here all the latest styles from London, Paris and New York are displayed. Many of the new hats show some of the oddities of the new hat trimming. As for instance, the upstanding way feathers are placed and the brim edges overbound, or edged with roses. Many of the new straw models have these same details. A predominating colour is yellow. Sumptuous, royal and elegant, it will shed its effulgence upon us at society functions, and other social gatherings. There are many others quite as attractive that will appeal to the woman who is thinking of her new spring hat.

The display will be formally opened to the public on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week, and will be in charge of Miss Horsfield.

HAD VERY BAD COUGH.

Tickling Sensation In Throat.

Could Not Sleep At Night.

A bad cough, with that distressing tickling sensation in the throat, is one of the most aggravating coughs a person can possibly have.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup will quickly stop that tickling in the throat which causes the dry cough that keeps you awake at night, for the simple reason that it is so rich in the healing virtues of the Norway pine tree, it cannot help but do otherwise.

Miss C. Danielson, Bowsman River, Man., writes:—"Last fall I had a very bad cough and a tickling sensation in my throat. It was so bad I could not sleep at night, so I went to a druggist and told him I wanted something for my cold and he advised me to try Dr Wood's Norway Pine Syrup which I did and after taking one bottle I was completely cured. Let me recommend Dr Wood's Norway Pine Syrup to any one who suffers from a cough or throat irritation."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25 cents.

Satisfied Policy-Holder

[COPY]

Toronto, March 1st, 1912.

W. H. Hill, Esq.,
Manager,
Sun Life Assurance Co.,
Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Sir,— I wish to thank the Sun Life Assurance Company, through you, for the prompt and very satisfactory settlement of my 15 year Endowment Policy, No. 64345, which matured and was paid me to-day.

I have also a 15 year Endowment maturing to-day in another leading ——— Company.

The contrast, in the results, in favour of your Company is so marked that I want you to know it, but I am at a loss to know how such a difference could honestly occur. When I tell you that the profits in your Company are three and one-third times the profits in the other Company referred to, and this too notwithstanding I paid the other Company $1.15 per year more per $1000 than I paid you, you will realize my inability to comprehend the cause.

This is surely a tribute to the management of the Sun Life, and I am so well pleased I have applied for further insurance with you.

Incidentally, I would like to say a word for your loan privilege. As you are aware, I borrowed some money on my policy, a little over a year ago, which enabled me to obtain a substantial interest in a town site in the Northwest, and you will be pleased to learn that it has already yielded substantial gain and gives promise to pay hundreds per cent., so that it is impossible to fully realize the value of that Policy to me.

I thought as an old Peterborough boy you would be pleased to know I am delighted with the result.

Yours truly,
(Signed) ROBERT E. DOLAN.

Spring Opening

Formal Presentation of the

Authentic Spring Fashions

An Event of Supreme Style Importance

Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday

March 20th, 21st, 22nd, and 23rd

Our Spring Opening is the formal introduction of Fashion's Favourites in this city, and as such is a happening of great interest to every woman.

We have included in this display every prominent Fashion style-modification; and we CAN state with decided emphasis, that every article of merchandise we have assembled for this Season has been most carefully selected from Eastern and other recognized style and trade centres. The dominating idea in mind when making these selections was to assemble such merchandise that would meet YOUR preferences, as well as being in accord with prevailing Spring Fashions.

The lovely freshness of every garment, the crisp newness of the styles, and above all the high standard of quality up to which every article of merchandise we have gathered measures—all combine to make this Spring Opening a notable Style-event that you should bend every effort to attend promptly.

You are cordially invited to attend, and we earnestly desire your acceptance of the invitation.

Don't miss seeing the Grand Window Display To-night and To-morrow

OSHAWA IS INTERESTED IN GARBAGE REMOVAL QUESTION

The question of garbage disposal is beginning to interest the town of Oshawa. The following is from the Oshawa Vindicator:

At a recent council meeting a letter was read about an incinerator for the disposal of garbage from Mr. J. G. Pickard, of Toronto. It was referred to the Board of Works to report upon. The subject has been one of interest to The Vindicator for the past two or three years, and the editor, knowing that Haileybury had erected one of these plants, wrote the President of the Board of Trade as to its workings. His reply is appended, and furnishes the Board of Works something to work upon.

The Vindicator has also ascertained that such a plant suitable for Oshawa need not cost the town more than $7,500, and we think it is up to the Board of Works to make further enquiries before reporting. The following is the letter referred to from the President of the Board of Trade:

The Vindicator, Oshawa.

Dear Sir,—Re Incinerator—I was chosen as one of two gentlemen by our Council to visit all incinerators in Quebec and Ontario, and we chose a combination of three we saw, and I am pleased to be able to say that the one Mr. J. Pickard erected here is a perfect success.

The scavenger here took down a dead horse, weighing about 1,200 lbs. and he wrote to the local papers here saying that he burnt it up in three hours, with only a few odd sticks of wood.

I have seen the plant working several times and it only takes about a half cord of wood to burn 30 loads of garbage. Now, in winter, we use a couple of barrow loads of coal for 10 loads. Of course all our merchants here burn their boxes and barrels, and that cheapens our burning.

One scavenger burns all our rubbish from 4000 people for $225 per year and charges the people so much a load for removal.

In my estimation "incinerating" is the only safe way to dispose of garbage.

If you decide to erect one, try and get it erected upon the side of a hill, to get all the draft you can. We erected ours upon the side of a gully that runs up from a large lake.

GOOD REASONS

For Demanding the Original Remedy, Newbro's Herpicide.

If you knew it, you would not willingly accept counterfeit money. Instead you would probably raise a disturbance and seek some means of redress.

Why then accept a preparation said to be "just as good as Newbro's Herpicide?" You know it is a counterfeit, an imitation of the real thing. You want the original dandruff germ destroyer, Herpicide, and you can get it, too, if you insist.

Redress is always possible in such an instance. The most effective method is to trade where you get what you ask for and no suggestions offered.

With the death of the dandruff germ the hair stops falling and is permitted to resume its natural growth and beauty. Such results follow the use of Newbro's Herpicide. It stops itching of the scalp almost instantly.

A counterfeit article is never "just as good." Herpicide is sold and guaranteed by all druggists.

Applications may be obtained at all good barber shops and hair dressers.

EMIGRANTS SEEK TO AVOID PETERBOROUGH

Several days overdue and no intelligence of their present whereabouts, fifty-odd immigrants have passed into oblivion in so far as the local emigration authorities are concerned.

They were due to reach here several days ago, and while the boat upon which they sailed, docked at a Canadian port nearly a week ago, the detachment of immigrants aboard booked for Peterborough, have failed to answer the roll call. Their non-appearance has been agitating the minds of a number of farmers (would-be employers) and the statement given out daily at the local immigration office to the effect that the party has in all probability gone through to Toronto or some other point, acts as a very poor salve to the injured feelings of the farmers who are continually clamouring for help.

There is no gainsaying the fact, but what the labour problem is an acute one in the rural districts, more especially so at this season of the year, said one in authority on the subject to a reporter to-day. Farmers are already commencing to look forward to spring, and one of the thoughts uppermost in their minds at present is the hired help problem. Mr. Howson is besieged with requests for help daily, and while he is able to supply the needs of a few, the demand far surpasses the supply. Indications are that a shortage of help will prevail for several months to come. The present prospects for a large influx of immigrants to this section of the country are good, but leaving out the number who will seek employment in the city, preferably to doing farm work, and the number who fail to make good on the farm, the percentage left to cope with the problem of hired help is not large.

TOM FLANAGAN VISITS THE CITY

And Incidentally Runs Foul of the Law

Frederick Eastland faced a drunk and disorderly charge in the police court this morning. To the magistrate he admitted his guilt and ascribed his predicament to the fact that he had just returned from the woods, where he had been employed for several months.

"You haven't been here for some time," commented His Worship with an air of familiarity.

Eastland was picked up in the city at a very late hour last night.

He was fined $2.

A man answering to the name of Tom Flanagan pleaded guilty to a similar charge. He bore no resemblance whatever to the Toronto athlete promoter, and did not even attempt to establish a claim of relationship to Jack Johnson's one time manager. He was too busy explaining his presence in the city.

This was his second trip to Peterborough and several months' isolation in the woods proved too much for him and he succumbed. He was garnered in about one o'clock this morning.

"Two dollars," came from the Court.

THUNDER TO-DAY

A Little Reminder of the Storms That Come With the Spring

The first thunder of the season was heard during the noon hour to-day. It apparently emanated from a long dark cloud that passed along the horizon to the south, but the edge of what seemed to be a storm was a flurry of snow. The thunder was a gentle reminder of the flashing night skies and the long rolls that are the "delight" of most women and many men.

"I really hate the summer," said a woman on a Jackson Park car this afternoon. "The lightning frightens me horribly. "Last summer's experiences are not yet forgotten, and there are many to-day who think they had narrow escapes when the lightning and thunder seemed so near. Some are thinking of building a special storm cellar to be prepared for the storms that are bound to come this spring and summer. The old saws about thunder in March, frost in May and similar samples of wisdom were heard to-day, but somehow this "dope" has been going wrong and received but little regard these days.

Entertained At Springville

The Young People of Knox church had an exciting trip to Springville last night owing to the bad state of the road. There were several upsets, fortunately with no serious results and they did not reach Springville until nearly 10 o'clock. However, the warmth of the reception at the hands of the Springville Presbyterian church Young People's Society more than recompensed them for the mishaps of the journey and the evening was thoroughly enjoyed. Mr. Bruce Elliott of Springville, who presided during the preliminary part of the evening, called on Mr. Lorimer president of the Knox church Young People's Society to take the chair. An orchestra from Knox church, composed of Miss Ross, accompanist, the Smith family, Mr. Price and Mr. Fair rendered enjoyable music. The programme was as follows:

Selection—The orchestra.
Reading—Miss Shepard.
Solo—Mr. Anderson.
Selection—The orchestra.
Duet—Miss Fair and Miss Davis.
Recitation—Miss Fair.
Selection—The orchestra.
Song—Mr. Dixon.
Song—Miss Peters.
Song—Mr. Lorimer.
Song—Miss Chiles.

At the conclusion of the programme Mr. Fred Wilson moved, seconded by Mr. Bert Sanderson, a hearty vote of thanks to the Knox Young People for their enjoyable programme.

During the evening Mr. Albert Bowles was called upon for an address.

Springville Young People provided refreshments.

The many friends of Mr. Ford Weart will regret to learn that he has been laid up with an attack of pleurisy. He was removed to Nicholls Hospital yesterday, where he is undergoing special treatment. A speedy recovery is hoped for by his friends.

CELEBRATION OF ST. PATRICK'S DAY MARKED BY GRAND ENTERTAINMENT

Dramatic Society of St. Peter's T. A. S. Play "The Four Leafed Shamrock" to an Immense Audience in the Opera House Last Evening.

CAPTIVATING SPECIALTIES

St. Patrick's Day was appropriately celebrated last evening, when the Dramatic Society of St. Peter's T. A. S. presented a meritorious and varied entertainment, in the Opera House. All the available space in the house was filled long before the commencement of the performance, and the event was a success in every sense of the word. Nor was the high standard of efficiency usually attendant upon these annual productions, diminished. In fact, from some points of view, the Society's former efforts were surpassed.

The Play.

The play selected for production was a delightful little Irish comedy by C. J. Hamilton, entitled "The Four-Leafed Shamrock," the plot of which is a favourite one with playwrights. Mr. O'Gorman, who is financially embarassed, plans to wed his daughter, Rose, to Lord Kilgavan in order to avoid being rendered homeless by the said nobleman, who, having a mortgage on the old homestead, threatens to foreclose. Hugh Dillwyn, Rose's lover, is therefore, prevented from seeing her ,and the attentions of Lord Kilgavan are favoured by the unfortunate parents. Not so with Rose, however, who still remains faithful to her lover. One day, Hugh, disguised as a pedlar, gains admittance to the house, acquaints Rose of his identity and presents her with a ring in which is encased a four-leafed shamrock, an Irish emblem of luck. Simultaneously Lord Kilgavan enters, snatches the ring from Rose and is struck to the earth by Hugh, who then makes off. Molly McDonnell, the old servant, bearing the nobleman a grudge, takes advantage of the situation, and seizes his wig, tearing it off, and the timely arrival of Miss Tattleton, a literary lady, who is staying at the house, is the means of discovering the supposed nobleman to be an imposter. He is in reality none other than Jos. Hopkins, late servant to Lord Kilgavan, and is recognized by the literary lady, who had met him on a previous occasion. The bogus lord is forcibly ejected, and Hugh is reinstated as Rose's suitor. One day, while inspecting the ring it was discovered to contain a tiny scrap of paper lying under the shamrock leaf and was inscribed with the following message:

"In the north wing of Gormansboro
There is a treasure rare;
Search through the upper turret-room,
You'll surely find it there."

Of course no time is lost in commencing a search and eventually the title deeds of a Welsh estate (the property of the family, which had been lost for years, were discovered and the destiny of the young lovers is fulfilled in a manner peculiar to such plays.

The character of Rose O'Gorman was portrayed to a nicety by Miss Carrie White, whose charming stage presence renders her particularly suited to such a role. As Hugh Dellwyn, Mr. Vincent McCabe was remarkably good, his impersonation of an Irish lover being highly commendable. The Irish witticisms of Mr. O'Gorman, the Irish landlord, in reduced circumstances, were done full justice to by Mr. John McCabe, and Mr. Gerald McFadden was equally good as Lord Kilgavan. He impersonted the mannerisms of an English obleman with marked success. The humour was entrusted to Miss Annie Simons, who, as Molly McDonnell, brought forth much merriment from the audience, by her typical Irish humour. For example: referring to the good old times, she said "sure, and we had tay so strong that it would bend a taypoon." As Mrs. O'Gorman and Miss Tetbury Tattlebow, the Misses Lillian Simons and Emma Derocher were splendid, and as a whole the play, as an amateur one, was unusually well staged. For this, great credit is due to the producer, namely Miss Lillian Simons. The members of the cast also displayed professional skill in their make-up.

The Philharmonic Quartette.

A prominent feature of the entertainment was the singing of the Philharmonic Quartette, composed of Messrs. H. Lee, J. Cairns, J. New, and A. New, whose voices were rich and well controlled, and blended in such magnificent harmony as would credit the most polished of similar combinations. These artistes possess an entirely original style of part singing, and the strict attention they pay to detail, forms not a small asset in the success of their efforts. They sang Rys-Herbert's four-part setting of Lover's old Irish favourite, "The Low Back'd Car," and the manner in which they varied from the sympathetic to the florid was excellent, and found great favour with the audience. For this they were enthusiastically recalled, and, responding, sang another old Irish favourite, namely, Balfe's "Killarney," arranged by Batchelder. This arrangement is a most attractive one, and was sung with great expression, the piano and crescendo exercises by the quartette being very effective.

Songs of Ireland.

The comedy was interspersed by various other creditable items. "The Burglar and the Child," sung by Miss G. Delaire and Mr. Ed. Hanrahan, was indeed a very pretty scene, the vocal portion of which was highly commendable. Mr. Hanrahan also rendered "The Minstrel Boy" and was encored. Miss Gertrude Clancy delighted the audience by her rendering of the song "Ireland I Love You," while the little Misses Milloy found favour with the audience by their rendering of "Where the River Shannon Flows." Master Joe Clancy was another favourite. He rendered in a captivating manner "Rory Darling." Without dancing there would appear to be something missing at an Irish concert. Messrs. Quinlan and Callahan supplied this element in a masterly fashion, and were received with great applause. All these items were hertily encored. Miss Doherty was musical directress, and Miss J. Clancy presided at the piano for several of the numbers.

At the conclusion of the performance the artistes assembled in Hooper's restaurant, and after full justice had been done to the viands outspread, the following toasts were given: "St. Patrick," Mr. Vincent McCabe; "The Characters," Mr. J. Callahan; "The Specialties," Mr. J. McCabe; "the Ladies," Mr. G. McFadden; "The Committee," Mr. H. Lee, and "The King," Mr. A. New. Mr. J. Hanrahan presided.

RESTORE GRAY HAIR TO NATURAL COLOUR

By Common Garden Sage, a Simple Remedy for Dandruff, Falling, Faded, Gray Hair

The old idea of using Sage for darkening the hair is again coming in vogue. Our grandmothers had dark, glossy hair at seventy-five, while our mothers are gray before they are fifty. Our grandmothers kept their hair soft and glossy with a "Sage Tea," which also restored the natural colour.

One objection to using such a preparation was the trouble of making it. This objection has been overcome by the Wyeth Chemical Company of New York, who has placed on the market a superior preparation of Sage, combined with Sulphur and other valuable remedies for dandruff, itching scalp, and thin, weak, falling hair.

The beauty of the hair depends more on its rich, even shading than anything else. Don't have dry, harsh, faded hair, when a simple, harmless remedy will bring back the colour in a few days; and don't be tormented with dandruff, itching scalp and loose, falling hairs. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy will quickly correct these troubles, and give colour, strength and beauty to your hair.

Get a fifty cent bottle from your druggist to-day, and prove this to your own satisfaction. All druggists sell it, under guarantee that the money will be refunded if the remedy is not exactly as represented. Special agent, Warne Drug Co.

A DRESS GOODS DISPLAY WITHOUT A PEER

You'll not be able to resist the appeal of the marvelous array of Handsome Dress Fabrics shown at Hall's. It's by all odds the largest and most exclusive ever shown in Peterboro. Pencil Stripe Suitings in all colours, black and white, white and black Serges and Cheviots, lightweight Scotch Tweeds in the new Grey and Tan Mixtures, and a host of other weaves which promise to be favourites for the Spring Season. In many instances there is but a single Suit or Dress length of the different materials, yet prices are notably reasonable. Don't miss the opening days, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday & Saturday, March 20th, 21st, 22nd, and 23rd.

Definite Lines Of Work To Be Formulated At Meeting Of Ad. Club

There will be interest aplenty at the meeting of the local Ad. Club this evening, when Mr. I. Brock will address the local business men and others interested in advertising, and the welfare of the City of Peterborough. The meeting is called for 8 o'clock, sharp, and will be held in the Bank of Montreal chambers.

Several of the local business men will take part in the discussion of the several interesting topics which will come up in connection with the field of work for the Ad. Club. The meeting this evening is mainly for the purpose of getting together and formulating definite lines of work.

Just how far the local business men will care to go in connection with some of the proposals that may come before the meeting is of course uncertain. Other than the benefit the Ad. Club can be to each of its members in the way of working for more efficient advertising, and more and better sales, there is another line of work, which may well be taken up, this having to do with the general welfare and the future of our city. One thing sure, we citizens of Peterborough should not do is to sit idly by and "Watch Welland Grow," see Guelph capture industries we should have, and not do all within our power to make things better for Peterborough.

Those who are in doubt as to their being any special field of usefulness for the Peterborough Ad. Club will be interested in being present at the meeting this evening, where they will be given every opportunity to get their destructive as well as their constructive criticisms out of their systems for the welfare of individual members of the club and our city at large.

The Chances Against You

"Oh, I will be all right in a few days," says the person who is tired out and has to drag himself to his daily work because the nervous system is exhausted.

Unfortunately nervous diseases do not right themselves, and the wasting process which has brought you to this condition keeps right on until there is a complete breakdown.

You must get the building-up process started, so that, instead of being a little weaker at the end of each day, you will find the balance on the other side and know that you are gradually getting strong and well.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food will help you wonderfully if you only give it a reasonable chance. As the system is built up you will find such symptoms as headache, sleeplessness and indigestion leaving you. You will find the old energy coming back. The mind and body will better serve you and you will see a new pleasure in life.

Y.M.C.A. NOTES

The Rubes' Band had a good practice last night in preparation for the great hay-seed carnival to be given by the members of the Pumpkin Centre Athletic Club in the gymnasium on Friday night. There will be a full dress rehearsal on Thursday night at 7.15 o'clock.

The senior athletic contest will take place to-morrow night with the following events scheduled:

60 yards potato race.
220 yards potato race.
Running high jump.
Standing broad jump.
Fence vault.
12 lb. shot put.
Harold Hill, last year's winner, will again be a contestant in this event.

Arrangements have been made by which the Trinity College school, Port Hope senior basketball team will meet the Y.M.C.A. quintette here on Saturday night. Judging by the class of ball the Port Hopers put up at home, this should furnish one of the best exhibitions of the season. The game is called for 7.45 o'clock.

There will be only one game in the City Basketball League on Thursday night, the Ekos meeting the Brownies. Both are playing fast ball and a good game should be the result.

PRACTICE POSTPONED.

The practice of the Madrigal Club has been postponed until Friday night on account of the choral recital in St. John's church to-night.

ANNUAL MEETING OF 57TH.

Was Held Last Night in the Armouries—Officers Elected.

The annual meeting of the 57th Regiment was held last evening in the armouries. There was a large number present, including a full complement of officers. A general business meeting was held and many important questions came up for discussion. The various committees for the ensuing year were also struck and officers elected.

A full list of the officers and also the personnel of the committees will be published to-morrow.

TENDERED BANQUET

Mr. G. L. Hay Remembered by Friends Before Going West

A banquet was tendered Mr. G. L. Hay on Saturday night at Hooper's Palm Parlours when a number of his friends gathered to bid him farewell, prior to his departure for the west. Among those present were Messrs. W. Mellroy, W. S. Davidson, W. J. Thompson, G. N. Gordon, Claude H. Rogers, H. R. H. Kenner, R. M. Glover, J. G. M. Wilson, S. T. Medd and Llewellyn Hall. Mr. McIlroy acted as chairman and in the speeches that followed the luncheon there was a general expression of regret at Mr. Hay's leaving the city and of good wishes for his success in the west. An impromptu programme of stories and songs was contributed to by all those present, Mr. McIlroy's singing being particularly enjoyed.

Mr. Hay is widely known in Peterborough, having been connected with the legal firmof Hall, Medd and Davidson for about twenty years. He has resided in Peterborough all his life and practically grew up with the town. He was interested in various forms of sport, including curling, bowling and cycling, when it was at its height some years ago. Mr. Hay goes west with the best wishes of his friends.

Mr. Hay is going to Saskatoon and Edmonton.

The flavour, fragrance, purity and deliciousness of "Salada" Tea, commend it to the favour of every lover of good tea. Every year has but served to demonstrate more emphatically its superiority.

BECOMING MILLINERY DIRECT FROM PARIS AND NEW YORK

Of alluring charm and extreme becomingness the lovely hats that HALL'S are showing are bound to elicit your most generous praise. Small, smart tailored Hats are particularly prominent—such as the Cardinal, the Gaby, the Bunty Sailor, and the Durbar Turban—and for the more dressy Hats, the Parisian designers have gone back to the early Victorian Era for the charming quaintness and picturesqueness of the New Models now being shown at the Spring Opening of Richard Hall & Son, Limited. 1d-67

DELIGHTFUL CLUB DANCE

The West End Athletic Club held a very enjoyable club dance in their rooms on George street last night. Some seventy-five people were present and the evening was very pleasantly spent, the dance being one of the most delightful of the season. Miss Gladman supplied delightful music for the occasion. Refreshments were served during the evening.

A YEAR INDOORS

"For thirteen months I was so bad with chronic indigestion that I could not go out of doors. Nerves were unstrung, the heart bad and smothering feelings came on till I thought I would choke. Doctors' treatment failed me, so I began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which I thank for my present good health. I am now doing my housework and have a family of ten."

Coal Mines Bill Read

Asquith Introduces Measure to End the Big Strike—Affords Temporary Relief

GIVES NATION TIME

London, March 20.—The coal mines minimum wage bill, designed to put an end to the coal strike, passed its first reading in the House of Commons last night. The bill is backed by Premier Asquith, Foreign Secretary Grey, Chancellor Lloyd-George, and Sydney Buxton, President of the Board of Trade. It consists of six clauses and a schedule defining 21 districts, the country being divided for the purposes of the bill. As outlined by the Prime Minister, the bill provides a reasonable minimum wage for the miners and safeguards for the owners, these to be arranged by district boards. The minimum will be paid from the date of resumption of work. The enactment is for three years.

An important clause provides that if within a fortnight, any district lacks a recognized district board, the Board of Trade may appoint any person to act in place of the local body. There is nothing in the bill to prevent a resumption of operations should the miners be dissatisfied with the district board decision.

A brief debate followed the introduction of the bill, which does not give promise of easy passage through Parliament. The Opposition party is dissatisfied with the absence of penal clauses or measures for compulsory arbitration, and will move amendments with a view to remedying that.

The Prime Minister said that he introduced the bill with great reluctance, but that it was imperative in the interests of the country. Chancellor Lloyd-George said that the Government was confronted by the necessity of the speedy termination of the strike, for that necessary to dispute would create a perilous situation. The bill was far from revolutionary. It had been accepted by many of the owners and to prevent a national calamity, which would result from prolongation of the strike, it was worth experimenting with. Even though the remedy provided was only temporary, it gave the nation time to devise a more permanent solution of the problem.

Critics of the bill, he added, had not suggested an alternative. They talked of applying Governmental pressure on the disputants, but did not indicate how this should be applied. He denied that the demand for a minimum wage was a syndicalist proposal, as the Government conceded it to every civil servant.

Fear Freshets In Kent.

Chatham, March 20.—Freshets seem imminent in many parts of Kent County. While the river ice has not yet moved out, that of its tributaries is breaking up and flooding the surrounding country. In southwest Tilbury the land in some sections is already covered with from one to three feet of water, and close to the town of Dresden, a small lake is gradually assuming larger proportions.

Dresden people look for a freshet before another day, if the thaw does not let up. The Thames at Chatham rose four feet yesterday, and is still rising with such force that it has in places shattered the last coating of ice covering it.

ROWELL'S BROADSIDE AT THE FISCAL POLICY

Larger Grants Should be Given for Education, Public Roads and Good Roads—Bilingual Schools Do Not Exist.

Toronto, March 20.—With speeches by the leader of the Opposition and the Prime Minister, the budget debate came to a close in the Legislature yesterday. The range of discussion was wide and at time heated when the Elk Lake message and other hoary points of contention came up.

Mr. Rowell's first criticism of the financial policy of the Government was that there had been no pretence whatever to review the financial situation of the province, to point out its financial needs and to consider the sources from which the revenues was to be derived. At the present time the province was confronted with an alarming situation in connection with educational affairs, and if the schools were to reach a higher standard of efficiency the grants to education must be largely augmented. Large sums were also wanted for public health. In the Department of Agriculture there were increasing demands upon the resources of the province. Large expenditures of the public money were needed for good roads. Something was being done, but more was needed.

Another item in the receipts that Mr. Rowell criticised was the returns from the Department of Lands, Forests and Mines. He contended that the Government policy was depleting the timber of the province, and soon there would be little left. Assuming, however, that there was lots of timber, he thought the time had come when some consideration should be given to the interests of the future. He was not objecting to the revenue, but to forest depletion, and the Government should adopt a scientific forestry policy for the purpose of conserving the timber.

In regard to the supplementary revenue, which was a tax on corporations, he thought that the railways of Canada should be called upon to contribute the same proportion of taxation as the average citizen, in regard to the value of the property.

"I hope," said Mr. Rowell, "that the Provincial Secretary today, before he closes his address, will tell us whether there are any bilingual schools in the province. (Opposition laughter.) During the election he is reported to have said there was no such thing, but now that Dr. Merchant's report is in his hands it may be possible that the Prime Minister will be able to tell us that there are a few bilingual schools."

"How utterly impossible it is for the honorable and new leader of the Opposition to meet a political opponent with fair play," said the Premier, in reference to the statements of Mr. Rowell in his attacks on the Government. Sir James classed Mr. Rowell's remarks, in denunciation of the policy of the Conservative administration, as "fearful and wonderful."

"The leader of the Opposition says that when the Government proves incapable of handling the bilingual question the Liberals will announce their policy," said Sir James. "Some future historian may have the opportunity of using the statement from the Opposition."

In reference to the statements of the Liberals about the depletion of forests, he said: "Instead of selling timber limits, we are buying them, and we will buy more. We do not sell even to friends. The Government would hide itself from an outraged people if it had such a stain and blot on its record in the matter of the disposal of timber limits as had the late Government."

Sir James merely touched the bilingual school question. "Legally speaking, there are no bilingual schools. That's all I have to say on the matter," he said.

Before the debate was resumed, Mr. Rowell asked when the House might expect to hear the Government's policy with regard to the English-French schools of the province, in view of Dr. Merchant's report.

Sir James Whitney replied that he was not prepared to say when such an announcement would be made.

J. C. Elliott asked about the return from the Attorney-General of the correspondence about the county crown attorney, with which J. W. Curry's name was associated.

N. W. Rowell said that the absence of the Provincial Treasurer from the House through illness was regretted as much by the Opposition members as by the Government. He remarked that the acting Provincial Treasurer, Hon. I. B. Lucas, and he had often met before and on occasions when their opinions were more in accord than at present.

The Opposition leader also had a kind word to say of Allan Studholme, the Labor member for East Hamilton. He hoped that there would soon be more independent members in the House; that it would be good for the House and good for the country. In that way it would be possible to get a better expression of the people's will.

"If labor men outside," he continued, "showed as much interest, persistence and enthusiasm there would be more independent representatives in the House."

G.P.R. Route Through Belleville.

Belleville, March 20.—Plans and profile for the Canadian Pacific Railway through this city were yesterday filed with the city clerk. The proposed route through the city is just north of the C.N.O. Railway line, which was constructed through the city last year. The plans have been approved by the Railway Board of Commissioners.

Cochrane Will See To It.

Ottawa, March 20.—Harvey Hall, of the Order of Railway Conductors started a vigorous fight in the railway committee yesterday on the bill respecting the Grand Trunk Railway, which asks power to assist financially any railway company at present incorporated, or hereafter to be incorporated.

Mr. Hall said the company had not treated its employes fairly, and was notorious for breaking its solemn agreements. It should get no favors till it came to time, and kept its bond.

Hon. Frank Cochrane declared that the company would carry out its engagements, or he would know the reason why. It might be necessary to club them to make them live up to their agreements with the men.

Claude Macdonell and Mr. Stevens opposed the bill, and finally it was referred to a sub-committee.

No Woman Suffrage in N. Y.

Albany, N.Y., March 20.—All hopes of woman suffrage legislation at the present session were crushed by the action of both Houses of the Legislature yesterday. The Stilwell amendment, on which the various suffrage organizations have united, was killed in the Senate by a final vote of 31 to 19. Previously a rising vote had been taken and the result announced 17 for to 34 against, but Senator Stilwell challenged the accuracy of the count and secured a rollcall by the expedient of moving to discharge from the report of the committee of the whole.

In the assembly the suffragists won a technical victory as 69 votes were cast to non-concur in the adverse report of the judiciary committee, to 53 in favor. The result was to throw the matter into the hands of the rules committee, the personnel of which does not warrant hope of its emergence.

Would Cancel Franchise.

Brantford, March 20.—The City Council here has instructed the city solicitor to proceed with legal action to cancel the franchise of the street railway and Grand Valley Radial Co., as the result of default of taxes. It is not expected, however, that the local service will be discontinued, the purpose of the legal action being to have the courts define the city's right to hold the franchise until settlement of the taxes has been made in full. This, it is expected, will be done, as reorganization of the company, it is announced, is now under way.

London, March 20.—A bequest of $4,250,000 was left in the will of the late Baron Wandsworth for the foundling of an orphanage.

The late Baron Wandsworth was head of the London banking firm of Stern Brothers which his father founded, and once was a member of the House of Commons, in which he introduced a bill for the better housing of the working classes in rural districts.

Courts Kill Poor Shops.

New York, March 20.—Mayor Gaynor, speaking before the society to promote efficiency, declared that the courts constituted the greatest impediment of the [illegible] Government.

The result of financial decisions, he said, had been that during the last years be three [illegible] a process or shoestring, [illegible] the obnoxious law was discarded, and by constitutional amendment and legislation.

100,000 Men Will Drill

In the Canadian Militia Camps This Year—Col. Hughes Defends Cadet Scheme

LIQUOR MUST BE BARRED

Ottawa, March 20.—Col. Sam Hughes' estimates were before the House yesterday afternoon. The discussion centred largely around the training of cadets, the Minister announcing that he intended to institute exclusively cadet camps to which boys could go whether they had been trained under the Strathcona trust or not, whether they attended school or not. The time for military training was in youth.

The Minister defended the militia camps from the charge of being schools of drunkenness. It was the men picked up at the last moment to fill the ranks who disgraced the camps. Incidentally, he mentioned that it was proposed to drill 100,000 men in the militia camps this summer.

"I have no hesitation in saying," declared the Minister, in answer to questions of E. A. Macdonald (Pictou) and F. B. Carvell (Carleton, N.B.) "that if two equally qualified persons apply for a position, I will give it to the Tory. That is the rule that has always been followed."

F. B. Carvell: Does this mean that there is to be politics in the Militia Department in future?

Hon. Mr. Hughes: If my good friend wishes to call it politics, then there are politics in the Militia Department.

E. M. Macdonald: There should be no patronage in the militia service.

These were not officers, but merely caretakers, replied Col. Hughes. The particular caretaker of whose dismissal Mr. Carvell had complained was one of the best political agents in Mr. Carvell's constituency, said Col. Hughes. He had used his influence in the drill hall among the young men on behalf of the Liberal candidate.

"Every man I have appointed," said the Minister of Militia, "has been told to look after his business and not meddle in politics. Fitness is the first qualification for service. The man who neglects his business, be he Tory or Grit, must go.

Col. Hughes emphasized the fact that there was no intention of ever allowing politics to affect the service proper. All officers would be appointed and promoted without reference to politics.

When the vote for training was up, F. B. Carvell expressed it as his opinion that the militia was not the temperance agency the Minister would make out. He would object to sending 40,000 cadets to camp unless he were guaranteed there was no canteen. He also complained that the infantry were being discriminated against. Their increase in pay was not sufficient. They should get $1.50 a day.

Col. Hughes gave some statistics about the number of teachers that had been trained under the Strathcona trust, who could accompany cadets to camp. There were 3,065 in Nova Scotia, 565 in Prince Edward Island, 378 in British Columbia, 12 in Quebec (outside of cadet instructors), 179 in Saskatchewan, 253 in Alberta. From the figures given for Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, Col. Hughes remarked it would seem as if the lady teachers had been trained as well as the men, and he supposed they would go to camp too.

Referring to Mr. Carvell's criticisms the Minister of Militia declared that the men who disgraced the militia camps, did not learn to drink there. They were men who had been picked up by careless captains to fill their ranks just before going to camps. This, he added, would be remedied at an early date. The abuse of liquor in camps was not extensive. People who saw a soldier drunk at camp blamed it on the camp, never stopping to think that the same man would probably be drunk hours at home where he was drunk minutes there.

Reverting to the cadets, he declared, that boys made better men for being trained in military exercises. "Don't be afraid to trust the boys," he said. Last summer boy scouts had marched to Toronto and conducted themselves like perfect gentlemen. The Y. M. C. A. had offered to furnish twenty physical instructors to the cadets in camp, and the men interested in cadets in Quebec had offered to go to camp with the boys.

At present, said Col. Hughes, the law only allowed taking cadets to militia camps, but he proposed to change and have exclusively cadet camps.

Hon. H. S. Boland was doubtful about the advisability of the innovation. It was proposed, he said, to spend $250,000 this year on training cadets and this would increase. Canada was spending $6,000,000 on her militia, and the navy would cost $15,000,000 more. We were going pretty fast for a country that was not a militarist country.

The militia estimates, said Col. Hughes, in answer, were the lowest in five years.

Election Soon in Britain?

"INITIALS ONLY"

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

The question was immaterial. Either would form an excellent preparation for the coup planned by Sweetwater; and when, after another hour of uncertainty, perfect silence greeted him from his neighbour's room, hope had soared again on exultant wing, far above all former discouragements.

Mr. Brotherson's bed was in a remote corner from the loophole made by Sweetwater; but in the stillness now pervading the whole building, the latter could hear his even breathing very distinctly. He was in a deep sleep.

The young detective's moment had come.

Taking from his breast a small box, he placed it on a shelf close against the partition. An instant of quiet listening, then he touched a spring in the side of the box and laid his ear, in haste, to his loophole.

A strain of well-known music broke softly from the box and sent its vibrations through the wall.

It was answered instantly by a stir within; then, as the noble air continued, awakening memories of that fatal instant when it crashed through the corridors of the Hotel Clermont, drowning Miss Challoner's cry if not the sound of her fall, a word burst from the sleeping man's lips which carried its own message to the listening detective.

It was Edith! Miss Challoner's first name, and the tone bespoke a shaken soul.

Sweetwater, gasping with excitement, caught the box from the shelf and silenced it. It had done its work and it was no part of Sweetwater's plan to have this strain located, or even to be thought real. But its echo still lingered in Brotherson's otherwise unconscious ears; for another "Edith!" escaped his lips, followed by a smothered but forceful utterance of these five words, "You know I promised you—"

Promised her what? He did not say. Would he have done so had the music lasted a trifle longer? Would he yet complete his sentence? Sweetwater trembled with eagerness and listened breathlessly for the next sound. Brotherson was awake. He was tossing in his bed. Now he has leaped to the floor. Sweetwater hears him groan, then comes another silence, broken at last by the sound of his body falling back upon the bed and the troubled ejaculation of "Good God!" wrung from lips no torture could have forced into complaint under any daytime conditions.

Sweetwater continued to listen, but he had heard all, and after some few minutes longer of fruitless waiting, he withdrew from his post. The episode was over. He would hear no more that night.

Was he satisfied? Certainly the event, puerile as it might seem to some, had opened up strange vistas to his aroused imagination. The words "Edith, you know I promised you—" were in themselves provocative of strange and doubtful conjectures. Had the sleeper under the influence of a strain of music indissolubly associated with the death of Miss Challoner, been so completely forced back into the circumstances and environment of that moment that his mind had taken up and his lips repeated the thoughts with which that moment of horror was charged? Sweetwater imagined the scene—saw the figure of Brotherson hesitating at the top of the stairs—saw hers advancing from the writing-room, with startled and uplifted hand—heard the music—the crash of that great finale—and decided, without hesitation, that the words he had just heard were indeed the thoughts of that moment. "Edith, you know I promised you—" What had he promised? What she received was death! Had this been in his mind? Would this have been the termination of the sentence had he wakened less soon to consciousness and caution?

Sweetwater dared to believe it. He was no nearer comprehending the mystery it involved than he had been before, but he felt sure that he had been given one true and positive glimpse into this harassed soul, which showed its deeply hidden secret to be both deadly and fearsome; and happy to have won his way so far into the mystic labyrinth he had sworn to pierce, he rested in happy unconsciousness till morning when——

Could it be? Was it he who was dreaming now, or was the event of the night a mere farce of his own imagining? Mr. Brotherson was whistling in his room, gaily and with ever increasing verve, and the tune which filled the whole floor with music was the same grand finale from William Tell which had seemed to work such magic in the night. As Sweetwater caught the mellow but indifferent notes sounding from those lips of brass, he dragged forth the music-box he held hidden in his coat pocket, and flinging it on the floor stamped upon it.

"The man is too strong for me," he cried. "His heart is granite; he meets my every more. What am I to do now?"

CHAPTER XIX.
THE DANGER MOMENT.

For a day Sweetwater acknowledged himself to be mentally crushed, disillusioned and defeated. Then his spirits regained their poise. It would take a heavy weight indeed to keep them down permanently.

His opinion was not changed in regard to his neighbor's secret guilt. A demeanour of this sort suggested bravado rather than bravery to the ever suspicious detective. But, he saw, very plainly by this time, that he would have to employ more subtle methods yet ere his hand would touch the goal which so tantilisingly eluded him.

His work at the bench suffered that week; he made two mistakes. But by Saturday night he had satisfied himself that he had reached the point where he would be justified in making use of Miss Challoner's letters. So he telephoned his wishes to New York, and awaited the promised developments with an anxiety we can only understand by realising how much greater were his chances of failure than of success. To ensure the latter, every factor in his scheme must work to perfection. The medium of communication (a young, untried girl) must do her part with all the skill of artist and author combined. Would she disappoint them? He did not think so. Women possess a marvellous adaptability for this kind of work, and this one was French, which made the case still hopeful.

But Brotherson! In what spirit would he meet the proposed advances? Wou'd he even admit the girl, and, if he did, would the interview bear any such fruit as Sweetwater hoped for? The man who could mock the terrors of the night by a careless repetition of a strain instinct with the most sacred memories, was not to be depended upon to show much feeling at sight of a departed woman's writing.

But no other hope remained, and Sweetwater faced the attempt with heroic determination.

The day was Sunday, which ensured Brotherson's being at home. Nothing would have lured Sweetwater out for a moment, though he had no reason to expect that the affair he was anticipating would come off till early evening.

But it did. Late in the afternoon he heard the expected steps go by his door—a woman's steps. But they were not alone. A man's accompanied them. What man? Sweetwater hastened to satisfy himself on this point by laying his ear to the partition.

Instantly the whole conversation became audible.

"An errand? Oh, yes, I have an errand!" explained the evidently unwelcome intruder, in her broken English. "This is my brother Pierre. My name is Celeste; Celeste Ledru. I understand English ver well. I have worked much in families. But he understands nothing. He is all French. He accompanies me for—for the—what you call it? les convenances. He knows nothing of the beesiness."

Sweetwater in the darkness of his closet laughed in his gleeful appreciation.

"Great!" was his comment. "Just great! She has thought of everything—or Mr. Gryce has."

"What is this beesiness, monsieur? I have something to sell—so you Americans speak. Something you will want much—ver sacred, ver precious. A souvenir from the tomb, monsieur. Will you give ten—no, that is too leetle—fifteen dollars for it? It is worth—Oh, more, much more to the true lover, Pierre, tu es bete. Teins-tu droit aur ta chaise. M. Brotherson est un monsieur comme it faut."

This adjuration, uttered in sharp reprimand and with but little of the French grace, may or may not have been understood by the unsympathetic man they were meant to impress. But the name which accompanied them—his own name, never heard but once before in this house, undoubtedly caused the silence which almost reached the point of embarrassment, before he broke it with the harsh remark:

"Your French may be good, but it does not go with me. Yet it is more intelligible than your English. What do you want here? What have you in that bag you wish to open; and what do you mean by the sentimental trash with which you offer it?"

"Ah, monsieur has not memory of me." came in the sweetest tones of a really seductive voice. "You astonish me, monsieur. I thought you knew—everybody else does—Oh, tout le monde, monsieur, that I was Miss Challoner's maid—near her when other people were not—near her the very day she died."

A pause; then an angry exclamation from some one. Sweetwater put it down to the brother who might have misinterpreted some look or gesture on Brotherson's part. Brotherson himself would not be apt to show surprise in any such noisy way.

"I—I saw many things—Oh, many things—" the girl proceeded with an admirable mixture of suggestion and reserve. "That day and other days too. She did not talk—Oh, no, she did not talk, but I saw—Oh, yes, I saw that she—that you—I'll have to say it, monsieur, that you were fine beau amis after that week in Lenox."

"Well?" His utterance of this word was vigorous, but not tender. "What are you coming to? What can you have to show me in this connection that I will believe in for a moment?"

"I have these—is monsieur certaine that no one can hear? I wouldn't have anybody hear what I have to tell you, for the world—for all the world."

"No one can overhear."

For the first time Sweetwater breathed a full, deep breath. This assurance had sounded heartfelt. "Blessings on her cunning young head. She thinks of everything."

"You are unhappy. You have thought Miss Challoner cold; — that she had no response for your ver ardent passion. But—" these words were uttered sotto voce and with telling pauses—"but — I — know — ver much better than that. She was ver proud. She had a right; she was no poor girl like me—but she spend hours —hours in writing letters she nevaire send. I saw one, just once, for a leetle minute; while you could breathe so short as that; and it began with Cheri, or your English for that, and it ended with words—Oh, ver much like these: You may nevaire see these lines, which was ver interesting, veree so, and made one want to see what she did with letters she wrote and nevaire mail; so I watch and look, and one day I see them. She had a leetle ivory box—Oh, ver nice, very pretty. I thought it was jewels she kept locked up so tight. But, non, non, non. It was letters—these letters. I heard them rattle, rattle, not once but many times. You believe me, monsieur?"

"I believe you to have taken every advantage possible to spy upon your mistress. I believe that, yes."

"From interest, monsieur, from great interest."

"Self-interest."

"As monsieur pleases. But it was strange, ver strange, for a grande dame like that to write letters—sheets on sheets—and then not send them, nevaire. I dreamed of those letters—I could not help it, no; and when she died so quick—with no word for any one, no word at all, I thought of those writings so secret, so of the heart, and when no one noticed—or thought about this box, or the key she kept shut tight, oh, always tight in her leetle gold purse, I—Monsieur, do you want to see those letters?" asked the girl, with a gulp. Evidently his appearance frightened her—or had her acting reached this point of extreme finish "I had nevaire the chance to put them back. And—and they belong to monsieur. They are his—all his—and so beautiful! Ah, just like poetry."

"I don't consider them mine. I haven't a particle of confidence in you or in your story. You are a thief — self-convicted; or you're an agent of the police whose motives I neither understand nor care to investigate. Take up your bag and go. I haven't a cent's worth of interest in its contents."

She started to her feet. Sweetwater heard her chair grate on the painted floor, as she pushed it back in rising. The brother rose, too, but more calmly. Brotherson did not stir. Sweetwater felt his hopes rapidly dying down—down into ashes, when suddenly her voice broke forth in pants:

"And Marie said—everybody said—that you loved our great lady; that you, of the people, common, common, working with the hands, living with men and women working with the hands, that you had soul, sentiment—what you will of the good and great, and that you would give your eyes for her words, si funes, si spirituelles, so like des vers de poete. False! false! all false! She was an angel. You are —read that!" she vehemently broke in, opening her bag and whisking a paper down before him. "Read and understand my proud and lovely lady. She did right to die. You are hard—hard. You would have killed her if she had not—"

"Silence, woman! I will read nothing!" came hissing from the strong man's teeth, set in almost ungovernable anger. "Take back this letter, as you call it, and leave my room."

"Nevaire! You will not read? But you shall, you shall. Behold another! One, two, three, four!" Madly they flew from her hand. Madly she continued her vituperative attack. Beast! beast! That she should pour out her innocent heart to you, you! I do not want your money, Monsieur of the common street, of the common house. It would be dirt. Pierre, it would be dirt. Ah, bah! je m'oublie tout a fait. Pierre, il est bete. Il refuse de les toucher. Mais it faut qu'il les touche, si je les laisse sur le plancher. Va-t'en! Je me moque de lui. Canaille! L'homme du pepuple, tout a fait du peuple!"

A loud slam—the skurrying of feet through the hall, accompanied by the slower and heavier tread of the so-called brother, then silence, and such silence that Sweetwater fancied he could catch the sound of Brotherson's heavy breathing. His own was silenced to a gasp. hat a treasure of a girl! How natural her indignation! What an instinct she showed and what comprehension! This high and mighty handling of a most difficult situation and a most difficult man, had imposed on Brotherson, had almost imposed upon himself. Those letters so beautiful, so spirituelle! Yet, the odds were that she had never read them, much less abstracted them. The minx! the ready, resourceful, wily, daring minx!

But had she imposed on Brotherson? As the silence continued, Sweetwater began to doubt. He understood quite well the importance of his neighbor's first movement. Were he to tear those letters into shreds! He might be thus tempted. All depended on the strength of his present mood and the real nature of the secret which lay buried in his heart.

Was that heart as flinty as it sounded? Was there no place for doubt or even for curiosity, in its impenetrable depths? Seemingly, he had not moved foot or hand since his unwelcome visitors had left. He was doubtless still staring at the scattered sheets lying before him; possibly battling with unaccustomed impulses; possibly weighing deeds and consequences in those slow moving scales of his in which no man could cast a weight with any certainty how far its balance would be disturbed.

There was a sound as of settling coal. Only at night would one expect to hear so slight a sound as that in a tenement full of noisy children. But the moment chanced to be propitious, and it not only attracted the attention of Sweetwater on his side of the wall, but it struck the ear of Brotherson also. With an ejaculation as bitter as it was impatient, he roused himself and gathered up the letters. Sweetwater could hear the successive rustlings as he bundled them up in his hand. Then came another silence then the lifting of a stove lid.

Sweetwater had not been wrong in his secret apprehension. His identification with his unimpressionable neighbor's mood had shown him what to expect. These letters—these innocent and precious outpourings of a rare and womanly soul—the only conceivable open sesame to the hard-locked nature he found himself pitted against, would soon be resolved into a vanishing puff of smoke.

But the lid was thrust back, and the letters remained in hand. Mortal strength has its limits. Even Brotherson could not shut down that lid on words which might have been meant for him, harshly as he had repelled the idea.

The pause which followed told little; but when Sweetwater heard the man within move with characteristic energy to the door, turn the key and step back again to his place at the table, he knew that the danger moment had passed and that those letters were about to be read, not casually, but seriously, as indeed their contents merited.

This caused Sweetwater to feel serious himself. Upon what results might he calculate? What would happen to this hardy soul, when the fact he so scornfully repudiated, was borne in upon him, and he saw that the disdain which antagonised him was a mere device—a cloak to hide the secret heart of love and eager womanly devotion? Her death—little as Brotherson would believe it up till now—had been his personal loss—the greatest which can befall a man. When he came to see this—when the modest fervor of her unusual nature began to dawn upon him in these self-revelations, would the result be remorse, or just the deadening and final extinction of what ever tenderness he may have retained for her memory?

Impossible to tell. The balance of probability hung even. Sweetwater recognised this, and clung, breathless, to his loop-hole. Fain would he have seen, as well as heard.

Mr. Brotherson read the first letter, standing. As it soon became public property, I will give it here, just as it afterwards appeared in the columns of the greedy journals:

"Beloved:

"When I sit, as I often do, in perfect quiet under the stars, and dream that you are looking at them too, not for hours, as I do, but for one full moment in which your thoughts are with me as wholly as mine are with you, I feel that the bond between us, unseen by the world, and possibly not wholly recognised by ourselves, is instinct with the same power which links together the eternities.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

IN a Boston lodging house, a young woman killed herself the other day, because she discovered that the man to whom she had thought herself engaged for fourteen years, was a married man.

He had been married twenty years. He had a son ten years old and his home was right in the same city where this girl boarded and worked as a waitress.

And yet, for fourteen years, he had been able to deceive her as to his true position in society.

In some way her suspicions were aroused and she went to his home, found his wife there, saw his child, and then went back to her lodging and put a bullet through her heart.

Coming to make his usual call the next day, the man—if we do not too much degrade the word by calling him that—found her dead body stretched out on the couch. Perhaps he received some of his punishment then and there. Perhaps he was too much hardened by the life of systematic deception which he had led for fourteen years to mind this little incident very much. Who knows?

But I did not bring up this dismal subject to speculate on that phase of it. The point I want to bring out is this—doesn't the uncovering of such a double life bring home to you fathers and mothers, the necessity of knowing all you possibly can about the young men who are paying court to your daughters?

Of course, it is most unlikely, perhaps impossible, that such conditions should exist in your case as these which brought this poor little waitress to prefer to seek "the undiscover'd country from whose bourn no traveller returns," rather than face the dreary wreck her life had become. But what do you really know about the man who comes to see your Louise or your Dorothy, and takes her to the theatre and the dance, etc? Do you know who his people are, and what his past is, and what is thought of him in his home town? To be sure there is no formal engagement between your Louise or your Dorothy and this man, but is it well to wait until there is, to find out that he wasn't a fit man to have entered your home?

An agonized father wrote to me the other day from a distant city to tell me that he had discovered that the young man to whom his daughter was insisting on becoming engaged, was the son of a woman who kept a house of ill-repute. He has tried to break off the engagement between the two, but as the daughter is of legal age, if not of the age of reason, has had much difficulty. He wants me to try to make the girl see that a little unhappiness now is better than a life of misery. I wish with all my heart I could help him save her. In this case, the introduction was performed by a trusted friend of the family, who ought to have been more worthy of the trust imposed in him, but there are many cases where the parents have only themselves to blame for such tragic conditions.

Know the man who calls on your daughter. Know his family. Know his past. It may be that you will neglect this duty to her with impunity. It may be that you will sow the seeds of life-long tragedy by such neglect.

Do you care to take the chance?

And you, daughters who, for reasons of death or distance, or for any other cause, have no father or mother to do such investigating for you, do it for yourselves. Ask the man who says he loves you to take you to call on his mother. You can judge pretty accurately by her and his home if everything is as it should be. Furthermore, take any other course that is open to you to find out about his character and his past life.

And don't say that any such investigation would be distrusting John and you won't insult him that way. That's what the poor little waitress probably would have said.

NO MORE CONSTIPATION, BILIOUS HEADACHE, BAD BREATH, SOUR STOMACH OR LAZY LIVER

Furred Tongue, Bad Taste, Indigestion, Sallow Skin and Miserable Headaches come from a torpid liver and clogged bowels, which cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food, which sours and ferments like garbage in a swill barrel. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. A Cascaret to-night will straighten you out by morning—a 10-cent box will keep you feeling good for months. Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then to keep their stomach, liver and bowels regulated and never know a miserable moment. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a good, gentle cleansing, too, occasionally.

An Explanation Of The Woman Suffrage Movement

(By Adeline C. Roberts.)

(No. 4.)

"Woman suffrage may be all very well in other countries, but we don't need it in Canada, we have good laws here."

This is the statement that advocates of woman suffrage are constantly being met with, whenever the subject is mentioned. However, a few questions put to such objectors soon expose the fact that they, in common with a vast majority of their fellow country men, and women, have about the very vaguest acquaintance with these "good laws," which they extol so complacently. (Why do not our schools include a thorough study of the main features of the country's laws, in their curriculums?)

When we come to thoughtfully examine the laws in regard to child labour, for instance, the laws for the preservation of health and safety, for the regulation of hours and conditions of labour, for the determination of wages; laws which dictate the purity of our food supplies, the education of our children, the price of the necessities of life, the environment of the home; laws affecting wife desertion, establishing the age of consent, guardianship of children, etc., etc., we find that they are, at present, utterly one-sided and inadequate. And why? Because legislation is entirely man-made; and how can men alone, without the co-operation of women, be expected, even with the best intentions, to know how best to legislate for women and children? It seems strangely illogical that the mother, (rather than the father) is thought so eminently capable of caring for her home and her children, and yet is thought quite incapable of having any voice in the laws which so directly concern her home and her children. More and more are educated men coming to realize how unreasonable it is that the opinions of their wives and mothers may be consulted on every other question except the laws and government under which they and their husbands and children must live and die. "Woman's place is the home" is a favourite cry of the anti-suffragists, and yet all the interests of the home, and all the evils that affect the home depend largely on politics, and are controlled by man-made laws. And here I am tempted to quote a little poem, written for a baby who won the "baby prize" at a suffrage bazaar, recently held in Chicago:

A Suffrage Baby.

(By Amelia D. Pierce.)

I'm an equal suffrage baby,
And I need my mother's vote.
She always knows what's good for me,
And sometimes men-folks don't.
They say my milk's in politics
My food and all I wear;
Street cleaning—sanitation—
Let my mother do her share.
So please give her the ballot,
For she loves her home and me,
And can't help you adjust things,
Without voting, don't you see?

The re-adaptation of our old ideas to modern changed conditions is to many not easy. In older times there were few idle women, for nearly all were employed in the home industries. Now that factories and other industrial concerns have removed so many of these industries, not only must millions of women now earn their living outside the home, but the housekeeper also is more and more dependent upon outside conditions, which only a voter can properly control, and which every woman who loves her home ought to wish to help control.

Mr. Israel Zangwill, a strong supporter of woman suffrage, says: "There is no problem upon which an intelligent woman cannot throw some new light. In neglecting woman's help men are blundering, not merely in what they do, but still more badly in what they do not do; in the terribly important provinces of life which they leave untouched by legislation. We men require woman suffrage as much for our own sakes as for women's sakes."

Opposers of woman suffrage are fond of holding up the work done by Jane Addams and other such noble women, for the alleviation of human suffering as an argument against equal franchise. "Why talk of the good that women with votes will be able to do," say they, "when women without votes can accomplish so much?" But let me tell such objectors, first, that Jane Addams is herself a strong suffragist, and secondly that the noble work she does, great as it is, is but as a drop in the ocean compared to what will be done by her, and many more, when the great handicap of disfranchisement is removed, as it undoubtedly will be, sooner or later.

The lady superintendent of a large American institution for the feeble-minded, on being asked how she ascertained whether patients brought there were hopelessly unintelligent or not, replied that she had one unfailing test. Each patient on arrival, was taken to a room where there was a running tap, and beneath it a tub, into which the water flowed. The patient was given a dipper and told to empty the tub, and the hopelessly feeble-minded at once proceeded to do so. But only those who possessed some few rays of intelligence and reasoning power, first turned off the tap.

Women's splendid work on boards of charities, in benevolent institutions, in our slums and prisons, and among the poor, the sick, and the unfortunate does much to mitigate evil conditions, but when it comes to removing the causes of those conditions, they have no power. Though much suffering is alleviated, evil conditions continue to increase, for the causes are still there, like the water which goes on filling the tub, in spite of the work of the dipper. But when equal franchise is established, then will women at once proceed to lay down their dippers and turn off the tap. They will remove the causes of evil conditions by using their increased powers to amend or alter existing laws which are now inadequate, and to enact new and better ones, exactly as they have already done in New Zealand, Australia, Colorado, Wyoming, Finland, and other countries and states where woman suffrage is already established. As one sees more and more of the evil plight of women, we realize ever more clearly that nothing can really lift them out of it till the power has been given them to help themselves. And we must remember that woman suffrage is not an end, in itself, but only a means to various ends; a short and direct way of bringing about much needed reforms which man's government has singularly failed to effect. In an address given in Montreal by Mr. C. M. Holt, K.C., LL.D., he says:

"The decision of matters relating to children has now been raised from parental jurisdiction to the law, and keen observers, like Sir Edward Grey, saw in this one, one of the strongest arguments for giving women the franchise. . . . From now on, women will insist, and obtain the right to have a voice in the making of all laws which regulate the conditions under which they and their children are to live. And their intuitive wisdom, and special knowledge of the natures of themselves and their children, trained and broadened by the exercise of their faculties in national affairs which make for broadness and greatness of character, will help men and women together to solve the social evils which are eating like cankers into the vitality of the race."

In one of my future articles I intend to deal, in detail, with many of our "good laws," showing where they fail in adequacy or justice, especially as regards women and children.

The Most Dangerous Thing in the World

(Copyright, 1912, by the New York Herald Co. All rights reserved.)

The Slippery Ladder is the Direct Cause of 200,000 Accidents and 6,000 Deaths Annually in the United States. Devices to Make It Reasonably Safe.

What is the most dangerous thing in the world?

If you happen to be visiting in New York, nine chances in ten you will say dynamite or aeroplane. If you are a manufacturer or mill man you will say buzzsaw or flywheel. If you are familiar with insurance matters you will say the bit of fruit skin on the sidewalk or the falling brick. If you are a farmer you will say gunpowder or running. If you are a woman of the home loving type you will say pistol or snake or cailiper. If you are an observant business woman you will say the revolving door or slippery pavement or, frankly, the car-repellent dinner. If you are a physician you will say the public drinking cup or the corn razor. If you are an old lady you will say the automobile in the hands of the joy rider. If you are an old gentleman you will say the loose rug on the parquet floor.

And you are all wrong. You might just as well have said platonic friendship, or a flyer in Wall street, or the bunny hug dance, or the Black Hand, or—widows. The most dangerous thing in the world is a ladder.

Jacob dreamed he saw a ladder
Reaching to the sky;
What a chance to get to Heaven
For folks who couldn't fly!
Climb up, ye little children!
Climb up, ye older people!
Climb up into the sky!

THERE is only one safe, well behaved ladder known to history. That one was seen some four thousand years ago. It is known as Jacob's Ladder. But it was seen only in a dream, and it was being used only by angels. Which facts would seem to offer little encouragement to mortals of to-day, who learn, perhaps for the first time, the dangers of the ubiquitous ladder.

In Germany, the home of Jacobs, by the way, they have been paying special attention lately to the deadly ladder and its evil ways. The patiently studious Germans have a marvellous knack for tackling some abstract subject, getting it in a corner and, by some sort of third degree inquisition, compelling it to reveal facts having direct and potent bearing on civic affairs.

With an interest in vital statistics equalled by no other nation, a faculty for marshalling facts in logical order and rare discernment concerning popular rights, Germany is now leading the world in matters relating to public safety, hygiene and civic betterment. Twenty-five years ago some German statistical explorer prowling about in the wilderness of municipal reports discovered traces of the malign influences being wrought upon his countrymen by the untamed and apparently untamable ladder. Germany began collecting and collating facts about the ladder.

To-day she has enough direct evidence to have every ladder in the world burned at the stake and its inventor jailed for life. Proof of contributory negligence by the users, which seems to be clearly shown, alone would save the inventor from the fate of his invention.

There are more than 1,000,000 non-fatal accidents in the United States annually. Of this number more than 200,000 are caused by ladders. The ladder causes one-fifth of all the accidents which occur in the United States.

There are more than 60,000 deaths annually in the United States caused by accidents. Of this number more than 5,000 are caused by ladders. The ladder causes one-twelfth of all the deaths by accident occuring in the United States.

But it takes years to get a national start toward accident prevention, especially where accidents are regarded as quite unimportant. It takes a good many years to educate workmen and employers to see the truths of their mutual relationship. Our American people are stupidly slow in encouraging and supporting distributed efforts for their own protection and betterment.

The recently established American Museum of Safety, located in the Engineers' Building, New York city, is a most praiseworthy attempt to incorporate into our civic life ideas which have been worked out with tremendous success in foreign countries for the past quarter of a century. It deserves the support of every public spirited citizen, whether employer or employe, for its work is a service to both. Only by utilising the experience of older countries can our own hope to catch up to them, and in these important matters of industrial safety, hygiene and civic progress we are years behind our foreign friends.

Designs of Safety Ladders.

All the world except America knows that dangerous things ought to be painted bright red, and has done so. If that idea becomes general here, as it should, Mars will think we are suffering from a national hemorrhage, for we have something like five million ladders in this country which ought to be labeled dangerous with the fiery color. That's the first step in sterilising a ladder.

Most of the ladder accidents come from slipping feet; so the safety experts have devised feet which will not slip. One shown at the Museum of Safety is a copy of the German idea, having basswood shoes to create friction, fastened on the feet of the ladder. Where the ladder is to be used on concrete or cement floors a friction sole of slag is substituted for the wood sole. This ladder is so safe from slipping that photographs of it are shown in which it is slanted at an angle of ninety degrees with a man at the top rung. The only criticism of it is that the attachment of the shoes may cause increase of lateral shakiness.

Two other excellent patterns of safety ladders are in use abroad. One has a shoe into the bottom of which are set small spikes, and the other has a rubber disc set into the shoe. But here again the criticism of a tendency to cause shakiness at the foot of the ladder is made by the inventive Yankee. Clever patterns of safety ladders are welcomed by the Museum of Safety, and there is reason to believe that such an invention would make one of the biggest commercial successes of history. There are something like two patents a day registered at the Patent Office in Washington having to do with ladders, and the most inventive people of the world ought not to have to import safety devices.

A very simple and thoroughly effective method of making almost any ladder reasonably safe from slipping is to cut a section of rubber hose into short lengths and securely fasten these pieces "lengthwise" over the full area of the feet of the ladder. Such a device will not scratch even the finest floor, and is probably the cheapest insurance so far discovered by man.

For outdoor use, similar pieces of emery cloth or a section of the spiked metal known as "cat teasers" are excellent. It is a good plan to cover the upper ends of the ladder with sections of rubber hose, too, for a great proportion of the accidents caused by ladders are due to the slipping of the top of the ladder where it has leaned against some support. And all ladders used out of doors, or for safety emergency purposes, or for access to garrets or roofs, ought to be equipped with hooks at the top somewhat after the fashion of the fireman's scaling ladder. The man who makes a wide-base Eiffel tower sort of ladder, with feet that will not slip and that has no chance to become wabbly in the feet, and fitted with non-slipping top and hooks that can be used or folded out of the way, will do more to prevent pain and suffering and death than all the fortunes lavished on peace conferences and Hague mansions. Hog cholera investigation gets $100,000 of our national funds in a single year, but here is a subject directly associated with our safety which has utterly escaped attention. The hookworm thrives in the blood of the idle, but the ladder selects the strongest and best of the industrially fit.

At least paint a bright red daub on the ladder. It is one of the few things brought down from the ancients which civilisation has entirely failed to civilise.

Paying the Penalty.

The subject of indemnity, accident insurance and responsibility looms large in the story of the ladder. Nowhere in the world is human life and property valued as highly as it is in the United States. Life is nowhere so sacred as it is here. We hold world's records for financial valuations of human life, of an eye or a hand or a finger. Thus it is that we pay more than any other nation of the world when the court upholds the claim of the injured for damages. Other wiser nations long ago learned the superior advantage and larger justice of compulsory insurance with which to meet the awful bill which accidents create. "Prevention a benefaction; compensation an apology" in the splendid sentence of Dr. W. H. Tolman, of the Museum of Safety, which fairly sums up the broader view now being taken by progressive economists everywhere.

Gladstone said it was the function of government to make it hard to do wrong and easy to do right. It is the function of honorable business to make it hard to get hurt and easy to be safe. Lord Herschel recently epitomized the situation when he said in the British Parliament that the employer was bound in common law to carry on his business so as not to expose workmen to unreasonable risks. The Code Napoleon, that wonderfully omniscient national statement of personal rights, said just about the same thing long before.

Courts of appeal, the world over, are struggling with the meaning of the word accident. And their decisions mean much to every householder as well as to every employer of labor. In March, 1910, the House of Lords of England decided that a workman tightening up an ordinary nut with an ordinary wrench, from which exertion he ruptured a blood vessel, could recover damages or compensation, even although it was shown that he was a sufferer from a heart affection. The Court of Appeals in New York State has decided that personal injury by accident may result from mere fright or shock received in the course of employment. Employers are even held to be liable for infection from materials handled in the ordinary course of employment. The ladder, then, may be and probably has been one of the most expensive and controversial things which the administration of law ever has discovered. It ought to be mauzled and sterilised, and chained to do the useful bidding of man, not to cause him pain and injury and death.

New York city averages more than 3,500 deaths by accident every year, more than nine per day. One-twelfth of these fatalities are caused by ladders, or nearly one death per day in New York city alone by the use of ladders.

The Economic Loss.

The economic loss occasioned by accidents for which the ladder is directly responsible almost passes belief. Mr. Frederick L. Hoffman, probably the leading life insurance statistician of the United States, estimates that the net economic gain to society from the life of a male wage earner in the mechanical or manufacturing industries averages $900 per year, his normal period of individual activity extending from fifteen to sixty-five. On the basis which Mr. Hoffman approves, but reducing the value of the individual one-third, we have $20,000,000 as the annual economic loss in the United States occasioned by fatalities for which the ladder is responsible. But there must be added to this the loss through non-fatal accidents, in which the economic non-productivity of the man, as well as the cost of maintaining him during the period of convalescence, reach a total of something over $20,000,000. No account is here made of the economic loss which inevitably accompanies work done by men who are recovering from illness and injury. Millions of men return to work before they are able to do that work justice.

Professor Seager, of Columbia University, one of the leading statisticians in such matters, estimates that the annual economic loss to this country due to fatal and non-fatal accidents is $350,000,000. Of this amount more than $40,000,000 is charged to the account of the ladder. Plate glass makers along estimate that the loss occasioned by ladders breaking plate windows is more than

But while we do estimating Germany states facts. She keeps records of unfailing accuracy and inestimable value. In 1909, for instance, she has accurate record of 28,510 accidents, fatal and non-fatal, caused by ladders in agricultural, forestry and fishing pursuits. She can furnish the world with graphic charts where every accident has a story, and it is from her mass of splendid records that the careful estimates are made for countries whose records are meagre. Germany has a wonderful chart of one year's accidents chargeable to the ladder on farms alone. It shows 14,945 men injured and 632 killed by falling from ladders in hay mows during the twelve months. It shows that ladders lead all other causes of accident in agricultural pursuits. Just here, incidentally, it may be stated that agriculture is far from being the safe thing it has been credited with being. Farming is to-day one of the most dangerous occupations in the world. The American farmer, of whom there are something more than 10,400,000, is much more liable to accidents than his German cousin, for he is often a pioneer clearing the forests, building houses and cellars, doing mason work and carpentering and roofing and odd jobs of all kinds. France, Austria, Great Britain and Australia tell much the same story concerning the ladder, but, as usual, the figures in America lead the world.

Yankees Lead in Accidents.

Wherever there is a competitive showing the American manages to get close to the top, whether it be deaths by ladders or pie eating. The American beats the world for accidents. We have anywhere from two to ten times as many as any other civilised country on the globe, and the ratio is increasing so fast that the statisticians almost doubt the accuracy of their own proven figures.

We have in the United States twice as many accidents, proportionately to the population, as occurs in Great Britain, in almost every line of occupation. On our railroads we kill three times as many and injure five times as many as Great Britain. We kill two and one-half times as many and injure five times as many as Germany. We kill three times as many and injure nine times as many as Austro-Hungary. And we are proud of it, instead of being ashamed of it.

We are the most utterly reckless people history has ever produced. We court danger, laugh at death, throw dice with fate, and stake our destinies on a turn of the wheel, both individually and nationally. A skyscraper ironworker has been seen to step in the middle of a girder twelve inches wide, with nothing under him nearer than Broadway, three hundred feet below, poise on one foot, lift the other, and calmly strike a match on the sole of his shoe so he stood there balanced on one foot. Any window cleaner will lean his heavy ladder against the middle of a big plate of glass in a Broadway store front and go thumping his heavy way up the sharp incline.

Now the fact is that most of these ladder accidents are unnecessary. Fifty per cent prevention and fifty per cent carefulness would almost bring the ladder back into decent repute. Statisticians like Professor Irving Fisher, of Yale, say that of the three billion dollars annually lost to the United States through accidents, sickness and death, one-half is preventible. German statisticians, after a searching investigation of 15,070 accidents, reported that fifty-three per cent were avoidable. In many lines of industry in the United States it is a conservative estimate to say that we could reduce the accidents and the economic loss which they entail, seventy-five per cent.

What the Doctors Say About Raynaud's Disease--Facts Concerning the Treatment of Chicken Pox

RAYNAUD'S disease is a strange affection which was more particularly studied by Dr. Raynaud, of Paris, in 1862. It is characterised by a symmetrical and successive mortification of the extremities—the fingers, the toes and sometimes the ears and the nose.

This disease, which is observed principally in adults of from eighteen to thirty years, often occurs at the age of forty and even at sixty-five and seventy. Raynaud's disease, which is the name usually given to the affection, is known to all doctors, and presents three periods in its evolution.

The first period, which is generally insidious, lasts from a few days to a month, and is characterized by paleness and insensibility of the skin. The patient experiences a feeling of tingling and a sensation of "dead finger" analogous to what is felt after great cold. Thus the frequent chilblains or which people complain are often not true chilblains, but merely the small accident connected with this disease.

At other times the ends of the fingers become livid instead of remaining pale; there is a venous stasis; a veritable local asphyxia occurs, and by this name of "local asphyxia" Raynaud's disease is also indicated. The parts affected are symmetrical. On the thermometer they show a fall of temperature of from 15 degrees to 18 degrees centigrade. These accidents at first occur by attacks, then the intermittences disappears and the troubles become continuous.

In the second period the tinglings experienced at first give place to acute pains, and the affected parts assume a livid violet tint. The mortification is sometimes preceded by the formation of vesicles which burst, leaving an ulceration. The mortification is generally superficial and very limited, not extending deeper than the superficial layer of the skin, and the nails do not always fall. But there are cases in which the entire phalange is attacked and the mortified parts become as black as coal. This second period lasts for ten days and even more.

The elimination of the parts affected and the cicatrisation belong to the third period. This is an operation which lasts for several months. When the mortification has been very superficial, the soft part of the fingers is the seat of whitish, parchmentlike scars. The ends of the fingers assume a conical and pointed form. In more serious cases an inflammatory furrow forms at the base of the mortified part and in the seat of a suppuration which favors the fall of the part affected.

In a few exceptional cases the lesion is not limited to the extremity of the fingers and the toes. It also attacks the ears and the end of the nose.

Though the manner in which Raynaud's disease evolves is well known, the causes which produce it are far from certain. Anatomically it is due to a contracting of the small arteries which irrigate the extremities, and this contraction, it is thought, is provoked by a tetanic state of the nervous system which commands the nutrition and the sympathetic nerve.

But and what influence is this tetanisation produced? To this question there is no precise reply. All that one can say is that impaludism, leprosy, pericarditis, diabetes and tuberculosis have been given as the causes of Raynaud's disease, or of local asphyxia of the extremities, as it is often called.

There is another cause which is often brought into question, but about which perhaps not enough has been said; this is ergotism. And this cause was very marked in a patient, a judge, sixty-two years of age, whom I had under treatment. The extremities of his fingers and toes became detached symmetrically after presenting the different phases of evolution which I have described. I was greatly perplexed, but ended by learning that this patient had for a number of years used rye bread exclusively, and I have every reason to believe that this bread was made with flour damaged by ergot.

It is far from my thoughts to entertain the belief that ergotism is the only factor, or even the most important factor, in the production of Raynaud's disease. Nevertheless, in the circumstances I have pointed out, the blame was to be laid on ergotism.

The general treatment of the disease should aim at suppressing in the diet all substances liable to become transformed in the organism into products likely to provoke the tetanisation of the sympathetic nerve, and consequently cause the contraction of the small arteries. One ought, therefore, to diminish the amount of animal food, and particularly of meat, in favor of vegetal alimentation, insisting upon green vegetables and cooked fruits.

Before each repast it will be well to take a pill composed of five centigrammes of bichlorhydrate of quinine, of one centigramme of ergotine and of extract of cinchona, in a sufficient quantity to make a pill. To these tonic substances the ergotine will add its action of dilating the vessels when taken in small doses.

These pills should be taken for a week and then should be changed for another—ten drops of tincture of Ricberia grandis in a little water, to be taken at meals. This tincture at the same time acts as an aperative and dilates the vessels.

AS is usual at this period of the year, chicken pox or varicella is now prevalent in places where children are numerous. Although this is essentially a benign disease, yet it is eminently contagious. In boarding schools particularly, doctors must redouble their vigilance and take care to segregate for a period of from twelve to fifteen days all the young patients in the establishments committed to their charge. Their task in these circumstances is rendered all the more difficult by the fact that chicken pox often appears without any very noticeable symptoms. Very often it is unaccompanied by fever, and many affected by it are surprised that because of a few pimples scattered here and there over the body they must be kept apart from their fellows.

Chicken pox is an affection almost entirely special to children, in whom it may be observed from their first year, although it is especially frequent from the ages of two to six. It appears often in the epidemical form and spreads by contagion.

Some doctors are inclined to regard varicella as a very attenuated form of smallpox, hence the name "chicken pox," by which it is popularly known. This opinion is based merely on the analogy between the two types of skin eruptions and the coincidence sometimes observed between two epidemics of smallpox and chicken pox. But the theory falls on considering that on the one hand chicken pox offers no safeguard against infection by smallpox and does not prevent the effects of vaccination, and, on the other hand, the disease may occur in children who have been vaccinated or who have had smallpox. Chicken pox, too, differs essentially from smallpox in the course of its development.

After a period of incubation extending over a fortnight chicken pox becomes apparent by such symptoms as slight shivering, extreme fatigue and a general but not very intense condition of fever. In less than twenty-four hours small pink spots will appear on the skin, and these after a few hours are topped by a vesicle, and the next day the whole rash shows a vesiculous appearance.

The vesicles are sometimes small and pointed, sometimes more voluminous and globular in form; they may attain several millimetres in diameter. They are filled with a limpid or a slightly yellowish liquid. Their base is sometimes surrounded by an inflammatory ring. By the third day the contents of the vesicle has become thicker and tends to become purulent. On the fourth day desiccation commences, and the vesicles shrivel and shrink in and form small, brownish scabs, which fall about the eighth day. Frequently the child will scratch them off with the finger nails before they are entirely desiccated. The vesicles leave small reddish spots, which generally disappear gradually, almost always without leaving a scar.

An eruption of chicken pox does not burst out all over the body at once, but appears in successive rashes. It is not confined to any special parts of the body. It may begin and spread at the same time from the face, the trunk of the body or the limbs. A dozen pimples may be seen the first day, while three or even ten times as many may be visible the next day, and so on for several days in succession.

If the intestines are sluggish they may be stimulated by administering a few grams of castor oil. It is advisable to make the patient rinse his mouth two or three times a day with a dentrifice to which may be added a whole or half a teaspoonful of oxygenated water at twelve volumes. It is also well to apply a lotion around the eyes and the face, consisting of 2 per cent. boric acid water with the chill taken off. Finally, in order to prevent the child scratching the scabs and the consequent danger of inoculation by the finger nails, it is a good practice to rub a small amount of vaseline over the itching parts and to sprinkle them with a soothing powder, composed, for instance, of 50 grams of starch powder, 15 grams of zinc oxide powder and 2 grams of powdered camphor, the whole perfumed with two or three drops of essence of vervain.

The child, of course, should not be allowed to rejoin his playmates without having had a good bath, and his clothes must have been completely disinfected.

NEWEST WARSHIPS FIERY MONSTERS

Flames From the Funnel of H.M.S. Shoot Fifty Feet Into the Air

The new battle cruiser Lion has been christened "H.M.S. Hell Fire" by those seeing her. The Lion is the craft that set out to break all speed records. She succeeded easily in spite of rough weather! but she also succeeded in proving herself to be one of the hottest places to live in invented by man. The Lion needs engines of 70,000 horse power to drive her at record speed, and she needs record heat to generate the steam necessary for it. Hence the trouble. The navigating bridge of the flying leviathan was placed on one side of the foremost funnel and the fire controls platform on the other. The result was that when the ship ran her full power trial, pieces of metal on the bridge were twisted out of shape by the intense heat and the compasses also were deranged. The fire control platform which is just behind and about thirty feet above the top of this funnel, was continually swept by the flames, which rose to a height of fifty feet above the funnel. It was impossible for anyone to remain on the platform.

Extensive alterations will be made in the construction of the Lion and her sister ships Princess Royal and Queen Mary. The foremost funnel is to be removed further aft, so as to get it out of the way of the navigating bridge and the fire control apparatus is to be housed in the conning tower, which in order to accomodate it, is to be enlarged by twenty feet.

HONORED BY FRENCH

The Riviera Owes Much of its Fame to Queen Victoria and King Edward

The long connection of the British Royal family with the Riviera receives gratifying recognition at the hands of the local authorities of Nice and Cannes in the dedication of separate monuments to Queen Victoria and King Edward VII. Queen Victoria's visit to the South of France continued for a number of years. Delightful Grasse, too, with its narrow streets filled with the odor of perfume, gave a charming welcome to the Queen-Empress during her winters there.

The Jetty, to which the yachts in the basin moor at Cannes, is named after King Edward, whose genial presence is one of the precious memories of the district. He was not only the leader of the cosmopolitan society, but the leader of all its sports. It was a great grief to Cannes when the King, having come to the throne, selected Biarritz as his place of Royal sojourn in place of Cannes. Both Cannes and Nice owe, if not their existance, at least their popularity, to the English. Lord Brougham, the founder of Cannes, possesses his statue in the town, while a park and the jetty celebrate the name of Edward; at Nice, the Promenade des Anglais bears witness, for all time, to the dominance of the British.

TAXATION INAUSTRIA

By Levying Higher Rates, State Employes Will be Better Paid.

A financial programme whereby taxes will be considerably raised is about to be introduced by the Austrian Government, in order to meet the increased requirements of the army and navy, and to give State officials and employes on the State railroads pay corresponding with the the present exorbitant prices of foodstuffs.

A progressive income tax to be raised is expected to yield $3,500,000. The tax on incomes from $250 to $2,000 remains unchanged, but on incomes exceeding this amount a tax from 2½ to 6½ per cent. is imposed, whereas hitherto 5½ per cent. was the maximum.

Bachelors, spinsters, and childless widows, who have to provide only for themselves will have to pay, beside the normal tax corresponding to their incomes, an extra 15 per cent., whilst taxpayers, who beside themselves, provide only for one person—for instance, a childless couple—will have to pay ten per cent. extra.

NOT ONE WOMAN IN TWENTY HAS A STRONG BACK.

THE KIDNEYS ARE TO BLAME NINE TIMES OUT OF TEN.

Women are coming to understand that weak, lame and aching backs from which they suffer are due to wrong action of the kidneys.

The poisons that ought to be carried off are sent back into the blood, taking with them a multitude of aches and pains. There is no use of expecting relief until the kidneys are restored to health.

Doan's Kidney Pills are the quickest and most reliable remedy. Mrs. Ed. Baxter, Upham, N.B., writes:—"I take a good deal of pleasure in telling you what Doan's Kidney Pills have done for me. I was troubled with my kidneys for a number of years, and my back was so lame I could not sweep the floor. A friend of mine advised me to try a box of Doan's Kidney Pills, which I did, and after using three boxes I am as well as ever. I highly recommend them to anyone suffering from lame back or kidney trouble."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50 cents per box, or three boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

Why Should I Use Cuticura Soap?

"There is nothing the matter with my skin, and I thought Cuticura Soap was only for skin troubles." True, it is for skin troubles, but its great mission is to prevent skin troubles. For more than a generation its delicate emollient and prophylactic properties have rendered it the standard for this purpose, while its extreme purity and refreshing fragrance give to it all the advantages of the best of toilet soaps. It is also invaluable in keeping the hands soft and white, the hair, live and glossy, and the scalp free from dandruff and irritation.

While its first cost is a few cents more than that of ordinary toilet soaps, it is prepared with such care and of such materials, that it wears to a wafer, often outlasting several cakes of other soap, and making its use, in practice, most economical. Cuticura Soap is sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, but the truth of these claims may be demonstrated without cost by sending to "Cuticura," Dept. 7M, Boston, U. S. A., for a liberal sample cake, together with a thirty-two page book on the skin and hair.

AFRICAN ATROCITIES

Tribal Feuds Result in an Awful Slaughter of Natives

Harrowing details of native uprising in Central Africa have just reached England. During terrible fighting near the Anglo-Congolese frontier, near Lake Albert, 295 natives were killed and beheaded and hundreds driven into the lake. Natives of the Balegga district in Congo territory west of the Semliki River and not far from the southwest corner of Lake Albert Nyanaza, broke out in open rebellion against the established chiefs, and murdered the local King, his Prime Minister and over 300 followers. The fighting was entirely between native tribes. The corpses were beheaded and strips of flesh from the bodies then laid across the faces of the dead, all the heads being placed in a row along the main road.

DR. FREDERICK A. COOK. It is reported that Mr. Llarton, a millionaire, and Vedrines, the well-known aviator, are preparing for a trip to the North Pole with a view to the discovery of Dr. Cook's missing documents. The expedition, it is further stated, will be composed of Cook, Vedrines, Wellman, and two Norwegians. The idea is to go as far north as possible by a new type of ballon and aeroplane combined. The party expect to set out from some point in Norway.

REINDEER TO THE RESCUE

Alaska Could be Made Great Breeding Ground to Supply Food

Reindeer meat from Alaska may be a food common to the Canadian and American table in the near future, to supplement the dwindling beef supply

This was the opinion expressed by William F. Lopp, in charge of the United States Government's reindeer service. He has just returned from a 14,000-mile tour of inspection through Alaska.

"A commercial shipment of reindeer meat, the first made into this country, has just been received at Seattle," said Mr. Lopp. "In 25 years from now, at the present rate of increase, there should be 2,000,000 prime beef reindeer in Alaska, on which the people of this country can depend for much of their flesh diet.

"In taste reindeer meat is a cross between mutton and beef, but more palatable than either. Reindeer can be raised more cheaply than cattle, because they will thrive on wastes so barren that even goats would starve. There are 400,000 square miles of frozen tundra in Alaska, fit for nothing else, but which as reindeer ranches would provide abundant pasturage for 10,000,000 of the animals."

IN THE CLOUDS

Some Extraordinary Cases of Popping the Question.

It was bound to come. There have been proposals in motor-cars, motor-boats, in coal-mines and gold-mines, on flip-flops and scenic railways, and now we have the balloon proposal—to be followed, no doubt, in due course by the aeroplane courtship.

The hero of the balloon proposal was Mr. Sidney S. Stowell, of Pittsfield, an enthusiastic aeronaut, who was smitten with the charms of Miss Blanche Edith Hulse, a nurse at Bellevue Hospital, New York. Under the rules of the Aero Club of Pittsfield a candidate for an air-pilot's certificate must make six flights with at least one passenger. He accomplished five flights with a Mr. John P. Manning, of Pittsfield, as passenger, and it chanced that on the day of the sixth flight Miss Hulse was in Pittsfield on leave of business from the hospital in New York.

She went to see the balloon flight, and when he was about to ascend Dr. Stowell discovered that he need of another 100lb. of ballast. There was no extra ballast about, and a sudden inspiration came to the gallant doctor. "Miss Hulse," he said, "remember what you asked me the other day? Here's your chance. We need a little ballast. Want to come?"

Miss Hulse promptly agreed, swung herself into the wicker basket, and a moment later was travelling skyward with the doctor and Mr. Manning.

Exactly how the proposal was made is a subject which, of course, the doctor is somewhat reticent about, but it was evidently made while the second man in the basket was looking the other way.

"I was too busy leaning over the side of the basket taking photographs," said Mr. Manning afterwards, "to guess what was going on. But I could divine without more than a look that my attention to things on earth below would be appreciated by the other passengers."

And Dr. Stowell made this interesting confession: "Whatever Mr. Manning may say about it, if he admitted he loked over the edge of the basket, that eliminates him as the only witness of whatever proposal I submitted to the then Miss Hulse. We were up about two miles, and thus, with his observation accounted for, I think we can safely say we were beyond the din of unsympathetic third parties." Miss Hulse duly became Mrs. Stowell, and says that she is never afraid to go up in a balloon when her husband is pilot.

TWO DOZEN BOTTLES OF RED RYE HID IN BREAD

And Shipped Into New Ontario—Meant for the Men of the North.

The blighting hand of suspicion has frequently pointed with more or less show of reason to one or other of the common household necessities, imputing to them connivance in the liquor smugglers' dreams. The harmless, attenuated sausage has in this way been something found to contain a comfortable skinful of some friendly, though illicit, beverage, and the decorative wedding cake has also been known to conceal within its saintly-whited exterior more than one measure of the cup that cheers.

But it has remained for neglected New Ontario to bring into disrepute the homely housewife's loaf of bread, and to render it henceforward open to disfiguring probes of the license detective.

Constable Rowell, of Matheson, recently uncovered no less than two dozen quart bottles of whisky consigned from North Bay to Porcupine, in the prohibited area, which had been deftly concealed, each one in a loaf of bread.

The constable evidently had a phenomenal sense of detection, for he is said to have made this find by shaking a large parcel containing bread, and to have been rewarded for his effort by hearing the familiar "glug, glug, glug," of the agitated spirits. Then the skeleton loaves were uncovered, their contents removed, and the shade of suspicion forever left upon what had hitherto been deemed blameless.

When the consignor is tried he may plead a new form of bread-baking—that of placing fire in the interior to the elimination of the old-fashioned oven. It is to be doubted, however, whether this plea will avail the ingenious smuggler anything.

HEART DISEASE CURED

Kingston Girl Saved by "Fruit-a-tives"

Heart Weakness and Heart Irritation are the common outgrowth of Indigestion. Gas is formed in the stomach and this accumulation of gas bulges outside walls of the stomach and presses against the heart. Palpitation, pain over the heart, and sometimes a feeling of smothering and dizziness, all are caused by the stomach and not because of any organic heart disease.

"Fruit-a-tives" will always cure this weak, irritated condition of the heart by curing the stomach.

Cornwall Lineman Electrocuted.

Cornwall, March 20.—Robert Anderson, a lineman employed with the Bell Telephone crew making alterations to the system here, was electrocuted last evening while on a pole about 35 feet from the ground.

He went up to unfasten a rope and his hand came in contact with a live wire of the Stormont Electric Light Co. He fell to the ground dead. Anderson was 27 years of age. His home is in Almonte, Ont.

Objected To the Nurses.

New York, March 20.—Dr. Mary Walker, whose advanced views have caused her to wear male attire for more than half a century, insisted on being removed from the Presbyterian hospital yesterday to a hotel because she could not stand being pampered by a "lot of female nurses."

Dr. Walker is ill from bronchitis and her condition is serious. She was a nurse herself during the civil war.

Edmonton, Alta., March 20.—J. D. McArthur of the Edmonton, Dunvegan and Peace River Railway, says: "The steel makers of Canada say they will not be able to let us have any rails this year. We are asking the Dominion Government to allow steel from across the border free of duty."

MISGIVINGS ALLAYED.

Kaiser Wilhelm Will Not Postpone Trip After All.

Berlin, March 20.—Misgivings aroused by the announcement of a change in the Emperor's plans were quickly allayed yesterday afternoon by another notification issued by the officers of the court marshal, which now states that the official arrangements for the Emperor's departure on Friday will now be carried out.

In the morning surprise was caused by the announcement that the Emperor had postponed his departure for Vienna, Venice and Corfu, scheduled for March 22.

There was a strong disposition here, to connect the Emperor's action with the speech delivered on Monday by Winston Spencer Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, in the British House of Commons.

This was strengthened in consequence of the Emperor in the course of the morning paying a long visit to Admiral Albert P. Von Tirpitz, secretary of the Admiralty staff assembled in conference, the object of which, however, was not disclosed.

The negotiations which followed on the trip to Berlin of Viscount Haldane are being continued, but any big hopes of their success which may have been entertained are gradually failing. The negotiators would now be satisfied in all probability if they could achieve no more than a simple removal of the sources of misunderstanding which have hitherto existed.

The Bourse was weak yesterday. Government stocks were generally lower.

German Paper's Sharp Rebuke.

Cologne, Germany, March 20.—In replying to the Churchill speech The Cologne Gazette adopts an unusally sharp tone. It says in substance that Great Britain must decide from the standpoint of her own interests what increase of her fleet is necessary, but that Germany must do the same thing. It continues:

"Germany will hardly ever have a navy equal to that of Great Britain, but if Germany's navy is to be destroyed, the victory must cost the enemy so heavily that England will hardly have any resources left to defend its great international interests."

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

King Albert of Belgium and Queen Elizabeth arrived in Paris yesterday for a short visit. They were received by President Falliares.

It is understood that the C.N.R. will get Dominion subsidy on 500 miles of line from the summit of the Rockies to Vancouver.

The Western Elevator Co. of Moose Jaw, Sask., lost its 35,000 bushel elevator yesterday by fire. It contained 7,000 bushels of grain which is a total loss.

Of the 13,000 miners in Denain, France, about 7,000 have struck, demanding an eight-hour day and a pension of 40 cents a day, after twenty-five years service.

The labor leader, Tom Mann, was arrested in London, Eng., yesterday at the instance of the police of Salford, where he is alleged to have made an inflammatory speech recently.

"I am not in a resigning mood," was the statement of Dr. Molloy, M.P. for Provencher, Man., yesterday, apropos of the rumor that he is offering his seat to Bourassa or Lavergne.

Fred. Whittaker, Hamilton, an eight-year-old child, was attacked yesterday by a vicious dog and badly bitten. This is the third case within a week and another rabies outbreak is feared.

Three ice-breaking steamers were despatched from St. Petersburg yesterday in the direction of the island of Nargen, in the Gulf of Finland, where 300 fishermen are adrift on floating ice.

The Grand Black Chapter of Ontario East convened in the Orange Hall at Kingston, yesterday, when fully 150 members were in attendance. Sir Knight James Batten, grand preceptor, of Peterboro, presided.

Braving large fields of running ice, seven Austrians crossed the Niagara River in a small boat shortly after dark. After escaping the floes of ice and landing safely, they were discovered by accident and arrested.

Last week scores of horses belonging to Iowa and Minnesota farmers, were killed at Weyburn, Sask., by Government inspectors, and it is said now they were affected only with train fever, and not with glanders.

Magistrate Fraser of Niagara Falls sentence David Goodes to two years less one day in Central Prison for highway robbery. Goodes held up and robbed Horatio Willox, a St. David's farmer, on a lonely road a week ago.

Bombs exploded while being filled by conspirators in four different houses in the Miragaia quarter, a suburb of Oporto, yesterday. The houses were demolished and four dead and seven injured were taken from the ruins.

James Haggerty, ex-M.P.P., Ill.

Belleville, March 20.—James Haggerty, who resides in Huntingdon Township, an ex-warden of the county and ex-M.P.P. for North Hastings, was stricken with paralysis on Monday and is in a serious condition, he having been unconscious since sustaining the stroke.

Clergue Gets Interests.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., March 20.—It was reported last night by John O'Boyle of the former Sault Drydock & Shipbuilding Co., that arrangements were made at a meeting between members of the company and representatives of Clergue interests whereby the charter of the company passes into the hands of Clergue and his French and Belgian associates.

So far as is known the site selected when the bylaw passed is still in view, but the Clergue interests are negotiating for a site east of that point, and there is every possibility that the dock will be constructed there.

Young Bride Badly Burned.

Smith's Falls, Ont., March 20.—Mrs. F. Stephanick, a young bride of three weeks, undertook to light her fire yesterday morning with coal oil. The fluid exploded, the flames shot out and the woman was badly burned about the face and hands and some of the furniture caught fire. Mrs. Stephanick could not speak English, having but lately arrived from Austria, but she succeeded in attracting the attention of some neighbors, who rushed to her assistance and put out the fire before the firemen arrived on the scene.

YOUR MORNING MAIL.

It May Be Dangerous to Open It at the Breakfast Table.

Did you ever hear that it is dangerous to open your morning mail at the breakfast table? According to a Berlin scientist, Professor Kron, and the London Lancet, it is dangerous—very. Professor Kron has succeeded in tracing several cases of contagion to the old custom of waiting until you sit down at the breakfast table before opening and going through your morning mail. He calls attention to the fact that the average man or woman goes down to breakfast with hands and face scrupulously clean, teeth scrubbed and throat gargled. In that condition he is prepared to eat without danger of swallowing more disease germs than may have possibly escaped the watchful attentions of the cook.

But instead of doing that he handles letters and papers which have passed through many hands before reaching his own. Between bites he opens envelopes and wrappers and in doing so unthinkingly paves the way for the absorption of all kinds of germs which may or may not do him a great deal of harm.

It has long been the custom in many well regulated households where the breakfast hour is fixed somewhat late and where the mail carrier gets around before breakfast is served to place each person's morning letters by his or her plate in the dining room. This, says the Lancet, is a custom which should be abolished at once. Letters should be opened and read either before or after breakfast, but never at the table during the handling of food.

To Restore Leather Bindings.

To restore the leather bindings of books wash them first very lightly and carefully with clean warm water in which a tiny piece of soda has been dissolved, in order to free the leather from grease; then wash with clear water to remove the soda and dry. Dissolve a bit of gum arabic the size of a small bean in a teaspoonful of water and beat it up with a teaspoonful of the white of an egg. With a bit of sponge go lightly over the leather with this glair and let it dry. Should the glair froth up on the leather, as it is very likely to do if there is much tool work on the book, dab it until it subsides with the palm of the hand or with the sponge squeezed as dry as possible.

The Motto on Our Coins.

On April 22, 1864, the coinage of a two cent bronze piece was authorized by congress. On this coin the motto "In God We Trust" appeared for the first time in lieu of the long standing "E Pluribus Unum." On March 3, 1865, the director of the mint, with the approval of the treasury, was authorized to place the new motto upon all gold and silver coins susceptible of such addition.

A GAME OF BRIDGE.

John W. Gates Sprung a Surprise on His Young Friend.

John W. Gates' last office was in the Trinity building. He called his firm Charles G. Gates & Co. Others termed it "the house of the twelve apostles," as a dozen partners were in it. Gates was considered a good bridge whist player. Often after 5 p. m. bridge was played in the office. One day there were only three to play. A young man of good family, but not wealthy, came in.

"Sit down," said Gates agreeably. "I hate to play with a dummy."

"How much a point do you play?" asked the newcomer.

"Fifty," said Gates.

"I can't afford it," was the rejoinder.

"Twenty-five is a big game for me."

"Well, make up the rubber," said Gates disappointedly. "We'll play for twenty-five."

The young man played well, had luck and won.

"We have a sort of clearing house here," said Gates when the game ended. "I'll send you your check in the morning."

The young man got a check for $18,000. Astounded, he took it to the signer.

"What does this mean?" he asked. "I circulated that I won $120. We were playing for 25 cents a point, weren't we?"

"We were playing for $25 a point," returned Gates.

"Wha-at! Why, if I'd lost I couldn't have paid."

"If you hadn't paid we'd have run you out of the city," said Gates coldly. "But you won. Cash that check." It was cashed.—New York Tribune.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, March 19.—Business in Manitoba spring wheat over the cable was quiet to-day owing to the fact that the demand was principally for March-April shipment, which exporters cannot very well fill on account of the scarcity of wheat here and near at hand. Cables on the whole were stronger and bids were 1½d higher. The local and outside demand for oats for prompt shipment was fairly good, of which supplies are small and prices steady. The demand for flour for domestic and export account continues good, and the market is active. Millfeed is scarce and firm. A fair trade is passing in butter, of which supplies are ample to fill all requirements at present. Eggs firmer owing to large increase in consumption and smaller receipts. Provisions firm under steady demand.

Facts for Weak Women

Nine-tenths of all the sickness of women is due to some derangement or disease of the organs distinctly feminine. Such sickness can be cured—is cured every day by

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

It Makes Weak Women Strong. Sick Women Well.

It acts directly on the organs affected and in all the cases there is prompt relief. It is a restorative tonic for the whole system. It cures female complaints right in the privacy of home. It makes unnecessary the disagreeable questioning, examination and local treatment so universally insisted upon by doctors, and so abhorrent to every modest woman.

We shall not particularize here as to the symptoms of those peculiar affections incident to women, but those wanting full information as to their symptoms and method of positive cure are referred to the People's Common Sense Medical Adviser—1008 pages, newly revised and up-to-date Edition, sent free on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps to cover cost of mailing only; or, in cloth binding for 50 stamps.

THREE HUNDRED THOUSAND FED BY CHARITY STRIKE SITUATION IS DAILY GROWING WORSE

Factories Are Closing Down All Over the Country as the Result of Want of Coal.

MANY IMMIGRATING

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, ENG., MARCH 20.—It is estimated to-day that three hundred thousand people, mostly miners and industrial workers, and their families, idle through the strike, are being fed by charity. The situation is growing more serious every hour. Various factories are closing down all over the country, daily, for want of coal. At the shipping offices of the Canadian Steamship Companies, today, it is stated that there will be immigration enough this season to fill every ship leaving for Canada. The Canadian Immigration officers have been exceptionally busy during the three weeks of the strike. A good proportion of the best quality of the immigrants are destined for Ontario.

LONDON, ENG., MARCH 20.—Instructions have been sent by the general strike committee here to officials of the Scottish Miner Unions and other Miners' Unions in England and Wales, to make arrangements to have their men return to work on Monday morning next if the minimum wage goes through the Commons and House of Lords and is ratified by His Majesty as promised by Asquith. This is believed to be the beginning of the end of the great struggle. It is believed in some quarters that Leader Bonar Law will attempt to amend the minimum wage bill at the second reading, so that it cannot be applied to other industries without a further act of Parliament.

FOR AGED PEOPLE

Old Folks Should Be Careful in Their Selection of Regulative Medicine.

We have a safe, dependable, and altogether ideal remedy that is particularly adapted to the requirements of aged people and persons of weak constitutions who suffer from constipation or other bowel disorders. We are so certain that it will relieve these complaints and give absolute satisfaction in every particular that we offer it with our personal guarantee that it shall cost the user nothing if it fails to substantiate our claims. This remedy is called Rexall Orderlies.

Rexall Orderlies are eaten just like candy, are particularly prompt and agreeable in action, may be taken at any time, day or night; do not cause diarrhoea, nausea, griping, excessive looseness, or other undesirable effects. They have a very mild but positive action upon the organs with which they come in contact, apparently acting as a regulative tonic upon the relaxed muscular coat of the bowel, thus overcoming weakness, and aiding to restore the bowels to more vigorous and healthy activity. Three sizes, 10c., 25c. and 50c. Sold only at our store.—The Rexall Store, McDermid and Jury.

Mr. Rollie Wilson Will Handle the Shaw Overlands Car

Peterborough is to have another automobile agency. Mr. Rollie Wilson, of the Peterborough Machine Company, has made arrangements with the Shaw Overlands Sales Company, by which he will handle and sell the Shaw Overlands car in Peterborough during the coming season. The Overlands car is one of the best known in the United States and has many good points which should make it of popular demand in this city, especially with an expert like Mr. Wilson in charge of the sales and demonstration.

TIES ROPE ROUND HER NECK AND JUMPS FROM A WINDOW

NEW YORK, MARCH 20.—Early morning pedestrians this morning were shocked to see the body of a woman swinging from the seventh storey window of a fashionable hotel on Broadway. It was Mrs. Blanche Carson, aged fifty, the San Francisco society woman, who yesterday was allowed out on bail for hearing next week, on a charge of smuggling several thousand dollars worth of jewelry from India. She had attached a fire-escape rope to the radiator, tied it around her neck, and jumped out of the window.

FORTY THOUSAND CADETS WILL ATTEND TRAINING CAMPS

An Act Providing for Six Days' Instruction During Coming Summer Was Passed by the Legislature This Morning

Special to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, ONT., MARCH 20. —The Minister of Justice this morning introduced in the House of Commons a bill to amend the criminal code in regard to betting upon race tracks. Its purpose is to prohibit betting upon horse races except upon tracks of racing associations incorporated either by an Act of the Dominion parliament or of any of the Provincial Legislatures. In other words, hereafter it will be impossible for the promoters to secure incorporation by letters patent. The legislation enjoyed by associations incorporated by legislatio remained unimpaired. Sir Wilfrid Laurier thought that the bill might prove a rather contentious one, and in view of the desire for an early prorogation, suggested that it might be left over until next session. The bill was read a first time. Two new racing associations were incorporated yesterday, but the Minister of Justice said there would be no others allowed.

In the Commons this morning, Hon. William Pugsley forced a division on his amendment to award Federal aid to agriculture in the provinces on a basis of population. Premier Borden and the Minister of Agriculture agreed that this would be done, but refused to embody it in the bill. The government sustained on the usual majority.

An Act providing for the training of forty thousand cadets between twelve and sixteen years of age at a six days' camp this summer was passed by the Commons this morning. They will be entirely separate from militia camps. There will be no liquor permitted within the lines and lads will be officered largely by their trained schoolmasters at camps in the county townships.

OFFICERS OF THE 57th REGT. APPOINT COMMITTEES FOR YEAR

Annual Reports Show Regiment to Be in An Efficient and Flourishing Condition

The annual meeting of the officers of the 57th Regiment, Peterborough Rangers, was held in the Mess Rooms at the Armouries on Monday, March 18th. The various committees presented their reports on the work of the past year. These reports show the regiment to be in a prosperous and efficient condition and would indicate bright prospects for the coming year.

The following committees were appointed for the year 1912-1913:

Regimental Committee—Majors Bennett, Eastwood and Hayes.

Band Committee—Major Eastwood, Capt. Clurton and Major Walker.

Rifle Committee—Major Mills, and the officers commanding companies.

Mess Committee— Major Walker, Major Hayes and Capt. McLean.

Nominating Committee—Major Davidson, Major Eastwood, Capt. Eastwood, Capt. McPherson and Lt. Comstock.

Trip Committee—Major Mills, Capt. Higgins, and Lt. K. G. Lech.

Auditors—Lieuts. Kelly and Hall.

IRISH CONCERT AT OMEMEE WAS A GREAT SUCCESS

A very successful Irish evening was enjoyed by the young people of Gilmour Baptist Church and their friends on the evening of March 18. The school room was very pretty with its dainty decorations of green and white; the programme was distinctly Irish and even in the refreshments the display of green and white was quite unique. The following programme was given:

Geographical contest, in which ten of the young people represented ten cities of Ireland.

Solo, "Killarney." Mrs. J. Young.

Address, "Irish People," Rev. J. R. Bonner.

Solo, Miss G. Tindle.

Reading, "How Pat Saved His Bacon," Mr. A Mann.

Address, "Irish Poetry," Mrs. J. Young.

Solo, Mr. A. Mann.

Rec., "Over the Hill to the Poor House," Mrs. F. Scott.

Duet, "Back to Erin." Mrs. Young and Miss Scott.

Address, "St. Patrick," Miss M. Mann.

Game. "A Trip to Ireland."

"God Save the King."

What Will Maple Sugar Harvest Be?

Persons that claim to know, suggest that this year there will possibly be a dearth of maple sugar and maple syrup, especially that made on their native heath—in the woods— from the sap of the sugar maple tree. There are no indications of any scarcity of the artificial maple sugar and syrup that has its origin in secluded shops in a large city. The production of that will not be hindered by the deep snow which, it is said by some, is likely to make it difficult for farmers to move among the maples for the purpose of tapping trees and collecting the resultant sap. It is said that many farmers who make sugar and syrup as a side line, and not as a business, will not think the trouble of boarding the snow in its den, is a compensation for the labour involved. The season of sap flow is on; wood choppers say that in cutting maple trees for cordwood, the sap flows from the wounded logs in streams. If the snow lessens so as to make moving in the wood practicable, there is a good harvest of sap promised, though expert farmers think the season will be a short one.

IMPORTANT TO LADIES

ARE BLOWN TO DEATH

Gas Main Explosion Causes the Death of Two Families and Many Houses Are Wrecked

TOWN IN DANGER

Special to The Examiner.

SCRANTON, PA., MARCH 20.—In an explosion, caused by a gas main broken by mine settlings, two families, including two women and several children, were blown to death; several were injured and many houses were wrecked. This morning, some of the bodies were found in the tree tops, fifty feet away. It is stated this whole section of the town is in danger of caving in.

A BLACK EYE FOR ROOSEVELT

Special to The Examiner.

FARGO, N. DAK., March 20. — Theodore Roosevelt has been badly beaten in the first scrap for the Presidential nomination. This state has gone thoroughly against him, Senator Lafollette winning out in the state primaries here by a very large majority.

DISTURBS AUDIENCE

If you have any curiosity about the number of people here who have bad coughs just notice the next time you are at church or in any public gathering. You will hear someone coughing almost all the time.

We have said before in this paper that there is an unusual amount of bronchial trouble now, and this is because so many people neglect it.

There is no excuse for letting a cough hang on for months and years. The proof of this fact is that a remedy which cures stubborn cases right along would cure at first if taken then as it should be.

Mrs. E. B. Millard of Middletown, N. Y., says: "Having used Vinol for chronic bronchitis which I have had for three or four years I can recommend it highly. It has given me very satisfactory results."

Take Vinol right away, and it will build you up and stop your cough. It is doing this for thousands of others.

We pay back your money if you are not satisfied with Vinol.

McDermid and Jury, druggists, corner George and Charlotte streets; also Payne's drug store, corner George and Simcoe streets.

GAS EXPLOSION

Special to The Examiner:

JERRYIDE, OKLA., MARCH 20. — It is rumoured by telephone from San Bois coal mine at McCurtin, Okla., that a part of the mine was blown up by gas to-day, with the loss of eighty-five lives. No further particulars are available.

STRATHCONA HOTEL

Messrs. Fitch Bros., Formerly of Peterboro', Are the Proprietors

The Examiner to-day is carrying an advertisement for Fitch Bros., proprietors of the Strathcona Hotel in Winnipeg, and former residents of Peterborough. They have found in their registrations at this well known hostelry the names of many Peterborough people, and are using the advertising columns of the Examiner for the purpose of bringing their hotel to the attention of local citizens, who are intending to visit the west. They are assured of the best of accommodation and treatment at the Strathcona Hotel.

MARKET TOLLS

Notices have been posted calling for tenders for the removal of garbage from the district already outlined and for the sale of the market tolls. Tenders for the latter must be handed in by 4 p.m. on Tuesday, March 26, and must be accompanied by an accepted bank cheque for $200, which may be forfeited if the party whose tender is accepted does not enter into the contract and does not furnish acceptable security for its fulfillment.

The tolls will be sold for the year beginning April 1, 1912, and closing March 31st, 1913.

BALD MEN

should call and inspect the famous Sanitary Patent Toupees, as shown by Prof. Dorenwend, of Toronto, at the Oriental Hotel on Wednesday, April 3rd.

These Toupees are not only perfect in construction, but are the only Sanitary and Patented substitutes of one's own hair.

OUR CHEESE THE BEST

Buyers Regard It as the Best in the Province—Retain Your Reputation Says Mr. R. W. Ward

CHEESE BOARD MEETING

"Peterborough has a reputation second to none in this province and practically in the whole Dominion. That is the opinion of the buyers in the Montreal market and in England."

This was part of an impromptu address by Mr. R. W. Ward to the Peterborough Cheese Board this morning. The annual meeting had been called, but the number of salesmen was so small that it was considered inadvisable to proceed with the regular organization for the year. There was a good attendance of cheese makers and one of them, Mr. Hogan, suggested the shipping of cheese earlier than heretofore, as some of it had been kept at factories as long as 30 days.

In this connection Instructor Barr spoke against shiping cheese while in a green state. One of the factors that has contributed to Peterborough's reputation in the cheese market is that the cheese from this district has been in the best of condition when it was sent out. In the east it is shipped every week and the instructors have no chance to see it, except in the curd and it lacks the quality of the cheese from this district.

"Don't send it out young," Mr. Barr stated. "Sometimes when the price is good, buyers will ask you to give them a certain number of cheese to make up a load, but it is generally the high price that is the attraction. If you wan't to retain your reputation, don't ship it out green."

Mr. Hogan stated that he did not recommend an earlier shipment in that respect, but to prevent its being held too long.

Mr. Barr stated that there was a lot of money lost in this section last year by the cheese becoming heated.

No Elections.

Owing to the small attendance of salesman, the election of officers was deferred until the first regular meeting of the Board.

On motion of Mr. E. Hawthorne, seconded by Mr. G. W. Mann, it was decided to call the first sales on Wednesday, May 15th.

Mr. Barr remarked that owing to the small supplies and prevailing good prices, the first make would likely bring a good price and the early opening will please the buyers. Mr. Mann said that for the same reasons, factories would probably open earlier.

The factories represented were: Warsaw by Mr. Ed. Hawthorne; East Emily by Mr. W. C. Switzer; Central Smith by Mr. J. A. McGregor; Keene by Mr. M. Smithson; Trewers by Mr. G. W. Mann; Myrtle by Mr. W. H. Crough; and Bensfort by Mr. John Riddell.

Mr. Switzer, president of the Board, presided.

Gorging is Suicide

In these words a prominent graduate of Harvard Medical School, E R. Morse, M.D., calls attention to the habit of "overeating," which is resulting in the shortening of so many useful lives.

Every day you read of deaths of persons in middle life caused by acute indigestion, peritonitis, appendicitis or Bright's disease. All of which result from overcrowding the digestive organs.

The liver gets sluggish, the bowels become constipated, and the whole system is poisoned by the fermenting waste matter.

You can overcome this poisoned condition by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. Then turn over a new leaf and eat less, particularly of meats, pastry and highly-seasoned foods. One kidney-liver pill occasionally at bedtime will keep the liver and bowels active and insure the healthful working of the organs of digestion.

To-day's Police Court Register

A lumber jack answering to the name of James Garrett, visited the city yesterday and incidentally extended his sight seeing tour to the confines of a police station cell. He was taken in tow by P. C. Kidd last evening, and when searched at the station, the sum of $87, a gold watch, and a miscellaneous collection of small articles were found upon him.

Before Magistrate Dumble this morning he pleaded guilty and was fined two dollars.

Upon having Garrett announced his intention of indulging in a few more drinks.

The chief advised him to go to his home, which is about 13 miles from Tweed.

USEFUL PURPOSES OF THE PETERBOROUGH AD. CLUB ARE OUTLINED AND EXPLAINED

New Organization Can Do Much to Advertise Peterborough and Boom Local Industries and Stores.

COMMENDABLE OBJECTS

Peterborough is to receive a boost in a one-page advertisement in the May issue of "The Voice" of the Associated Advertising Clubs of America, in which magazine, circulating to nearly 8,000 of the leading advertising men on this continent, the local club will do its part towards inviting the advertising men to make Toronto their convention city for 1913, and incidentally to see Peterborough while en route at that time, on a tour over the Province. This action was decided on last evening at the meeting of the Peterborough Ad. Club, which was held in the chambers of the Bank of Montreal.

The special field of work for the local club as tentatively outlined by the President, Mr. Chas. C. Nixon, is two-mainly educational, and covering the following three points:

1.—Educating the Club members in the theory and practice of advertising.

2.—Hammering into all the business men, locally, that they must religiously practice, as well as preach, "Home Trade."

3.—Instilling into all of the people of Peterborough pride and loyalty to Peterborough institutions.

It was pointed out that our people locally, in general, hold a poor account of our home industries, and failed to patronize them as it would pay them well to do. There is lots of business going in this city of nearly 20,000, which may just as well, indeed better, be retained at home, but which at present is going elsewhere. Reference was made to Chatham, a place of about half the size of Peterborough, but where all people support home industry. The local situation was revised and particular cases applying to local industries were cited. In this connection the Peter Hamilton line of farm implements were shown to be even more commonly used in some parts of Western Ontario, not far from where the Massey-Harris implements are manufactured at Brantford, whereas other lines of implements, more than they should, displace those of local manufacture here in Peterborough. Quaker Oats products were not as generally used as they might be, locally—Kellogg's, Tillson's, and others often displacing products of local manufacture, which latter are quite as good and indeed, often better. It was asked, "why should we locally not more generally use carpets from the local factory—The Brinton Carpet Works?" This Company is competing successfully for many of the largest orders placed in Canada, and when their product is selected by such decorators as Tiffany of New York, to place in hotels such as the Chateaux Laurier, this in competition with other big carpet manufacturers, surely the local product should be the very thing we want in our own homes, here in Peterborough. While figures were not available to us also instanced that it was possible that the C. G. E. electrical supplies might more generally be used, locally, in preference to all other lines of electrical manufacturers.

It was suggested that the local papers, through their reporters, might do much more for local industries, by reporting particularly good deals, as pulled off by our local industries. For instance, if local citizens read through their favourite local paper, of say big shipments from the C. G. E., some from the Quaker Oats, Canadian Cameo Co., Brinton Carpet Works, etc., they would be much more interested in local industries. To substantiate this claim, reference was made to the great interest taken in the report, in the evening papers last week, of the land purchase closed recently by the C. G. E.

Amongst other things brought into review as being work that the local Ad Club can do, was the matter of advertising Peterborough. It was pointed out that practically nothing is being done at present in this connection, and that it is high time that something should be done, and that we can ill-afford to sit idly by, and "Watch Welland Grow" and too Guelph and other places get industries that we might just as well have in Peterborough.

The principal speaker, as advertised, for the evening, Mr. I. Brock, owing to illness, was unable to be present. Mr. Jas. Hamilton, of the Peter Hamilton Co., in an address, pointed out wherein we local people should have a greater appreciation of what the farming trade means to our local business men. Suggestions were thrown out as to how better to appeal to farmers, who will trade in Peterborough and some valuable pointers were given on how better to gain the confidence of the farmers, whose trade was so much wanted here.

Mr. C. F. Hardy, Advertising Manager for the Canadian Explosives, gave a brief address, [illegible] on his subject the 'Advertising Advertising' campaign, now running in all of the

WHOOPING COUGH

Mrs. Charles Lovell, Agassiz, B.C., writes: "Seven of our nine children had whooping cough the same winter and we attribute their cure to Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. We always have it in the house, and recommend it as the king of all medicines. I was formerly prejudiced to patent medicines, but since using Dr. Chase's Syrup am entirely cured of that opinion."

ROYAL HOTEL IS BURNED

Lucknow House is Totally Destroyed by Blaze and Guests Escape in Their Night Clothes

LOSS WILL BE $10,000

Special to The Examiner

LONDON, ONT., March 20.—The Royal Hotel, Lucknow, was completely destroyed by a fire which was discovered about 4 o'clock this morning by the proprietor, Wm. Clark, who was awakened by smoke, and on going down found the basement a mass of flames. He aroused the guests and help, who barely had time to escape in their night clothes, losing everything in their flight. The building burned fiercely. The fire department had hard work to keep the flames from spreading to the adjoining building. The loss will reach ten thousand dollars; fully covered by insurance. The building was owned by Mr. W. Trott of St Helens, and will not be rebuilt as local option goes into effect on May 1.

SETTING THEM RIGHT.

In to-day's issue appears the second letter from "Sylvia," who essays to treat the subject of the relations of women to politics, like a sensible woman. Her object is to combat and expose the tactics of the "Family Compact" suffragettes of Toronto, who shriek, perhaps, less shrilly and loudly, than the window-smashing suffragettes of England, but just as illogically. "Sylvia's" letters deserve careful perusal, not only because they combat the doctrines and claims of a coterie of hysterical suffragette advocates in Toronto, but also because they aim to set forth the true duty of womanhood, wifehood and motherhood. She aims to set them right upon many points that affect the relation of the true function and status of womanhood in our political and social economy.

MAKE IT ANNUAL.

The thanks of the Veterans of Canada, who took part in repelling invasion of Canada, in 1866, are due, and hereby tendered to Hon. Col. Sam. Hughes, Minister of Militia, for recognising their services by a grant of $100 to each in recognition of their services. But the minister might be reminded that this little gift looks a little more like a charity dole than would be the case if the grant were made, $100 a year, for life. Considering how the numbers of veterans have been thinned by the sickle of the grim reaper—death, in the past 45 years, and considering that Canada, which the veterans helped to maintain, has a an overflowing treasury, with a surplus of forty million dollars this year, it does not seem unreasonable to suggest that the dole of $100 proposed should be made an annual payment. We are sure the veterans would vote for it, and members of parliament whose talk—not always the most edifying—costs the country $1,000 an hour, could not consistently vote against such a proposal, especially if value of service is made the basis of the expenditure of public money.

IRON AND STEEL BOUNTIES.

Mr. Cockshutt, of Brantford, says the Expositor, thinks the bounties on iron and steel should be maintained. The figures show that between 1886 and 1911 the Dominion paid no less a sum than $20,519,000 in bounties. The bounty on pig-iron reached a total of $7,097,041; that upon puddled iron ores, $113,674 (but these ended in 1906) that on steel to $6,706,980 that on manufactures of steel to $2,701,373; upon lead to $1,730,355; on manilla fibre to $255,750, and upon crude petroleum, to $1,323,827. Last fiscal year the iron and steel industry was paid no less than $1,136,748. The bounties on pig-iron alone amounted last year to $361,434, divided as follows among the various companies: Algoma Iron & Steel, $58,475; Dominion Iron & Steel, $84,113; Nova Scotia Seel & Coal, $19,906; Hamilton Steel & Iron, $59,977; Canadian Iron Corporation, Midland, $17,417; Canadian Iron Corporation, Drummondville, $1,584; Atikokan Iron Company $15,487; Standard Chemical Company, $4,386. Mr. Cockshutt will not refuse to concede that the Liberal party, which he alleges to be a "free trade" party, has dealt very generously with these "infant industries."

IT MAKES A DIFFERENCE.

The verdict the Coroner's Jury charged with the duty of investigating the cause of, and placing the responsibility for, the fatal railway accident, at Hull, on March 8th, raises an interesting question. The Jury exonerated the telegraph operator, and placed the blame on the Canadian Pacific Railway Company. What is to be done about it? A corporation, according to the great Coke, has no soul and so body amenable to personal punishment; whereas, if the telegraph operator had been held responsible, he would be jailed, and, by this time, "doing time," while the railway company escapes with a censure. It seems that something should be done in the way of making some members of a corporation personally amenable to the law, and personally subject to punishment. We have seen, recently, in Toronto, instances of persons being killed, not from the fault of railway motormen, but because the railway company permitted cars to go out equipped with brakes that refused to work when called upon. This is something which certainly a little care on the part of the Company could avoid. And something which it would have speedily remedied if a high official of the Company, say a director, was killed every day or two, by reason of defective emergency brakes. Some means would be adopted for testing brakes, and seeing that they were in working order before cars were sent out. But when only members of the common public are killed, it seems to be useless expense to take such precautions as would be taken if the life of the president, or manager, or of a director were endangered. It certainly makes a good deal of difference whose ox is gored, in the case of railway corporations destroying life.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Mr. Bourassa says "Quebec hates noisy loyalism." What a sacrifice he must have made of his feelings when, at the last elections, he cooperated with the fog-horn loyalists of Ontario to compass the defeat of Laurier?

We can forgive Mr. Bourassa, the fiery Nationalist, a good deal, if his repentance is sincere. He helped the Conservative party to power and made the Borden government crawfish on the question of a Canadian navy. If he is sorry for it, as his apparently cooling relations with the government lead us to suspect, he should get credit for it. He will have, however, to plough the lone furrow. There is no place for him in the Liberal party, never was since his political apostacy, and now that he is proving an old man of the sea, the Conservative party does not seem to be able to pull in harness with him, though it hangs on to 'the goods'—the Nationalist ministers — delivered by Mr. Bourassa.

COMMISSION GOVERNMENT IN ST. JOHN, N. B.

(Brantford Expositor)

St. John, N.B., will be the first city in Canada to put into operation the commission form of government, and will follow closely the Des Moines plan. The whole civic government, and the administration of the fiscal, prudential and municipal affairs of the city is to be vested in a Common Council consisting of a mayor and four aldermen, each of whom shall be a commissioner as provided in the act. This replaces the present council of mayor and sixteen aldermen. The property qualifications for mayor and aldermen are abolished and all that is required of them is that they shall be qualified voters and entitled to vote. The Mayor will be elected for a term of two years, and the commissioners for four years, instead of one year, as at present. At the first election the two aldermen receiving the highest number of votes shall be declared elected for two years. At each succeeding biennial election the Mayor shall be elected for two years and two commissioners for four years.

The mayor is required to give such time to the duties of his office as may be requisite for their efficient discharge, but the commissioners must give all their time to the city and must not be actively engaged in any other business or profession. The salaries for all members of the commission are fixed at $3,000 a year.

The mayor will be the permanent head of the finance department, while the other department will be assigned to the commissioners best suited for them. These departments will include public safety, including fire, police, lights and public buildings; public works, including streets, highways, squares, parks, play grounds, and public recreation grounds; the department of water and sewerage and public health and the department of harbours, ferries and public lands.

The board is to meet at least once a week and all meetings are to be open to the public unless the business to be considered involves the city legally.

The initiative, the referendum and the recall, which have become leading features in the reform of administration methods in other parts of the continent, are included in the St. John new charter.

GREAT NAVAL BATTLE BETWEEN EX-POSTMASTER AND IN-POSTMASTER

Fighting at Close Quarters Between Hon. Mr. Lemieux and Hon. Mr. Pelletier—The Naval Policy of Abandonment

In the House of Commons a breeze arose over the naval question, which developed into a howling gale. Hon. Mr. Lemieux, late postmaster-general came to grips with Hon. Mr. Pelletier, postmaster-general, "actual," and the Nationalist minister came out of the encounter rather the worse of wear. The recriminations indulged in were not quite dignified, but they showed the Nationalist wing of the government in a bad light, and showed what comes of the Borden government trying to steer south by north on the naval question. The circus is thus described:

The Naval Estimates.

When the House went into supply, Hon. Mr. Hazen presented the naval estimates for $1,660,000 "for naval service." The Minister explained that the present Government, pending a declaration of naval policy, had decided to continue things as they were. They would maintain the present ships and schools, but had cancelled all the contracts for additional vessels.

Mr. Lemieux to the Nationalists.

Hon. Mr. Lemieux expressed regret that the Nationalist Ministers had seen fit to leave the Chamber, and a messenger was sent for the Postmaster-General. The ex-Postmaster-General gave his successor one of the most uncomfortable afternoons he has ever experienced. He directed the attention of the House to the fact that Hon. Messrs. Pelletier, Monk and Nantel had solemnly promised the people of Quebec that as soon as they were installed in office "every sign and vestige of the Laurier naval policy would disappear, and that nothing should take its place." The House had no idea of the fight carried on in the Province of Quebec. "The Postmaster-General," said Mr. Lemieux, "accused Sir Wilfrid Laurier of selling his birthright to Great Britain, and declared that it was time for Canada to assert herself and do away with all this. He and those associated with him made appeals of the very worst kind. But our Chief and his followers in our Province stood like men to their guns. He recognised the character of the campaign which the Postmaster-General and his colleagues were carrying on, and they knew that the people of Quebec were as loyal and patriotic as any people if the true issue were placed fairly before them. We sought to educate public opinion, and we were vindicated. (Cheers.) The majority of the members from the Province of Quebec came back to this House pledged in favour of the Laurier naval policy."

Still Practising Deception.

Continuing Mr. Lemieux said that even to-day deception was being practised by the Ministers in the matter. Mr. Pelletier and his associates in Quebec were telling the people that there was to be no naval policy, while Mr. Hazen was declaring that the Admiralty was to be consulted. "It is time the Government spoke out plainly," said he, "and put an end to this dilly-dallying. Let the Government be frank and speak plainly.

Mr. Pelletier Stirred.

Hon. Mr. Pelletier, who had been summoned back to the Chamber by this time, jumped up to declare that he "was not afraid to discuss the question."

"What do you propose to do? Never mind what you propose to say," observed Mr. Lemieux, amid Liberal laughter and cheers.

"If you wait you'll find out," retorted Mr. Pelletier, amid renewed laughter. "I came back," he proceeded, "so that it could not be sent out to the papers in Montreal that I had run out of the House when this matter came up. I want to tell the hon. member that he is not speaking facts as they are. I have not said a word on the matter since the elections." (Roars of Liberal laughter.)

Mr. Lemieux rose and read from l'Evenement an account of Mr. Pelletier's speech when he was elected by acclamation, subsequent to the general elections, when he declared: "At last the people are free from the navy. The Borden Government will repeal it at once."

What is Leader's Statement.

"I said then and I say now," the Postmaster-General retorted, "that I was opposed to the scheme of the late Government. The leader of the present Government has made a statement perfectly satisfactory to us and to the people of Quebec."

"And what is that?" queried Mr. Lemieux.

"You will find out in time," retorted Mr. Pelletier. "As for me, I never claimed that we should not do something for Britain."

"You said so in your own paper," put in Mr. Lemieux.

"You will not find it in my own paper. I have no paper," replied Mr. Pelletier.

"Does he state that he has no paper?" questioned Mr. Lemieux.

"I do," retorted the Minister.

"The Minister speaks ill-advisedly. I took the trouble to look into the matter at the Court House, Quebec, recently and found that he was one of the directors and joint owners of L'Evenement."

"I was at one time, but not now."

"Since when?"

Claims Misrepresentation.

But Mr. Pelletier did not answer. He declared his position had been misrepresented. He was not against any policy, but he was against the policy of the Laurier Government, which "put the children of Canadians in a position to be disembowelled without fighting, because they would send them to fight in such ships as would be sunk before they got within range of the enemy." He had taken the stand in Quebec that he was absolutely opposed to the Laurier policy, but he had never declared that he favoured no policy at all. He wanted the children of Canadians to go to fight on good ships.

"Will you then vote to provide efficient ships in which they can go to fight?" asked Mr. Carvell.

"We will take that thing up later, and we stand on that," replied Mr. Pelletier, amid another roar of Liberal laughter. He added that he had never said that Canada owed nothing to England. He was always ready to aid England.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

"The Postmaster-General to-day says that all he opposed was the Laurier naval policy," said Sir Wilfrid whose rising was greeted with prolonged Liberal cheering. "He knows as well as I know, and if he now denies it I simply leave him to his friends, that the policy his party took since 1910 was that Canada should give absolutely nothing to England, and that there was no need of any policy."

"It is wrong to say that I said we owed nothing to England," put in Mr. Pelletier.

"I said a moment ago that I did not intend to bandy words with the Hon. Minister over his present denials, replied Sir Wilfrid. "I read some of his speeches, and was acquainted with the character of his campaign. I maintain that the policy of his friends during the last election and even since January, 1910, was that Canada owed England nothing. They were against any policy, and charged that the Laurier naval policy meant conscription, and that the children of the parents of Quebec would be carried off to be disembowelled, fighting China and Japan. There was no word concerning inferior ships or anything of that character. The allegation was that the children were to be taken away by force and put on ships to fight for England, and the claim was that we owed England nothing. I do not propose to bandy words over his denials to-day. I leave him to those who heard him, and pass from him."

Canada Owes the Motherland.

Proceeding, the Liberal Chief dealt with the national standpoint. It was essential to the weal of Canada that Canadians should rise above the baser appeals to the people. Of the Postmaster-General he had but one word more to say. "Nothing will better contribute to the peace of our country," he said, "than the present eleventh-hour admission of him and his associates that Canada owes the motherland something" It was new from that source. Formerly it was stated that as soon as the present Government took office there would be an end of everything. "Well," observed Sir Wilfrid, "the Laurier policy has not been repealed yet; it is in force yet, and we are asked to pass an appropriation of $1,660,000 to carry on the naval policy of the Laurier Government. It is true it is to be devoted to the department and the college. There is to be no more building of warships until after Great Britain has been consulted. In the meantime the frills and feathers are to be maintained, but nothing is to be done for the ships. There is not, sir, to be a tin-pot navy; it is to be a gold lace navy, with captains and officials and showmen, but no sailors or ships." (Laughter and applause.)

The Imperial Conference.

Proceeding, Sir Wilfrid gave the House briefly the character of his conference with the Imperial authorities. A contribution was first suggested, and then a fleet unit for the Pacific. With neither of these propositions was the Canadian Government in accord, but it cheerfully stood ready to furnish modest fleet units for both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. This proposal was accepted by the Home Government, this was entered upon by the former Government. Whatever the policy of the present Administration was to be was not yet apparent. When it was decided upon it would be time to discuss it. In the meantime the naval law was to be maintained, and the Postmaster-General and those with him had been forced to go back upon their declarations at the last election.

Hon. Mr. Pelletier was on his feet again with the declaration that the Government had stopped all it could. It could not stop what had already been put into operation. "I said nothing against the Empire," the Postmaster-General continued. "I always said we owed the British Empire something."

A Man of Two Languages.

"The trouble with the Postmaster-General is," volunteered Mr. Lemieux, "that he has one language for this House and another for his electors. I say he was one of the worst sinners in Quebec during the last campaign. Why, he did not even run as a straight Conservative——"

"I did," shouted Mr. Pelletier.

"You did?" exclaimed Mr. Lemieux.

"Yes, I did," the Minister reiterated.

"Then all I can say of that is that you have more brass than the Niobe herself," retorted Mr. Lemieux. "The Minister has the audacity to say that he did not run in the last election as an avowed Nationalist. Despite what he had said he is a co-proprietor of L'Evenement. He was such only a week or two ago, when I looked up the matter. If he has withdrawn it is only during the past few days. And at Montmagny during the campaign, with his master, Armand Lavergne, his own paper reports him as saying that he did not run as a Conservative, but as a Nationalist, and that every French-Canadian should regard him as the representative of their race. 'I proclaim myself as a Nationalist, and I am proud to be a Nationalist,'" read Mr. Lemieux of the Minister's reported speech, "and now he has the audacity to tell the House he ran as a straight Conservative. He had read Mr. Bourassa's message; and had condemned Sir Wilfrid Laurier as the 'Nestor of the Imperial Conference.'"

Concluding, Mr. Lemieux said that if the present Government were able to evolve a sane Imperial policy it would have the support of every Liberal from Quebec. Quebec was true and loyal "notwithstanding the fulminations of the firebrand I see before me now," pointing at Mr. Pelletier.

Mr. Pelletier Angry.

The latter sprang to his feet. Mr. Lemieux must not think he could "throw mud" with impunity against "the honour and the reputation of the most honest men in in the Province of Quebec."

"When I spoke of you!" exclaimed Mr. Lemieux, while the Liberal benches rocked with ironical laughter.

"He cannot call me an arch-traitor," proceeded Mr. Pelletier.

"Oh, I did not. That was your friends," put in Mr. Lemieux, while the Liberals cheered again.

Says It's The Globe.

Mr. Pelletier caught sight of a copy of The Globe lying on Mr. Lemieux's desk. He jumped up and shouted that Mr. Lemieux had not been reading from L'Evenement at all, but from The Toronto Globe.

"Oh, yes I was," replied the member for Rouville, holding aloft L'Evenement.

"Well he had The Globe there," retorted Mr. Pelletier, "and The Toronto Globe has a habit of making certain reports of a political speech which are absolute errors, and of such nature as to deceive the public." Continuing, he declared he was going to read a letter written by Mr. Lemieux in August, 1903, in which he had affirmed himself and quoted his leader as being opposed to mixing in the vortex of European militarism.

"And I stand by it to-day," retorted Mr. Lemieux.

"There's his signature," exclaimed Mr. Pelletier, brandishing the letter aloft. "Read it — Rodolphe Lemieux."

"That's right," put in Mr. Lemieux. "I never change my name, Mr. Zandrang."

There was a roar of Liberal laughter and applause. It was an allusion to an earlier episode in the political career of the Postmaster-General about which he does not like to talk. He shouted something about an "insult," but he skated rapidly away from that point, and buried himself forthwith in the reading of the letter.

Mr. Proulx sought to put another question, but the Minister was now considerably perturbed and declined to permit any further questions.

ANNUAL 17TH OF MARCH CONCERT AT ENNISMORE A SUCCESS

Splendid Address by Mr. Daniel O'Connell Was Eloquently Delivered — Good Musical Programme Presented.

REPORT OF THE ADDRESS

March, the 18th, 1912, will long be remembered by the people of Ennismore. In addition to local talent, Messrs. George Lynch and McLaren of Peterborough, contributed many splendid numbers to the excellent programme. The following is the programme as presented on the evening of the 18th:

PART I

Orchestra, Irish airs.
Song, "A Little Bit of Irish," by J. K. Galvin.
Recitation, "Little Sleepy Head Dolly," by Madeline Guiry.
Recitation, "Terrence's Farewell," etc., by Lyde Killen.
Comic Recitation, "Names of family," by Mr. McLarn.
Duet, "My Heart has Learned to Love you," by Fanny Scollard and Lottie O'Donoghue.
Step dance, by O'Connor Bros.
Song, "Where the River Shannon Flows," by George Lynch.
Lecture by Mr. D. O'Connell, on "Ireland and Ireland's Liberator."

PART II

Overture by orchestra.
Song, "Killarney," by Mrs. John E. O'Donoghue.
Comic Song, "Casey," by Wm. Bell.
Recitation, "Rooms to Let," by Mr McLaren.
Step dance, by Harold McManus.
Trio, "Come back to Erin," by W. Bell, Fanny Scollard and Mrs. J. E. O'Donoghue.
Song, "Noreen Mouverneen," by Fanny Scollard.
Song, "The Last Rose of Summer," by Loretta Kennedy.
Comic Song, "I'll take the next boat back to Ireland," by Joe O'Reilly.
Recitation, "Kelly's Dream," by George Lynch.
God Save the King.

It is needless to say that the concert was thoroughly enjoyed by the large and appreciative audience.

J. K. Galvin, an old time favourite, always reliable, upheld his reputation as an entertainer in a sweet Irish song, "A Little Bit of Irish."

Wm. Bell always brings down the house, and his singing and acting this year only serves to endear him still more to an Ennismore audience.

Joseph O'Reilly is always good. To a sweet clear voice he adds a grace and simplicity, which accounts for his many encores at every entertainment.

Little Madeline Guiry sang and recited her dolly song in a sweet pleasing manner, while Lyde Killen did ample justice to that famous Irish song, "Terrence's Farewell."

Miss Loretta Kennedy's rendition of "The Last Rose of Summer," received a well merited encore, to which Loretta agreebly responded in an equally pleasing rendition of "The Dear Little Shamrock."

Mrs. John E. O'Donoghue, Miss Fanny Scollard and Miss Lottie O'Donoghue, came in for rounds of applause, and had to respond to repeated encores.

Master Harold McManus of Bridgenorth, is the most graceful dancer we have seen here for many a day. He took the audience by surprise, as it was his first appearance in Ennismore.

Mr. McLaren has a long list of real comic songs and recitations, and is most generous with them. He was highly appreciated by the large audience.

The most amusing portion of the whole entertainment was furnished by George Lynch of Peterborough. George is an actor of no mean ability, and in his rendition of "Kelly's Dream," he kept the house in a roar. Into his songs, too, he puts life, feeling and expression, and "When the River Shannon Flows," and "The Black Sheep Loves You Best," leave a deep impression when rendered by George. A right royal. Cead mile Failthe, awaits him on his return to Ennismore.

The O'Connor Bros.' step dancing cannot be beaten in this county.

However, the treat of the evening was furnished by Mr. D. O'Connell, barrister, of Peterborough. For one hour and a quarter he held the audience spell-bound, as he narrated the early history of Ireland, its primitive inhabitants, its schools of learning and piety, its noble warlike race, and its early knowledge and practice of democratic rule. He touched briefly on the great debt of gratitude which every country in Europe owed to Ireland. Raised by the hand of God through the instrumentality of St. Patrick, from the darkness of pagan bondage and superstition, Ireland sets forth to enlighten Europe. St. Gall raised the standard of Christ in Switzerland, Columbanus in France, St. Killain in Germany, St. Cataldus in Italy, St. Columbille in Scotland and the Hebrides, and a whole host of Irish monks in England.

"This," said the speaker, "was Ireland's golden age, the age when all Europe drank from her mountains of knowledge, pure and undefiled. It was her age of peace and plenty, splendour and harmony, glory and holiness. Fearless, tearless, ave and often penniless, these sainted children of St. Patrick went forth to raise a continent to the enjoyment of God's grace and God's love, and when we read the history of those times now far in the past, when the image of that fair land looms up before us, rock bound and washed by the mighty waters of the west—green within with living verdure, with its blue mountains, its fruitful plains, its exhaustless lakes and rivers, we seem to gaze upon some old picture, in which the skill of the painter is lost in the sanctity of the idea."

He spoke in touching tones of Ireland's famine, her exodus of hope, and her exodus of starvation. He followed these exiled children of Erin into foreign lands and marked their happiness and prosperity. He touched briefly on England's mis-government in Ireland, her cruel and inhuman penal laws, her unjust invasion and occupation.

He traced the gradual rise of better feelings between Celt and Saxon, and he causes which brought them about. He laid particular stress on O'Connell's great work in impressing upon the British people Ireland's many wrongs and grievances and uniting the Irish people into one solid compact body, and finally in gaining for his countrymen complete emancipation, his tribute to O'Connell, as statesman, orator and patriot was a masterpiece of choice, beautiful language.

He paid a glowing tribute to the unwavering faith and loyalty of the people of Ireland, the purity of her sons and daughters, the undaunted valour of her soldiers, the wisdom and prudence of her statesmen, the respect and reverence of her children for things sacred and holy, and above all the unbounded hospitality, generosity and charity which the Irish people are ever ready to extend towards God's poor.

He concluded a most eloquent address with a sincere hope that before another St. Patrick's Day comes round the Irish people may be in the full enjoyment of that long looked for blessing—local self government.

The concert was brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem.

Miss Agnes Scollard acted as accompanist for the evening and the Ennismore orchestra did much to enliven the whole evening's proceedings.

The Efficacy Of Prayer

Writer is Shocked by Statement of Toronto Labour Man

Peterborough, March 20th, 1912.
Editor Examiner:

Dear Sir,—A few days since a member of the Trades and Labour Council placed himself on record as opposed to the practice of opening the meetin of that body with prayer. He is reported to have said that man had been praying for a thousand years, and he failed to see in what measure they had profited by it.

It is altogether probable that th author of that statement really meant what he said. It was apparently not uttered in a spirit of bravado, but was the protest of a sincere if some what misguided and ignorant soul.

To anyone of mature years, even t one who cannot claim to be a consistently religious being, such a statement must come with a disagreeable shock. I confess that it had that effect on myself. I fell to wonderin how much of hope for the future or happiness in the present there could be in the make-up of the deliverer of such an outburst. We know that misery is abroad in the world, as it always has been; that wickedness is to be found in sunlit fields as well as in smoky cities, but it does not take very much thought to bring home t our minds the fact that humanity has climbed a few steps up the ladder that leads to perfection since the advent of Christianity. If the exercise of Christian prayer and Christian practice have not accomplished the amount of good that we see in the world to-day, what has? If we wish to note how far we have progressed let us look at the Chinese. They were at a high stage of human civilisation many hundreds of years before the Christian area. How do they compare in moral and spiritual uplift with the Christian nations of to-day?

We have the testimony of the wise men and women of all ages as to the efficacy of prayer and going altogether outside the ranks of the clergy, let us take examples from two great writers, the late Lord Tennyson and Madame De Stael.

Lord Tennyson, in the Passing of Arthur, says:

'More things are wrought by prayer
Than this world dreams of. Wherefore let thy voice
Rise like a fountain for me night and day.
For what are men better than sheep or goats
That nourish a blind life within the brain,
If, knowing God, they lift not hands in prayer
Both for themselves and those who call them friend,
For so the whole round earth is every way
Bound by gold chains about the feet of God.'

And Madame De Stael says, in words more strictly applicable to the present case:

"To pray together, in whatever tongue or ritual, is the most tender brotherhood of hope and sympathy that man can contract in this life."

History seems to me to reveal the fact that in the same ratio that prayers have been soul-felt and soul-impelled, just so far have they been answered. There can be no limit to the spiritual and material greatness which individuals and nations may achieve by prayer and if we, as beings capable of thought and action gave what little time we do give to such matters, to earnest worship instead of unthinking, mechanical, lip-service, we would raise ourselves and the state to a very high plane in the roll of nations.

Midgets And Lakefield For The Junior Championship

Thistles and Northern Lights Knocked Out of the Competition for the Clarke-Graham Cup--Midgets Whitewashed Lights 3 to 0, While Lakefield Beat Thistles 1 to 0

The Midgets and St. John's Club of Lakefield, are left to battle for the Clarke-Graham Cup and the Junior Championship, and they will meet to-night to fight it out for the title.

In the semi-finals last night, at Brock Street rink, the Midgets walloped the Northern Lights 3 goals to 0, while the Lakefield septette beat the Thistles 1 to 0. Both games were good exhibitions, in spite of the fact that there were inches of water on the ice, and the players were being continuously ducked in a shower bath. Under such conditions the youngsters were at a decided handicap, but good hockey was played and the spectators were of the opinion that there is plenty of junior O. H. A material in sight. Fortunately the thermometer dropped somewhat through the night and the ice will be considerably better for to-night's final game at Brock Street rink.

The Midgets and Northern Lights furnished the first game and gave a lively exhibition with both teams working to the limit. As regards weight they were evenly matched and there was no let up. Manager Jack Thirnbeck's team had the speed, and played their positions better, and that was what gave them the edge on the Lights. The Midgets scored twice in the first half, Halpin getting the first on a nice individual rush and Carew the second, from a scrimmage. The Lights failed to find the nets. The Midgets got the only goal in the second half, Halpin doing the trick after a pretty rush. Dwyer of the Bear Cats, played a splendid game in the nets for the winners, and Halpin and Barrie were conspicuous at all times. For the losers, Butcher and Brotherson were prominent. The teams were as follows:

LAKEFIELD BEAT THISTLES.

The second game between St. John's of Lakefield and the Thistles was a desperately fought battle from start to finish, Lakefield winning by the smallest possible margin, the score being 1-0 in their favour. They had many pounds weight on the Thistles and the heavy going was, therefore, all in their favour, but the lightweight brigade were game clean through and never let up. Lakefield scored the only goal of the game early in the first half, Cullen doing the trick with an individual rush. In the second half the Thistles kept the play around the Lakefield nets pretty well all the way, while Huycke, their goal-keeper, had only two shots to handle during the half. However, the Thistles failed to score, Hill doing grand work in the Lakefield nets. Richardson and Cavanah were the best for the Thistles, while Sabatino and Hill did some useful work for the visitors. The teams were:

Fred Kelly refereed both games satisfactorily.

The final game to-night, at eight o'clock, between the Midgets and Lakefield, should be a cracker-jack all the way.

Ryan's Last Fight Was A Draw With Billy Allan, Lightweight Champion

Kid Ryan, who boxes Harry Westerby of Toronto, here, next Tuesday night, has a reputation as a fast, clever boxer, and his record includes a draw with Billy Allen, the lightweight champion of Canada and the holder of Tom Flanagan's championship belt. Ryan met Allen in Syracuse in January of this year, and boxed a ten-round draw with the champion, so that it can be seen that the Rochester boy is a classy boxer. He is in good shape and confident of beating the hard-hitting Westerby. Promoters have unsuccessfully tried to match these two all winter, and local fans will get a treat that the Toronto followers of the game would like to see.

Both principals in the main bout are in the pink of condition. Of course Artie Edmunds always keeps himself in shape, and Tony Hudson, of Detroit, who will be his adversary in the bouts, at the Grand next Tuesday night, is a clever boy, who always gives a good account of himself. This battle which goes ten rounds, should be one of the cleverest exhibitions ever put on in Peterborough.

M. Huycke Wins Y.M.C.A. Indoor Junior Championship

New records were the order of the annual indoor athletic contest of the Boys' Department at the "Y" a new mark being set in every event, but the running high jump. Following are the results:

60-yard potato race—B. Hamilton, C. Brown, C. Arnott, ties with 15 4-5, which is 2-5 of a second better than last year's record.

Running high jump, B. Hamilton and M. Huycke, tied, with 4 feet 7 in., which is 1 1-2 inches lower than last year's record.

Standing broad jump was won by O. Cavanagh with a jump of 8 ft. 2 in., which passes the old mark by 3 1-4 in. M. Huycke was a close second, with 8 ft. 1 in. A. Horsefield third, with 7 ft. 10 in.

The 8-lb. shot put was a light touch for O. Cavanagh, who tacked a ft. 4 1-2 in. to the record of last year, winning with a put of 38 ft. 3 in. M. Huycke was second with 36 ft. 5 in., A. Long, third, with 35 ft. 9 in.

The fence vault was tied between C. Brown and M. Huycke, with a vault of 5 ft. 4 in., which is 2 in. ahead of the record of last year; G. Reid, K. Brown and O. Cavanah tied at 5 ft. 2 in.

160 yard potato race was won by M. Huycke in 46 3-5 seconds, clipping 1 3-5 seconds off the old mark. C. Brown and C. Arnott tied with 46 4-5.

The standing, by points, of the leading men—M. Huycke, 454 3-4, O. Cavanah 438, C. Brown 416.

Meredith Huycke is, therefore, champion for 1912.

The senior athletic contest will be held to-night, commencing at eight o'clock.

There will be a full-dress rehearsal of the Rubes' band, in preparation for the grand "Hayseed Carnival," which will be put on by the members of the "Pumpkin Centre Athletic Club" on Thursday evening, at 7.15.

The Brownie-Eko Club basketball game, on Thursday evening, at 8.30, should be the game of the season, both teams are handling the ball and shooting in fine style, and a good game will result. C. Sisson will referee and J. J. Thompson will be the umpire.

MADE IN PETERBOROUGH

Peterborough people no doubt read with interest the "made in Peterborough" talk in your paper last evening, and they would remark to themselves that this progressive spirit that is filling and infusing new life in so many of our cities and towns throughout the Dominion from the Atlantic to the Pacific has invaded Peterborough, and let us hope that everyone will catch the spirit, for in other words, it is "boost Peterborough." Let us talk, write and proclaim it all the time. We will all feel the good of this thorough tonic. Let it mean, help our present factories to grow by demanding home made goods whenever possible, and right here let it be said, that all the manufacturers should embrace this opportunity of displaying their wares during the "made in Peterborough" week. Only yesterday I heard a lady remark. "Why are brooms made in Peterborough? I'll try one, the prices are the same." This is only one commodity and one example, and it is a boost to our broom and brush manufacturers. Then by demanding home-made goods we are making that factory busier, it will require more help, and the problem of the unemployed will begin to be solved, although we have been fortunate in this respect this winter. If the manufacturers of Peterborough want the people of Peterborough to use their products they should let them know of them. Let them tell the people what they make and where it can be procured. The people haven't the time, nor the inclination to get out a search warrant to find out what's made in Peterborough. That's not their business. But if you make an article in Peterborough and desire to own the home market on that thing and don't know how to get that market, your business needs a business doctor, come up to the armouries with your display and show them you have the goods. With the help of the manufacturer, business man and all the people, we can make for Peterborough, progress, so let us all put our shoulders to the wheel and boom the good old town, make it a good place to live in.

DISTRICT CHEESE MAKERS HOLD ANNUAL CONVENTION

Important Matters Discussed in the Council Chamber This Afternoon by Large Representation of Manufacturers

The cheesemakers of Peterborough and district held their annual convention in the Council Chamber this afternoon, when a fair representation was present. Mr. J. P. Flood, President of the Society, occupied the chair.

After the minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed, the election of officers took place and resulted as follows:

President—J. P. Flood, Ennismore.
Vice-Pres.—Mr. J. J. Hogan, Jermyn.
Sec.-Treas.—Mr. Geo. E. Wilson, Douro.
Asst.-Secretary — Mr. G. W. Lane, Villiers.

Mr. R. W. Ward.

Mr. R. W. Ward was the first speaker, and in the course of his remarks he said:

What I think we should do is to take up active thought for the present season, for last season was not good. They say that experience is good teaching, but this is often expensive. We found it expensive last year. It was a pretty heavy amount all totalled up. This was due partly to the weather, and partly owing to having no place to keep cheese. This thing is now past the experience stage and I propose that we overhaul the factories and have everything in first-class shape for the season. We should have an examination, and remedy any fault found.

Now, the first thing required is first-class milk, and I hope we shall have the cooperation of all in supplying first-class milk. I think we all understand there are certain well-defined lines on which to make cheese and these should be adhered to. Last year, I don't think the milk reached the factories in as good condition as it did the year before, and I hope this will be improved upon this year.

Mr. E. S. Hopkins.

Mr. E. S. Hopkins, District Representative of the Department of Agriculture, gave a brief talk on the work of the Department of Agriculture, at Norwood. "The work we are undertaking at Norwood," he said, "is drainage. In addition to this we take up demonstration work. You men who are not intimate with other branches of farming may be benefitted by any information or advice we may give you. In many cases we have farmers who are making just a few dollars, but when you make a hundred dollars, or so, an acre off apple trees, it means something, and to this end we seek to instruct them with a few pointers, as to how to prune them, etc. Then again, we take up forestry. In certain parts of the country the soil is not valuable for crops and it is in these spots that trees should be replanted, so as not to waste the land. Again, we take up short courses in stock. We have well-informed men to look after the courses. We generally have these in the winter season.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie.

Last year, said Mr. Gillespie, we had one of the worst seasons I have yet experienced. We had bad cheese and good cheese; bad weather and bad prices. For this the weather and the poor accommodation were mainly responsible, but we are having other rooms made this year, and look for improvement. I think the makers did their part well, but the bad year occasioned a lack of enthusiasm, but I don't think this should worry us as we can look for the sun to shine this year, when I hope we shall have more enthusiasm.

Mr. Ellis.

Mr. Ellis of the Farm and Dairy, gave a brief address, saying: "I have written to twelve companies in England, who are importers of cheese, and the replies were to the effect that the make of it was good, but that it was heated, and each said: 'You want more curing rooms.'

Mr. G. G. Publow.

Mr. G. G. Publow, Chief Dairy Instructor of Ontario, said: "I think the best way is to ask questions and to discuss the matter which is most difficult to you.

I was very glad to hear the remarks as to the cheese situation. Now, I went to the Old Country last year for a special purpose, and that purpose was to find out what opinion the consumer had of our cheese. I am very pleased to say that we are working along the right lines. That is, cleanliness on the part of the producer, and carefulness on the part of the farmer. But we are here to discuss defects and to overcome them if we can. When I was in Liverpool I saw several boxes from this district with fat running from the boxes and I think it was due to keeping it in the room too long. Some of the cheesemakers also make the cheese hard in order to avoid the running of the fat, with the result that the cheese was lean. Many men who are handling Peterborough cheese are saying "What's the matter with Peterborough. I think all the cheese that is made in a cool room is going to the best shops. I should like first to emphasize the importance of cleanliness. It is not much use study ing sanitary conditions in factories if we do not do something similar with regard to the farm. Another point is the control of the temperature of the milk. This is an important point, and farmers should make note of it.

SPRING MOVEMENT BEGINNING TO ASSERT ITSELF

Many of the Thoroughfares Are Almost Bare of Snow

The mild spell is causing an end of trouble to teamsters, and more especially the farmers, who, upon arriving in town in charge of a heavy load, experience considerable difficulty in navigating the city thoroughfares, which are almost bare of snow. One man was stalled on the G. T. R. track at King street for some time this morning, and it required the assistance of a passing team to extricate him from his position. It was only a few minutes later that a similar misfortune befell a farmer from North Monaghan, on Charlotte St. He had a load of grain aboard, with a good, strong team attached thereto, but they proved unequal to the task. Assistance was needed in his case. These and many similar incidents could be noted daily.

Local Teamsters Affected.

The farmers are not the only sufferers, as yesterday, within the space of an hour, two local teamsters were stalled on George street, one of them tying up the street car service for several minutes. The latter had a load of snow and was headed for the "dump". Many of the city roads are almost bare of snow—a circumstance which has driven a great many teamsters to revert to the use of wheeled vehicles.

Preparing for Spring Floods.

The work of taking care of the surplus water, opening up refractory storm sewers, and other sundry tasks that portend the coming of Spring, is engaging the attention of the Board of Works. As a result, the ranks of the unemployed have been depleted somewhat. To a number of the men has been assigned the task of opening up the gutters.

Railroads and other public utilities are also exhibiting signs of activity towards the prevention of possible floods, by the opening up of drains, and, in some cases, the removal of the accumulated snow. The calendar credits to-morrow with being the first day of spring, but the majority of the people will probably discount that theory before the month is out, that is if the weather is to be taken as a criterion.

Exodus to the West.

Probably one of the predominating signs of the season is the rush to the West. Never in the history of Peterborough has this manifested itself to such a marked degree. It is estimated that over one hundred families will take up their abode in the West, while the migration of the younger element is also large. A number of cars of household effects left the city this week, and many more are to follow. The policy pursued, in a great many cases, is for two or three families to make up a car between them.

THE MARCH ROD AND GUN.

"An Experience Off the Coast of Newfoundland: Hunting the Hair Seal" opens the March issue of Rod and Gun in Canada, published by W. J. Taylor, Limited, Woodstock, Ont., and the interest of this article is the first of a series of articles on that follow, which include articles descriptive of outdoor life from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Among these is the first of a series of articles on the Culture of Black and Silver Foxes, which should prove of value to the many seeking practical information on this subject. A new feature this month is the creation of a Game Conservation Department, edited by Mr. Frank Hyde, wherin matters pertaining to the subject of game conservation will be freely discussed. As this subject is a live one at the present time and is likely to be for some time to come, or until the improved laws for which good sportsmen are agitating have been enacted, this department should prove of exceptional interest.

8 BOXES CURED PSORIASIS

Mrs. Nettie Massey, Cameron, Ont., writes: "Three doctors described my trouble as psoriasis, and one said I could never be cured. The disease spread all over me, even on my face and head, and the itching and burning was hard to bear. I used eight boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and am entirely cured—not a sore to be seen. I can highly recommend this Ointment enough."

A Blow At The White Plague

Just think what it would mean if even half the deaths from consumption could be avoided. It is surely not too much to claim that at least this many cases are directly due to neglect to cure colds.

It is a simple matter to control a cold when you have Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine in the house for prompt use when the first symptoms appear. Many thousands have found this out by experience, and this is why no treatment for coughs and colds has anything like the sale in this country that this well-known medicine has.

Croup, bronchitis, whooping cough, sore throat and chest colds soon yield to the healing, soothing influence of this great medicine. You can readily prove this and will then understand why this treatment is so popular.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

JUMPING JUPITER.

That long-legged eccentric comedian Richard Carle paid his first visit to Peterborough last night and, aided by a capable corps of fun-makers, gave a large audience at the Grand a delightful one hundred and fifty minutes' entertainment in the musical comedy "Jumping Jupiter." Funny situations, bright lines, and tuneful music made the production wholly charming and it was a well pleased audience that filed out of the Grand after the final curtain. Every good comedian has a method all his own, and Carle certainly has his own peculiar way of fun-making, his quiet, quaint methods keeping his audience convulsed. As Professor Jupiter Goodwillie, professor in Dermatology, his work was funny all through. He had an able foil in the person of Chas. E. Wright, who played the part of Toby Pebbleford, with rich humour, and whose coon songs "Possum Rag" and "Angle-worm Wriggle" scored the individual success of the evening. Edna Wallace Hopper was a dainty soubrette whose singing and dancing were thoroughly appreciated. The other roles were in good hands and the chorus was comely and accomplished. The music throughout was tuneful, the best being, "Little Girl, I Love You," "I Like to Have a Flock of Men Around Me" and "To the Strains of the Wedding March."

C.G.E. FOOTBALL CLUB.

Meeting in Y.M.C.A. on Wednesday, March 27.

A meeting of the C.G.E. Football Club will be held in the Y.M.C.A. on Wednesday, March 27th, at eight o'clock. The committee for last year are asked to be present as important business will be transacted. Those who have been previously notified that the meeting was for the 25th, will please note the alteration of the date.

USEFUL PURPOSES

leading daily papers throughout Canada, the copy for the same having been furnished and prepared by the members of the Toronto Ad Club. Mr. Hardy pointed out what a tremendous influence for awakening greater interest in advertising this campaign will be, and also drew attention to the fact of how much everyone interested in advertising, and in writing advertisements can learn from the copy featured in these ads., and from the manner in which they are displayed.

The meeting was not all that it might have been, in the point of numbers present, several other important meetings, two church entertainments, and the opera, interfered with the attendance at the Ad Club. What the meeting lacked in numbers, however, was more than made up in interest, and it was clearly demonstrated that those behind the local Ad. Club mean business, and will carry their organization through to the successful conclusion we may all wish for.

Colds

Don't trifle with a cold; no one can tell what the end may be. Pneumonia, catarrh, chronic bronchitis and consumption inevitably result from neglected colds. Nothing can be compared with

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy

as a quick cure for colds and grip, and by its use the more serious diseases may be avoided.

An English Chemist Has Discovered How to Grow Hair

In England the ladies have entirely abandoned wearing rats, which is due entirely to this new discovery.

It has been proven that Henna leaves contain the ingredients that will positively grow hair. That they contain this long-looked-for article is proven every day.

The Americans are now placing on the market a preparation containing the extract from Henna leaves, which is having a phenomenal sale.

This preparation is called SALVIA, and is being sold with a guarantee to cure Dandruff and to grow hair in abundance. Being daintily perfumed, SALVIA makes a most pleasant hair dressing. McDermid and Jury, your druggist, is the first to import this preparation into Peterborough, and a large, generous bottle can be purchased for 50c. Also sold at Payne's drug store.

OBITUARY

JOHN FINLAY.

The death occurred yesterday afternoon of Mr. John Finlay of Chemong Road. The deceased, who was eighty three years of age, was one of Smith's most well known and respected citizens and his death will be generally regretted. He was by occupation a farmer, and in creed an Anglican. He was a life-long resident of Smith township.

The late Mr. Finlay is survived by one son and two daughters. The funeral will take place to-morrow at 2 o'clock from the late residence of the deceased, Finlay's Hill, to the Little Lake cemetery. The Rev. R. B. Grobb will officiate.

CHANGE IN PROGRAMME.

Convention Will Open Day Earlier Than Formerly Intended.

The convention to be held in Bethany Tabernacle will open on Thursday evening instead of Friday, as was formerly announced. Rev. W. H. Chandler, of Wheaton, Illinois, will give an address on "Prayer" to-morrow evening at 8 o'clock.

The Beauty and Freshness of the

NEW MODES for 1912

Pervades every corner of the Cressman Store

Come To See

THE SEASON has advanced to such an extent that the style tendencies for the coming year have become firmly established. A "Peculiar Note of Charm" is characteristic of the new modes for 1912. The vogue of the coming season is varied as it is beautiful, thereby offering unlimited scope in the selection of a costume which possesses "Becomingness" and Individuality.

See Our Window Displays To-night

They are a source of authoritative information and mirror the leading style tendencies of 1912.

The South Window is devoted to the showing of the new Grey and White stripes, and displays a Tailored Suit made with the new cutaway coat; Suiting by the yard in the same new stripe; a Blouse also, of grey and white stripe taffeta silk and the newest accessories to be worn with such a costume.

Our Centre Window reveals a charming Dress of shot taffeta silk; a new novelty Coat of striking design; and beautiful Dress Fabrics. The ensemble shows how well we are prepared to supply your wants in the matter of "Cultured Dress."

The North Window is a study in black and white. Here are displayed a trim tailored Suit of smart design; cream Suitings with black silks employed as trimming; white and black shoes, parasols, gloves, etc., which clearly demonstrate the completeness of the "Cressman" stock in this leading style feature of 1912.

Exquisite Millinery in design to suit the nature of the goods displayed is shown in each window. Millinery of a type that is different and imparts the final touch of expression to the new Spring costume.

We Invite You

to visit the store to-morrow and leisurely inspect our important displays of the New Modes—all are prominently displayed. The departments featuring Millinery, Ready-to-Wears and Dress Goods are particularly worthy of your inspection.

ST. JOHN'S CHOIR RECITAL

The highly successful and enjoyable sacred recital given in St. John's church last night by the choir, demonstrated the possibility of combining deep devotional spirit with the presentation, enjoyment and religious uplift of artistically presented sacred music. The church was well filled with an appreciative audience, which listened with delight to an hour's beautiful and inspiring music, excellently presented. The religious character of the occasion, in keeping with the spirit of the solemn Lenten season, was signalised by the presence of Rev. B. R. Grubb, rector of All Saints', who conducted the brief religious service at the beginning and close of the recital. The choir, under Mr. Devey's leadership, was in good force and form and strengthened by some of the best soloist musicians of the city. Not the least pleasing feature of the programme was the introduction of the sterling hymns of the Christian church, "All People That on Earth Do Dwell" at the begining, and the triumphant hymn "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name" at the close, the latter especially being sung with grand spirit and effect. Without detailed reference to the programme, it may be mentioned that the choral numbers were treated with excellent musicianly and interpretative spirit. There was a good balance of parts and intelligent appreciation of the spirit of the compositions; and both Mr. Devey and the choir are worthy of the warmest commendation. After a little nervousness in the first chorus, the choir took a splendid stride and sang with improving spirit and effect to the close, when the Stainer chorus, "Who Lifts His Throne on High," with its virile suggestiveness of Handel's style, was sung with mighty spirit and with almost flawless execution. The soloists were also worthy of the occasion. Miss Quartermaine, with a rarely of excellent natural quality gave the introductory recitatives to two of the choruses, with very satisfactory effect, especially her second number. Mr. H. W. Morphet in his solo, "Come Let Us Worship," from Mendelssohn's 95th Psalm, sang with an effectiveness which is familiar to St. John's congregation. Mr. Chandler sang, "My Hope is Everlasting," with the artistic finish that is always expected of him. "He Was Despised," from the Messiah, a glorious composition, was admirably sung by Miss Brock, soloist of the Charlotte street Methodist church choir. Miss Brock has a deep-toned, full-toned contralto voice of charming quality. Its natural beauty has apparently been made effective by careful culture and good method. She sang her number with fine devotional feeling and finish, and it is a pleasure to know that so exceptionally good a musical artist is to remain with us in Peterborough. Mrs. F. W. Davidson took the soprano solo, "When Jesus Had Put Them All Out" with beautiful expression and fine appreciation of its musical, as well as moral motif. Mr. Morphet and Mrs. Devey were very successful in their duet for tenor and soprano, "Love Divine." A delightful variation came midway in the programme in the violin solo of Dr. Park, of the Normal School staff. He played the adagio movement from De Beriot's 9th concerto, with splendid effect, clarity of tone and just expression.

Altogether the recital was a very gratifying success, and the choir of St. John's, and its energetic director, are grateful for the appreciation of the public, as expressed in the large attendance, representative of all denominations, that taxed the seating capacity of the church.

SYLVIA ON WOMAN SUFFRAGE

THE PLACE OF WOMEN IN THE STATE

(No. 2)

Women, as well as men, are schemers, and if allowed the franchise, would soon be men's equal in political trickery.

About two years ago the Toronto Suffragettes started a campaign in the woman's column of one of the leading daily papers. Peaceful tactics were used. Readers were invited to discuss the question of woman's franchise, which they did. Suffragette articles, of course, received favourable comments from the editor, while anti-suffragette articles were shortened and mutilated so as to weaken, or omit their arguments. Then an announcement was made that several Toronto ladies had been specially invited to give their views on the subject. These proved to be double-dyed suffragettes and wrote over their own names. The only difference between the writings of these selected suffragettes and the others was a presumption of superiority (since widely imitated) and a more plentiful lack of common sense. From their repeated assertions that politics need not interfere with home duties, as only a few women will be required to fill parliamentary or other offices, it is evident that they consider only themselves eligible to direct the affairs of women.

Both men and women know that women understand each other too well to be ruled by their own sex.

The following extracts are taken from the letters of these "selected" writers:

"The home once held sufficient scope for all a woman's energies. But to-day, for the first time in history, things are different. The work that has been woman's for centuries, has been taken from her. We get our light from wires, clothes ready-made, fruit already canned, water by way of pipes, bread from factories; to say nothing of the things we can now buy which once were produced by tedious handlabour. Our laundry comes and goes. House-keeping seems to be progressing to a point at which everything will be done outside the home. Even the duty of bearing children is less insistent than it was. There is a danger and menace to humanity in this idleness and isolation of the woman."

What an ideal state of affairs this is, or would seem to be could our noble pioneer women come back. They longed, amid the continual round of pressing duties, to have time to be companionable to their children, to train their moral nature, and help along their education. They were also desirous of more time to read and become more intelligent citizens, themselves; to be helpful to their neighbours, and have a relaxation from their daily work. Our mothers were also a worthy example to their servants in the way of dignity and industry. These servants often married and proved industrious settlers. It is well known to-day that girls prefer work in offices and stores under men, to domestic work under a woman.

If the housework is really taken from us then why did a deputation of women, a short time ago, ask Sir James Whitney to bring in foreign servants? If the work is to be done outside the home then why the need of teaching domestic science in our public schools and colleges? Again:

"Would the housekeepers put any more tubercular roasts of beef in their ovens if they had a voice in the controlling of meat inspection?"

"A simple act of Legislature could make pollution of rivers, streams and lakes a national offence."

Are not men quite as unwilling to eat tubercular beef, or drink polluted water as women are, and if the legislation against both is now ineffectual, how could the votes of women remedy the grievance? Does this woman think legislation can expel infection from beef or water? And again:

"Would women have needed to talk and stir up public opinion for three years to have medical inspection of school children if we had the ballot? No, indeed, it would not have been necessary."

This writer evidently thinks it the work of certain women to do all the talking and give advice. Some time later she presided at a woman's meeting. It is reported that

"She commended the work of the Board of Education in medical matters"; "She commended the formation in Toronto schools for special classes for mental defectives"; "She recommended a room be set aside in each school house for dental and medical work, and for a nurse."

How many bridge parties and afternoon teas did she miss in the actual labour of these commendations and suggestions? Why not commend that these women who complain of having their work taken from them, look after the inspection of their own children and so lessen public expense as well as disease and suffering? A Toronto dentist worked twenty-three years to call attention to the condition of the teeth of school children. Why did not these women assist him in this good work? They had children of their own, whose teeth undoubtedly needed attention. How many of these women who write or talk in public actually examine their children for physical defects, or try to gain knowledge required to correct or avoid defects in children? They cautiously wait until they see what is going to "take" and then ostentatiously pretend to be enthusiastic promoters of it. If members of women's societies would practise, rather than preach, dental and medical inspection would be an easier matter, as would also the lessening of the white plague. If we are to be considered serious we must open our windows daily, and nightly, and keep our houses in a sanitary condition and take care of our children ourselves. And once more:

"Woman is womans' greatest enemy. It almost shatters one's faith in the cause to find the utter disloyalty of women towards women."

Suffragette leaders, who, by a little superficial knowledge and a great deal of presumption, are the means of misleading women, who otherwise would remain sane and sensible. By their eagerness to get before the public they often retard the progress of education or needful reforms. Statesmen in England have all and more than they can do to bring order out of chaos. What annoyance, and even danger to their lives has been caused by the disgraceful acts of the Suffragettes. No wonder Premier Asquith says he believes the granting of the franchise to women would be a grave political mistake.

AN INTERESTING ASTRONOMICAL LECTURE

Mr. H. B. Collier, Late President of the Local Centre, Gives Interesting Discourse

The members of the Astronomical Society had with them at the regular meeting, held last night, at the Institute, a welcome visitor, in the person of Mr. H. B. Collier, the late President of the Society, who gave a lecture on the subject "Astronomy versus Astrology." As explained by the lecturer, prior to commencing his discourse, he did not take up much of their time in talking, as he had about one hundred slides which he wished to show them.

"Astrology," he said, "is a subject relative to man's destiny, while astronomy was a science. Go back to history and see how the "old-timers" studied the stars. For a long time the stars loomed prominently in the lives of the people, generally. People imagined the whole heavens were full of genii. You know that in the Old Testament the sun was worshipped, and the priest could wield the whole nation. They were in power and they set aside certain days for worship. Crops were regulated by the stars.

It was only in the time of Copernicus that astronomy became known, and he was the first who made it a science. It was he who occasioned the evolution of astronomy, which name could well be applied to our subject.

Here a number of slides were exhibited by Mr. H. O. Fisk, dealing with the general conception of stars in the early ages, each of which was explained by the lecturer.

LECTURE AT ST. JOHN'S.

"The Early History of the Church of England Before the Reformation."

Instead of the regular Wednesday evening service at St. John's church to-night there will be a lecture in the Sunday school by Rev. Canon Montgomery of Port Hope, under the auspices of St. John's Church Association. Rev. Canon Montgomery will speak on "The Early History of the Church of England," Prior to the Reformation." The lecture will be illustrated with slides. All those who are interested are invited to attend.

The Change from Tea and Coffee to

POSTUM

has been a

Lucky Change

for many a person who felt something was wrong.

If tea and coffee are found to disagree, a ten days' trial of Postum should put you on the way to health and comfort.

Postum is a pure food-drink made of wheat, and is absolutely free from caffeine—the drug in tea and coffee. Postum has a dark, rich color and the taste much resembles that of mild, high-grade Java.

Postum is a rebuilder.

AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENT.

Broken Axle Put Car Out of Commission—Was Towed to Barn.

The first automobile accident to be recorded in this city, so far as this year is concerned, occurred to-day. A broken axle put a car owned by Mr. Montgomery out of commission, and the services of a car owned by Mr. Charles Bank were utilized in towing the disabled machine to the garage. The roads are in such a condition at present as to render automobiling somewhat risky. With the advent of a continued spell of fine weather, these conditions should be somewhat ameliorated in the course of a few days.

GLAD TIDINGS FOR AUTOMOBILE OWNERS

Peterboro' Garage Will be Open to Public on Friday—Complete Stock of Autos and Supplies Will Be Carried

Further impetus will be given the automobile industry, in so far as this city is concerned, by the opening of the new automobile salesroom and garage, under the able management of Carey, Moher Co. This event of all importance to automobile owners and prospective purchasers, will materialise on Friday and Saturday of this week. The show rooms, which are located at 182 Hunter street, opposite the Oriental Hotel, are well worth a visit. They are a model of completeness in every respect, and are admirably adapted to the purpose for which they are intended. A large commodious salesroom is one of the features of this up-to-date garage, while the mechanical needs of the business have been amply provided for, in the form of a repair shop at the rear of the wash room, which is also another feature worthy of consideration, when selecting a suitable place to store your car. An expert mechanic will be in charge of the repair department, who will have at his disposal all the latest mechanical appliances appertaining to this important phase of the business.

Overhauling, painting and repairing of old cars will also receive special attention. This, together with the extensive lines of supplies which the company will carry, will place them in a pre-eminent position to fulfill the wants of the automobile owners.

Three makes of cars will be handled, including the "Mitchell," a car constructed by a skilled organization to the dinky little Hupmobile, a $1,000 car of infinite refinement, which proves conclusively that a low price need not be accompanied by crudity of construction.

Announcement of the grant of a Dominion subsidy to the Lake Erie & Northern Traction Line to Port Dover was made yesterday, and it is expected the actual construction will be commenced this year. It will cost about $2,000,000.

A resolution asking the Government to look into the matter of the entry of intoxicating liquors into local option territory, coupled with a great deal of committee work, constituted yesterday's session of the Royal Templars of Temperance in Hamilton.

Not to Talk Political Union.

London, March 21.—The delegates from the West Indies reaching Ottawa this week are unlikely to discuss the political union of the Bahama and Bermuda Islands to Canada. This intricate question will have to be dealt with by the Imperial authorities.

MOTOR BILL DEFEATED IN THE LEGISLATURE

J. C. Elliott's Measure Was Lost on Division—Members of Cabinet Did Not Want to go as Far as the Proposed Amendment—Act as it is is Not Clear.

Toronto, March 21.—Drastic legislation faced the owners of motor-cars throughout the province when the "get-off-the-roads" bill, introduced by J. C. Elliott, came up for its second reading in the Legislature yesterday.

Officially designated "an act to amend the Motor Vehicles Act," one clause read as follows: "When any loss or damage is incurred or sustained by any person by reason of a motor vehicle on a highway the owner and the driver of such motor vehicle shall be jointly and severally liable for such loss or damage, unless, in the opinion of the court or jury trying the action, such loss or damage was occasioned by the negligence of the person or persons sustaining such damage, or either or any of them."

"The proposed legislation strikes me as unfair," said Mr. Hanna. The Provincial Secretary then proceeded to show that the present legislation regarding motor vehicles was as rigid as could reasonably be asked for. "The proposed bill would," he said, "lay all the responsibility on the motorist in case of accident, no matter how careful or free from blame he was, except in case it could be demonstrated that the injured person was negligent. The highways might not have been built for motor vehicles, but the highways were for the use of the vehicles of the time."

Hon. A. G. MacKay favored the bill, on the ground that it would be a check on reckless drivers.

Allan Studholme supported the bill "from a common-sense standpoint."

C. R. McEwen, Dufferin, vigorously opposed the bill. "If the hon. member who introduced the bill wants the motorists to get off the road, why doesn't he say so," declared Mr. McEwen, "for that is practically what it means."

Geo. H. Gooderham told how, under the amendment proposed a driver of a motor-car would be liable for damages even though he had even helped the injured person and was not responsible for the accident into the bargain.

Mr. Elliott, in defence of his bill, said with reference to the remarks of some of the speakers, "that you'd think accidents happened by people running into the motor vehicle." He maintained that the man who brings a more than dangerous machine on to the highway should be responsible for accidents caused thereby.

Hon. J. B. Lucas said that while not at all favoring such drastic legislation as that which the member for West Middlesex proposed, he thought that the present law regarding motor vehicles should be better interpreted.

"At the present time we don't know where we are at, legally," said Mr. Lucas, "for the Court of Appeal often disagrees with the law as interpreted by a judge and jury."

Mr. Lucas thought that if a jury found that there was reasonable negligence in case of an accident, that the case should not be allowed to go to the Court of Appeal. Mr. Elliott's bill was lost on division.

To make arrangements for an agreement between the Federal and Provincial Ministers of Agriculture with regard to the terms upon which the Dominion subsidy to agriculture is granted, a bill was introduced by Hon. James Duff.

Mr. Rowell enquired if there was anything indicated as to what the money could be applied to.

Mr. Duff replied in the negative.

The Opposition leader also asked if Sir William Meredith's report on workmen's compensation would not be presented to the House this session.

Sir James replied that the report would in all probability be presented in a few days, and would be dealt with.

That minors under 18 years should not be permitted to frequent pool and billiard rooms without written authority from parents or guardians was the gist of Mr. Sulman's bill, which was given its second reading. The bill also gives municipalities power to cancel the licenses of establishments convicted for violation.

In an effort to abolish the 12 ounce loaf now on the market and substitute therefor a 16 ounce loaf is the purpose of the bread bill introduced by Mr. Ellis of Ottawa West, which was given its second reading and sent on to the municipal committee.

Montreal Gets Jolt.

Quebec, March 21.—With scarcely any discussion the private bills committee of the legislative council yesterday morning ignored the 9,000 majority of Montreal citizens who expressed themselves in favor of the abolition of the property qualification of mayor and aldermen and struck out of the Montreal bill the clause providing for this.

Another clause struck out by the councillors, this being likewise one which had passed unanimously by the City Council of Montreal, was the provision to abolish the clause disfranchising electors for non-payment of water tax.

Long Term For Gold Robber.

New York, March 21.—Geno Montani, the chauffeur who drove the taxicab in which two bank messengers were blackjacked and robbed of $90,000 in cash, and who was recently found guilty of highway robbery, was yesterday sentenced from ten years to eighteen years and two months in state's prison by Justice Seabury, in the criminal branch of the Supreme Court.

Aviator Coffyn Badly Hurt.

New York, March 21.—Although first examinations indicated that he had been but slightly injured, physicians said last night that Frank Coffyn, the aviator, hurt yesterday in an automobile smash-up in Central Park, has sustained a possible fracture at the base of the skull. His condition is serious.

Mrs. Coffyn was permitted to see her husband for a short time late yesterday. She was told that, although her husband's condition is serious, he has a good chance for recovery, and that there is no immediate danger of the injuries resulting fatally.

Goods Smuggled From Buffalo.

Niagara Falls, Ont., March 21.—Provincial Officer Delaney, stationed at Fort Erie, reported to Inspector Mains the recovery of $500 worth of silk stolen from Buffalo stores. Several arrests are expected to follow. How the goods were smuggled into Canada is a mystery to the customs officials.

Dropped Bombs Into Arab Camp.

Tripoli, March 21.—Two dirigible balloons, making a reconnaissance over the Zansour oasis yesterday, were received with a brisk fusilade. They dropped twenty-two bombs into the Arab camp, apparently with great effect, as the Arabs were seen to scatter in all directions.

Aged Couple United In Death.

Cleveland, O., March 21.—Vincent Schlessinger, 78 years old, died here yesterday, ten minutes after the death of his wife Elizabeth, aged 60. The couple had prayed that they might lie together.

LESSON NO. 3
From
J. W. BROWETT, Optometrist

My talk to you this week is very important. If you are a sufferer from headaches caused by straining the eyes. It is very important to you, of course, that you should use your eyes, but nature never intended that you should abuse them. We know that headaches come from straining the normal eye or from using imperfect eyes or, in other words, eyes which do not focus. My experience leads me to believe that all strained eyes can be relieved by properly fitted glasses. When this strain is relieved the headaches disappear. Now reason a little: If you are a sufferer from headaches, and you suspect that the cause is strained vision then my argument must appeal to your case. My experience, gained from so many cases of eye strain during the past twenty years, is valuable to you. Try the remedy of glasses as we fit them, and you will not be disappointed.

BALFOUR IN RING

Former Leader of British Opposition Makes a Sensational Return to the Commons

CRITICAL SITUATION

London, March 21.—The fate of the minimum wage bill seems to be trembling in the balance. A. J. Balfour will move the rejection of the bill in the House of Commons to-day.

The dramatic reappearance of Mr. Balfour in the role of leader of the Opposition comes as a great surprise, the decision being taken at a meeting of prominent Unionists, including Austin Chamberlain, Walter Hume Long and F. E. Smith, at which Andrew Bonar Law, who assumed the leadership on the retirement of Mr. Balfour last November, requested that the former leader undertake the duty of moving the bill's rejection.

Whether this development heralds the return of Mr. Balfour to the active leadership of the party remains to be seen. The Unionists lately have been greatly elated at the growing difficulty the Government has been encountering, due in part to the unpopularity of the insurance bill, the increasing labor troubles, and the greatly increased public expenditure involved in social reforms, and evidence of a change in public opinion has been given in recent bye-elections.

If, as some of the Unionists assert, the Government is riding for a fall, it may come over the minimum wage bill, but there is little doubt that the Government can carry the second reading of the bill, as the Labor party and the Nationalists have decided to give their support to that end.

Difficulties will arise in the committee stage, when the Laborites will move amendments, with the object of having inserted the schedule of minimum rates as fixed by the miners' federation. It appears, however, that the federation only carried the resolution in favor of this procedure by a majority of 12 in 100 votes. Evidently therefore a large section of the federation favor a less extreme procedure, and possibly when the committee stage arrives more reasonable counsels may prevail.

U. S. Strike Imminent.

Cleveland, O., March 21.—Wage discussions between the operators and representatives of 200,000 union miners in the bituminous coal fields of Western Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, held in an effort to avert a prolonged suspension of business after April 1 and also to avert a possible strike, yesterday were without definite results.

The prospect that all the bituminous coal mines would be closed down after the first of the month, pending the making of a new two-year working and wage agreement, was said to be imminent. It also was said the lack of a wage scale in the central states would leave the union bituminous coal miners in other states without a basis upon which to work and they would have to close, entailing idleness for more than 350,000 miners.

Postmaster on Carpet.

Woodstock, March 21.—Eleven witnesses were heard at yesterday afternoon's session of the investigation which opened at the village of Princeton yesterday, before Peter McDonald of this city, into the charges of offensive partisanship against F. Vickert, postmaster at that place, but the evidence is not nearly all in, and it is probable that it will require all day to-day to finish up.

Most of the evidence taken corroborated the statement made at the morning session that Postmaster Vickert had attended a Conservative meeting during the last federal campaign and had spoken in favor of the reciprocity agreement and had upheld the sending of Messrs. Fielding and Paterson to Washington, and their finding.

Mr. Vickert had also occupied the chair at a Liberal meeting.

THE I.C.R. CRITICIZED

Former Minister of Railways and Canals Urges That Intercolonial Abolish its Level Crossing

LARGER APPROPRIATION

Ottawa, March 21.—Parliament abandoned fireworks and spent the afternoon and night in discussing and passing railway supply. The Intercolonial held the boards throughout, and Hon. Mr. Graham pressed upon the Minister of Railways the advisability of carrying on the policy inaugurated by the late Administration in respect to the elimination or protection of level crossings. "The Government-owned railway should set an example in this matter," he urged.

Hon. Mr. Cochrane said he had $40,000 in the estimates for this purpose, while Mr. Graham said he would be well satisfied to see that amount augmented.

On the motion to go into supply yesterday afternoon Hon. Mr. Emmerson devoted an hour and a quarter to a discussion of the affairs of the railway, and was answered by Hon. Frank Cochrane.

Mr. Emmerson asked if the Government would take over the branch line running to the point from which the proposed car ferry to Prince Edward Island would run.

He also wanted to know what the Government's policy was in regard to running rights over the Intercolonial Railway for other lines of railway. The trouble was that the railways wanted not only through but local traffic.

He criticized the board of management, which, he said, lessened the sense of the responsibility. If the road were under the management of one man they would have decision and action. "There were miles of cars," said Mr. Emmerson, "standing on the I.C.R. within sight of the workshops at Moncton disabled, and no attempt had been made to repair them. There was no remedy for this, as long as the managing board were instructed to have a surplus.

"Not a blow had been struck in connection with the construction of locomotives in the last four years. Even if the road had rolling stock, it had not the motive power to move it.

Hon. Frank Cochrane said that he had appointed a man from Queen's University to investigate the car ferry situation.

The C.P.R. was the only company applying for running rights over the I.C.R. between St. John and Halifax, and this would receive the consideration of the Government as soon as the session was over.

As to the surplus of the I.C.R., he assured Mr. Emmerson that when the supplementary estimates were brought down he would find that most of it would be voted to go into rolling stock.

When the House went into supply the I.C.R. estimates were taken up. Hon. Geo. P. Graham urged on the Government the desirability of speedily double-tracking the line between St. John and Halifax.

J. H. Sinclair (Guysboro) criticised the proposed subsidy to the T. & N. O. Railway. Subsidies were given, he said, for the construction of railways and should not be given to a railway already constructed and a paying proposition. He insinuated that there was discrimination in favor of a province in which the political friends of the Minister of Railways were in power.

Hon. Frank Cochrane emphatically declared that the policy of the Government was to grant subsidies to railways constructed by any of the provinces regardless of their political complexion.

Hon. C. J. Doherty introduced a bill to provide for an additional judge of the Exchequer Court.

Hon. Martin Burrell's aid to agriculture bill was given its third reading and passed, after an amendment by Hon. Wm. Pugsley to refer it back to committee with instructions to add a section providing for the distribution of the money according to the population of the provinces had been declared lost on division.

S. C. Constable Shot.

Vernon, B.C., March 21.—Several posses in the vicinity of Peachland are scouring the country for two desperadoes, who, after holding up a store at Bellevue, South Kelowana, were captured by Provincial Constable Ashton and shot the latter aboard the steamer Okanagan while being returned to face their crime.

In the state room, after overpowering their captor, the desperadoes muffled him in blankets and then shot him in the head. The desperadoes disembarked at Peachland.

Constable Ashton was taken to the Kelowana Hospital, where it is said he has no chance for recovery.

"INITIALS ONLY"

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

"It seems to have always been; to have known no beginning, only a budding, an efflorescence, the visible product of a hidden but always present reality. A month ago and I was ignorant, even of your name. Now, you seem the best known to me, the best understood, of God's creatures. One afternoon of perfect companionship—one flash of strong emotion, with its deep, true insight into each other's soul, and the miracle was wrought. We had met, and henceforth, parting would mean separation only, and not the severing of a mutual bond. One hand, and one only, could do that now. I will not name that hand. For us there is nought ahead but life.

"Thus do I cone my heart in the silence conditions must impose upon us. Some day I shall hear your voice again, and then—"

The paper dropped from the reader's hand. It was several minutes before he took up another.

This one, as it happened, antedated the other, as will appear on reading it:

"My friend:

"I said that I could not write to you—that we must wait. You are willing; but there is much to be accomplished, and the silence may be long. My father is not an easy man to please, but he desires my happiness and will listen to my plea when the right hour comes. When you have won your place — when you have shown yourself to be the man I feel you to be, then my father will recognize your worth, and the way will be cleared,' despite the obstacles which now intervene.

"But meantime! Ah, you will not know it, but words will rise — the heart must find utterance. What the lip cannot utter, nor the looks reveal, these pages shall hold in sacred trust for you till the day when my father will place my hand in yours, with heart-felt approval.

"Is it a folly? A woman's weak evasion of the strong silence of man? You may say so some day; but somehow, I doubt it—I doubt it."

The creaking of a chair;—the man within had seated himself. There was no other sound; a soul in turmoil wakens no echoes. Sweetwater envied the walls surrounding the unsympathetic reader. They could see. He could only listen.

A little while; then that slight rustling again of the unfolding sheet. The following was read, and then the fourth and last:

"Dearest:

"Did you think I had never seen you till that day we met in Lenox? I am going to tell you a secret—a great, great secret—such a one as a woman hardly whispers to her own heart.

"One day, in early summer, I was sitting in St. Bartholomew's Church on Fifth avenue, waiting for the services to begin. It was early and the congregation was assembling. While idly watching the people coming in, I saw a gentleman pass by me up the aisle, who made me forget all the others. He had not the air of a New Yorker; he was not even dressed in city style, but as I noted his face and expression, I said way down in my heart, 'That is the kind of a man I could love; the only man I have ever seen who would make me forget my own world and my own people. It was a passing thought, soon forgotten. But when in that hour of embarrassment and peril on Greylock Mountain, I looked up into the face of my rescuer and saw again that countenance which so short a time before had called into life impulses till then unutterly unknown, I knew that my hour was come. And that was why my confidence was so spontaneous and my belief in the future so absolute.

"I trust your love which will work wonders; and I trust my own, which sprang at a look but only gathered strength and permanence when I found that the soul of the man I loved bettered his outward attractions, making the ideal of my foolish girlhood seem as unsubstantial and evanescent as a dream in the glowing noontide."

"My Own:

"I can say now; for you have written to me, and I have the dancing words with which to silence any unsought doubt which might subdue the exuberance of these secret outpourings.

"I did not expect this. I thought that you would remain as silent as myself. But men's ways are not our ways. They cannot exhaust longing in purposeless words on scraps of soulless paper, and I am glad that they cannot. I love you for your impatience; for your purpose, and for the manliness which will win for you yet all that you covet of fame, accomplishment and love. You expect no reply, but there are ways in which one can keep silent and yet speak. Don't you be surprised when your answer comes in a manner you have never thought of?"

CHAPTER XX.
CONFUSION.

In his interest in what was going on on the other side of the wall, Sweetwater had forgotten himself. Daylight had declined, but in the darkness of the closet this change had passed unheeded. Night itself might come, but that should not force him to leave his post so long as his neighbor remained behind his locked door, brooding over the words of love and devotion which had come to him, as it were, from the other world.

But was he brooding? That sound of iron clattering upon iron! That smothered exclamation and the laugh which ended it! Anger and determination rang in that laugh. It had a hideous sound which prepared Sweetwater for the smell which now reached his nostrils. The letters were burning; this time the lid had been lifted from the stove with unrelenting purpose. Poor Edith Challoner's touching words had met a different fate from any which she, in her ignorance of this man's nature—a nature to which she had ascribed untold perfections—could possibly have conceived.

As Sweetwater thought of this, he stirred nervously in the darkness, and broke into silent invective against the man who could so insult the memory of one who had perished under the blight of his own coldness and misunderstanding. Then he suddenly started back suprised and apprehensive. Brotherson had unlocked his door, and was coming rapidly his way. Sweetwater heard his step in the hall and had hardly time to bound from his closet, when he saw his own door burst in and found himself face to face with his redoubtable neighbor, in a state of such rage as few men could meet without quailing, even were they of his own stature, physical vigor and prowess; and Sweetwater was a small man.

However, disappointment such as he had just experienced brings with it a desperation which often outdoes courage, and the detective, smiling with an air of gay suprise, shouted out:

"Well, what's the matter now? Has the machine busted, or tumbled into the court out of your open window?"

"You were coming out of that closet," was the fierce rejoinder. "What have you got there? Something which concerns me, or why should your face go pale at my presence and your forehead drip with sweat? Don't think that you've deceived me for a moment as to your business here. I recognised you immediately. You've played the stranger well, but you've a nose and an eye nobody could forget. I have known all along that I had a police spy for a neighbor; but it didn't fase me. I've nothing to conceal, and wouldn't mind a regiment of you fellows if you'd only play a straight game. But when it comes to foisting upon me a parcel of letters to which I have no right, and then setting a fellow like you to count my groans or whatever else they expected to hear, I have a right to defend myself and defend myself I will, by God! But first, let me be sure that my accusations will stand. Come into this closet with me. It abuts on the wall of my room and has its own secrets, I know. What is it? I have you at an advantage now, and you shall tell."

He did have Sweetwater at an advantage, and the detective knew it and disdained a struggle which would have only called up a crowd, friendly to the other but inimical to himself. Allowing Brotherson to drag him into the closet, he stood quiescent, while the determined man who held him with one hand, felt about with the other over the shelves and along the partitions till he came to the hole which had offered such a happy means of communication between the two rooms. Then, with a laugh almost as bitter in tone as that which rang from Brotherson's lips, he acknowledged that business had its necessities and that apologies from him were in order; adding, as they both stepped out into the rapidly darkening room:

"We've played a tout, we two; and you've come out ahead. Allow me to congratulate you, Mr. Brotherson. You've cleared yourself so far as I am concerned. I leave this ranch tonight."

The frown had come back to the forehead of the indignant man who confronted him.

"So you listened," he cried; "listened when you weren't sneaking under my eye! A fine occupation for a man who can dove-tail a corner like an adept. I wish I had let you join the brotherhood you were good enough to mention. They would know how to appreciate your double gifts and how to reward your excellence in the one if not in the other. What did the police expect to learn about me that they should consider it necessary to call into exercise such extraordinary talents?"

"I'm not good at conundrums. I was given a task to perform, and I performed it," was Sweetwater's sturdy reply. Then slowly, with his eye fixed directly upon his antagonist, "I guess they thought you a man. And so did I until I heard you burn those letters. Fortunately we have copies."

"Letters!" Fury thickened the speaker's voice, and lent a savage gleam to his eye. "Forgeries! Make believes! Miss Challoner never wrote the drivel you dare to designate as letters. It was concocted at Police Headquarters. They made me tell my story and then they found some one who could wield the poetic pen. I'm obliged to them for the confidence they show in my credulity. I credit Miss Challoner with such words as have been given me to read here today? I know the lady, and I know myself. Nothing that passed between us, not an event in which we were both concerned, has been forgotten by me, and no feature of our intercourse fits the language you have ascribed to her. On the contrary, there is a lamentable contradiction between facts as they were and the fancies you have made her indulge in. And this, as you must acknowledge, not only proves their falsity, but exonerates Miss Challoner from all possible charge of sentimentality."

"Yet she certainly wrote those letters. We had them from Mr. Challoner. The woman who brought them was really her maid. We have not deceived you in this."

"I do not believe you."

It was not offensively said; but the conviction it expressed was absolute. Sweetwater recognised the tone, as one of truth, and inwardly laid down his arms. He could never like the man; there was too much iron in his fibre; but he had to acknowledge that as a foe he was invulnerable and therefore admirable to one who had the good sense to appreciate him.

"I do not want to believe you." Thus did Brotherson supplement his former sentence. "For if I were to attribute those letters to her, I should have to acknowledge that they were written to another man than myself. And this would be anything but agreeable to me. Now I am going to my room and to my work. You may spend the rest of the evening or the whole of the night, if you will, listening at that hole. As heretofore, the labor will be all yours, and the indifference mine."

With a satirical play of feature which could hardly be called a smile, he nodded and left the room.

CHAPTER XXI.
A CHANGE.

"It's all up. I'm beaten on my own ground." Thus confessed Sweetwater, in great dejection, to himself. "But I'm going to take advantage of the permission he's just given me and continue the listening act. Just because he told me to and just because he thinks I won't. I'm sure it's no worse than to spend hours of restless tossing in bed, trying to sleep."

"But our young detective did neither.

As he was putting his supper dishes away, a messenger boy knocked at his door and handed him a note. It was from Mr. Gryce and ran thus:

"Steal off, if you can, and as soon as you can, and meet me in Twenty-ninth street. A discovery has been made which alters the whole situation."

CHAPTER XXII.
O. B. AGAIN.

"What's happened? Something very important? I ought to hope so after this confounded failure."

"Failure? Didn't he read the letters?"

"Yes, he read them. Had to, but —"

"Didn't weaken? Eh?"

"No, he didn't weaken. You can't get water out of a millstone. You may squeeze and squeeze; but it's your fingers which suffer, not it. He thinks we manufactured those letters ourselves on purpose to draw him."

"Humph! I knew we had a reputation for finesse, but I didn't know that it ran that high."

"He denies everything. Said she would never have written such letters to him; even goes so far as to declare that if she did write them—(he must be strangely ignorant of her handwriting) they were meant for some other man than himself. All rot, but —" A hitch of the shoulder conveyed Sweetwater's disgust. His uniform good nature was strangely disturbed.

But Mr. Gryce's was not. The faint smile with which he smoothed with an easy, circling movement, the already polished top of his ever present cane, conveyed a secret complacency which called up a flash of discomfiture to his greatly irritated companion.

CURE SICK HEADACHE.

"The Only Thing That Will Relieve Neuralgia."

The piercing pains of Neuralgia, which often follows a bad cold or La Grippe, are frequently almost unbearable and few medicines afford any relief to the sufferer.

"I am a rural mail carrier and have been a user of the Dr. Miles medicines for years.

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills can't be beaten. They are the only thing I have found that will relieve my neuralgia and I have tried most everything, besides medicine from the doctor. I am willing to tell anyone what the Anti-Pain Pills did for me."

CHARLES HILDEBRANDT,
Box 205 Woodvill, Ohio

If you, like Mr. Hilderbrandt, "have tried most everything" in vain, why not do as he did, fight your aches and pains with Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills. Let the pills bear the brunt of the battle. No matter how stubborn the contest, they will come out victorious.

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills stand on their record, which is a long list of cures extending back a generation.

Druggists everywhere sell them. If first package fails to benefit, your druggist will return your money.

Rolled Thinnest
Cook Quickest

Morning! That's hurry-up time.

Husband must get to business—the children to school. And every few minutes comes the anxious query:

"Isn't breakfast ready yet?"

Why not ease up your morning hurly-burly?

Give your folks the easy breakfast—the quick breakfast—the good breakfast—Tillson's Rolled Oats.

Let it cook for only 15 minutes—that's quick.

Cream of Tomato Soup

Add one-half cupful of Tillson's Rolled Oats to two cupfuls of tomato pulp and juice, cooked or otherwise. Simmer 20 minutes. Press through sieve, add one-fourth teaspoonful soda, half teaspoonful water and one teaspoonful sugar to tomatoes. Scald three cupfuls milk. Add thickened tomato to this, season and serve. Additional milk may be used if the soup thickens too much. It is apt to do so on standing. Do not be afraid of curdling with this method as the thickening ingredient lessens the danger.

Tillson's Oats

Your grocer has Tillson's. Two sizes—10c and 25c. Each 25c package contains a handsome piece of English Porcelain Tableware.

Where Do You Shop?

DO you shop in a brisk, active store, or in a dull store?

Advertising makes bright stores. Failure to advertise goes hand in hand with dullness and stagnation.

Advertising brushes away cobwebs and dust, smartens shop windows, quickens the intelligence of salesmen, and lets in the sunlight.

Advertising makes the merchant think of you—of your wants and needs; makes him anxious to serve you to your liking and advantage.

Advertising keeps stock from having birthdays.

Advertising acquaints you with new things, and so brightens your home, your life, your person.

Advertising keeps a business from growing lazy and stupid. Advertising injects good red blood into the arteries of a business, and keeps it healthful and active.

Shop where your wants and needs are uppermost in the mind of the merchant. Shop in the store which reflects you, which you dominate. Shop where your money returns to you in better goods, better values, better service.

Shun the shop that is dumb and dark and dreary; keep away from the shop that never speaks to you, never smiles at you, never bothers about you.

Reward by your custom the merchant who lives to serve you, and who is doing his utmost to build up this community; who takes you into his confidence by means of advertisements in your local newspapers.

Smile back at the shop which smiles at you. Shake hands with it—keep company with it—your favor will be returned to you tenfold.

Advice regarding your advertising problems is available through any good advertising agency, or the Secretary of the Canadian Press Association, Room 503 Lumsden Building. Enquiry involves no obligation on your part—so write, if interested.

KITCHEN LORE

To Wash an Eiderdown Quilt.

To each gallon of hot water have a teaspoonful of soap jelly and one of liquid ammonia. Put all in a tub, beat to a lather and then wash the quilt in this by lifting it up and down, but not rubbing it. Go on with this until the water looks very dirty, and then repeat the process in a clean soap lather, rinsing the quilt well in tepid water between each wash. If possible dry out of doors, shake frequently and the down will by degrees fall out and become as good as new.

One housewife blessed with a large square kitchen has found great comfort and convenience from having the gas range fixed exactly in the middle of the kitchen, instead of at the side, as is usual. Her kitchen, being a large one, required a good many steps to reach tables, cellarway, etc. Now, however, the range is equidistant from each. It gets plenty of light from the windows during the day and at night the gas shines down upon it. When not being used a smooth board cover converts it into a very good extra table.

For cleaning and polishing irons, saturate a cloth with water, wring partially dry, rubbing soap thoroughly on it. Place on several thicknesses of paper. Rub iron over it several times, pressing hard to remove starch and roughness. The result is surprising, as it makes the surface of the iron perfectly clean and smooth.

Cover your buck dinner tablecloth with two squares of white oilcloth of the requisite size, binding the edges firmly with white tape. This will save constant washing of the cloth and keep it thick. Besides, there is not the danger should a hot dish inadvertently slip and go over.

Very few people know that if they shrink stockings before wearing them they may be worn for a long time before holes appear. Simply soak your stockings in very warm water, as in shrinking any other material. Even silk or very fine lisle ones may be worn longer if treated in this manner before wearing.

If you would have your candles last almost twice as long as they usually do, try the following plan: Hold each candle by the wick and give it a coat of white varnish. Then put the candles away for a day or two to harden. The varnish prevents the grease from running and preserves the life of the candle many hours.

When Making Pastry.

Pastry should always be made in the coolest place possible. The hands, utensils and ingredients should all be kept cold or the pastry will become heavy. Always run in the shortening with the tips of the fingers, as they are cooler than the rest of the hand.

When adding the water do it slowly and carefully, so as to avoid making the pastry too dry or too moist.

Handle it as little as possible and use the rolling pin lightly and as seldom as possible. If it is baked in a very hot oven it will expand, and thus become light.

It can be made several hours before it is needed if left standing in a cool place.

Date Cakes.

Rub six ounces of lard or butter into two pounds of flour. Add a pound of dates, stoned and cut into small pieces, a well-beaten egg, and mix well. Moisten with a little milk and bake in a moderate oven for an hour.

Apple Balls.

Pare some large baking apples, and core without dividing them. Into each cavity put a clove, a small piece of butter, and as much sugar as will fill it. Roll out some pastry, and stamp it in circles, press them on the apples, covering them entirely. Lay the balls on a greased tin and bake in a moderately heated oven for about three-quarters of an hour, until the pastry is crisp.

Convent Eggs.

This is a good breakfast dish: Boil four eggs for 11 minutes; put them into cold water. Peel and slice thin one onion; put into frying pan an ounce of butter, and when melted add the onion and fry white. Then add a teaspoonful of flour; mix it well. Add about half a pint of milk to form a nice white sauce; put into it half a teaspoonful of pepper. When nearly done add the eggs, first cut into neat pieces crossways. Toss them up, and when hot serve on buttered toast.

Chocolate Cake.

Ingredients: Four ounces flour, three ounces castor sugar, three ounces butter, two ounces grated chocolate, two eggs, one teaspoonful baking powder. Method: Beat butter to a cream, add sugar, then mix chocolate, flour, and baking powder together. Add the eggs and little vanilla flavouring. Put into shallow tin and bake half an hour. For the icing take six ounces sugar, one ounce grated chocolate, a small piece of butter, two tablespoonfuls water. Put water, chocolate and butter into saucepan, and let it dissolve, then add sugar, and beat well until smooth. Spread over cake when nearly cold.

Tomato Puree.

Fry small slices of onion, carrot, celery, and eschalot in two ounces of butter, and then place in a stewpan with two pounds of fresh tomatoes or tinned ones, three pints of stock, a few pieces of streaky bacon, and seasoning to taste.

Let all boil together for half an hour, then pass through a wire sieve, returning again to the pan. When it boils sprinkle in gradually two ounces of sago, stir in for ten or fifteen minutes and when the sago floats to the top the puree is ready for serving.

This Home-made Cough Syrup Will Surprise You

Stops Even Whooping Cough Quickly. A Family Supply at Small Cost.

Here is a home-made remedy that takes hold of a cough instantly, and will usually cure the most stubborn case in 24 hours. This recipe makes 16 ounces—enough for a whole family. You couldn't buy as much or as good ready-made cough syrup for $2.50.

Mix two cups of granulated sugar with one cup of warm water, and stir two minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a 16-ounce bottle, and add the Sugar Syrup. This keeps perfectly and has a pleasant taste—children like it. Braces up the appetite and is slightly laxative, which helps end a cough.

You probably know the medical value of pine in treating asthma, bronchitis and other throat troubles, sore lungs, etc. There is nothing better. Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, rich in guaiacol and all the natural healing pine elements. Other preparations will not work in this formula.

The prompt results from this inexpensive remedy have made friends for it in thousands of homes in the United States and Canada, which explains why the plan has been imitated often, but never successfully.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

Palpitation of the Heart.

Nervous Prostration, Sleeplessness and Dizzy Spells.

A Long Standing Case Cured By MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE PILLS.

Many people are kept in a state of morbid fear of death, because weak, worn, and miserable, their nerves become unstrung, and they cannot sleep.

To all such sufferers Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will give prompt and permanent relief. Mr. Peter Huband, Tilley, Alta., writes:—"I take great pleasure in writing you a few lines to tell you what your Heart and Nerve Pills have done for me. I had a long standing case of palpitation of the heart, nervous prostration, sleeplessness and dizzy spells. I bought a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and they did me so much good I continued their use until I had used several boxes, and they restored me to health again. They are a great remedy, and I recommend them to all my friends."

Price 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

CREMATION FOR THE DEAD

The custom of cremating the bodies of the dead is growing in favour, but among the masses little is known of the process by which it is accomplished. At the crematory, there are all the sad ceremonies usually attending the interment of the body, but there are no harrowing sights; no smell, no decay; and when the reduction is completed, there remains nothing but the mineral salts of the body, and these are as clean as fine washed sand. At the crematorium, the upper storey is used as a chapel, in the centre of which is the catafalque draped in black, for the reception of the coffin and its contents; below this are the furnaces and other apparatus for the incineration. When a body is to be cremated, the secretary of the association notifies in writing the manager, who attends to having the furnace ready by a certain hour for the incineration of the remains; in each instance, giving the name of the dead. At the appointed hour the cortege arrives, the coffin is removed from the hearse and borne into the chapel, where it is placed on the catafalque. While the funeral services are being held the coffin is noiselessly lowered into the crypt below, where, in the presence of several witnesses, the body is removed and placed upon a grated iron frame beneath which is a metal floor covered with asbestos, upon which the ashes are deposited. The casket is then placed out of sight behind a black curtain, the body is swathed in a heavy cotton cloth which has been soaked in a strong solution of alum, and it is ready for the fire; the receiving frame is pushed upon iron rails to the mouth of the retort into which the corpse is slid; the doors are then closed, and no mortal eye may look upon the body again until it comes forth in the shape of a greyish white mass of ashes. The time occupied in the reduction of an adult varies from one and one-half to two hours. In the case of men, the ashes weigh from five to six pounds; of women, from four and a half to five pounds.

The usual crematory apparatus is composed of a receiver, a furnace, and a chimney. The receiver is an arched brick chamber with a flat bottom, open at each end, one of which communicates with the upper part of the furnace, and the other with the lower part of the chimney; the furnace, which discharges its heat into the receiver, is somewhat spacious, sufficiently so as to produce the necessary heat by means of wood fuel; the chimney is also of sufficient sectional area to remove the products of combustion, and high enough to permit the draft to keep above the gases and to prevent any dispersion of heat or smoke through the apertures of the retort. In order to overcome the possibility of any organic molecules escaping from the shaft, a portion of coke is kept constantly burning upon a grating at the base of the chimney. The products of animal combustion which issue still highly heated from the receiver are subjected to a higher temperature in passing through the blazing coke, and any organic matter which may have resisted or escaped the first combustion is destroyed by the second, and mixes harmlessly with the outer atmosphere.

Before a body may be subjected to incineration the burial certificates from the board of health, as well as the certificate of the attending physicians must be shown, else a heavy fine is lodged against the manager, who is also subjected to a term of imprisonment. The ashes are variously disposed of by the friends or relatives, but usually the flaky remains are inurned and allowed to remain at the crematory. Just as the body is received it is taken from the coffin and placed in the retort; nothing is disturbed. The heat the body is subjected to is of 800 degrees intensity; from the time it is placed in the receiving chamber until it issues a handful of whitish-grey ashes it is enveloped in such a cloud of vapourish smoke that even if the rules of the association permitted an inspection during the process, nothing but this could be seen.

THINGS TO KNOW ABOUT THE HOUSE.

To keep out weevils or any little pests from the small breakfast foods which come in pasteboard boxes, cut off a small portion of one corner of the box and force a cork into the opening made. Another decided advantage about this is that by taking out the cork the food can be poured in a small stream directly from the box to the boiling water without the use of further utensils.

Many housewives believe in boiling new earthenware before using it, as this effectually toughens and hardens it. This is particularly efficacious in the case of ordinary brown kitchenware, the articles being placed in a large pan of cold water which is then brought slowly to the boil. After being allowed to boil for ten minutes, remove the pan and allow the water to cool before taking out the ware.

Flannels that have become yellow can be made to look like new by soaking for two or three hours in a lather made of one-quarter pound of white soap, two tablespoonfuls of carbonate of ammonia dissolved in five gallons of soft water. Boil the soap in water until thoroughly dissolved, then add the other ingredients. Rinse well. This will not injure the flannels in the least.

Wash woollens by hand and in water not too hot, say about 108 degrees, and you never will have them shrink or look bad. Use a good, pure soap to wash them, making a lather, and rubbing some soap on the garments if there are spots. Rinse in water of the same temperature at that in which you washed the articles. Before hanging them up to dry shake them well, and while they are drying shake them again.

How to Keep Cereals.

Keep uncooked cereals, as well as all kinds of crackers on one end of the warming shelf over the range, and you will be surprised at the result. They will always be as crisp as if just from the oven.

A Kitchen Table on Wheels.

Nothing will save more steps than a small light kitchen table on casters. Wheel this to the pantry, place on it all the dishes you will need, push it into the dining-room, and set the table. During the meal whatever dishes must be removed can be placed on this table, and after the meal is over all soiled dishes may be placed on it and pushed to the sink. After they are washed and dried, push the table with the dishes on it to the pantry. This saves at least twenty trips to the pantry and twenty to the dining room and will thus save miles of walking.

BALDNESS CURED

For two or three years my hair had been falling out and getting quite thin, until the top of my head was entirely bald. About four months ago I commenced using Sage and Sulphur. The first bottle seemed to do some good and I kept using it regularly, until now I have used four bottles. The whole top of my head is now fairly covered with hair, and it keeps coming in thicker. I shall keep on using it a while longer, as I notice a constant improvement.

TO THE DEFENCE OF THE BOXERS

No Objection to Men Hitting One Another When There is no Trickery or Brutality.

The London Spectator has this to say of the crusade against the Johnson-Wells bout:—

What we are concerned with principally is the danger of boxing, in which we would include professional boxing, being condemned to disrepute. There is no need on earth why it should be. If brutality and trickery be reasonably provided against we see no objection to men hitting one another as long as they care to endure the blows of their own free will.

We do not call freedom of exchange for physical pain willingly entered into brutality. A trained boxer probably does not suffer more than a runner or an oarsman in a long and hard race. As for the knockout blow which produces temporary paralysis by striking the solar plexus, or the region of the kidneys or liver, or the region over the heart, or the point of the chin (the favorite spot for producing a passing concussion of the brain) it is to be understood that this is common enough in amateur as well as in professional boxing. We cannot remember whether a knockout blow has been delivered in the public school contests, but it has certainly ended some of those between Oxford and Cambridge. It ought to be made clear whether a knockout is really a breach of the peace. If it is it is perhaps possible to provide against it, or to prevent it from becoming the be-all and end-all by penalising it.

Boxing appeals to the British mind in spite of the pain and very moderate danger which may be incidental to it. There must be some reason, and we think it no ignoble reason, why the narrative of fights with fists stick in the memory of all those who read them in literature. Why is the fight with Slogger Williams the best known incident in "Tom Brown's School-days?" Who forgets the fight with the Flaming Tinman in "Lavengro?" Meredith has a prime fight in "Sandra Belloni"; Sir Arthur Conan Doyle in "Rodney Stone." Best of all there is Hazlitt's inimitable essay, "The Fight," in which the antagonists stand out like portraits by Raeburn or Sir Joshua.

What schoolboy does not cheer up over his Homer or Virgil when feats with spears give place to rounds with the fists? Take the games at the funeral of Anchises, for example. The writer can vouch for the delight with which he welcomed the fight between Dares and Entellus, having little expected such an entertainment on such an occasion. Aged and stiff-jointed Entellus, in taking on the gigantic boaster, certainly merited the sympathy which always goes to "the little 'un." Everything was as fair as fair could be except the age of Entellus, and that could not be helped if a gallant victory was to be snatched in the face of odds. Even the blood-stained cesti of Entellus when produced before the fight were ruled out as being too terribly significant. Why should the boaster be frightened into defeat? Let them fight with equally weighted cesti on their hands, said Aeneas, the Eugene Corri of the occasion. Talk of broken glo-es! The cesti must have been nearly as heavy as dumb-bells. The rivals can hardly have hit straight from the shoulder with such things; the fighting must have been rather of the windmill order. Then Entellus almost knocked himself out by a terrific blow which was delivered on the circumambient air. We fear that when he fell the spectators rushed in to pick him up. That was legal in those days. Finally, quite truthfully to life, the old fellow was stung by his misfortune that he redoubled his fury, and would undoubtedly have laid out Dares had not Aeneas decided the match "on points."

PRINCE OF WALES TO VISIT BERLIN

He Will be the Guest of Emperor William and Will Receive Special Honors

It is expected that the Prince of Wales will pay a visit to Berlin shortly after his eighteenth birthday in June next, and that he will stay for a week with the Emperor and the Empress. The Kaiser was extremely anxious to have the Prince visit him a short time ago, but Queen Mary then held that her son was too young and that it would be better to wait another year or so. While the Prince is in the German capital he will be admitted as a Knight of the Black Eagle. This order ranks third in importance among Europoean decorations, being only surpassed by the Garter and the Golden Fleece of Spain. The last-named distinction, by the way, is also likely to be bestowed upon the Prince of Wales by King Alfonso during the course of next year. The visit to Berlin will be in state and entertainments in honor of the young Prince will be arranged for every day, terminating with a review of the troops in the garrison, specially strengthened for the occasion. Before this review takes place the Kaiser proposes to create the Prince a colonel of one of the regiments on parade.

DOGGED PERSEVERANCE

A Glance at the Life of Johnson, the Inventor of Portland Cement.

Isaac C. Johnson, who had attained his hundredth year at death, at Gravesend, England, was the inventor of Portland Cement. His life story was a conspicuous instance of dogged perseverance being crowned with success. Born in 1811 at Vauxhall of working class parents, he received only a humble schooling, and with nothing more than an elementary knowledge of reading, writing, and arithmetic, he began work at a booksellers Craven street, Strand, where he was employed to attend to the bookstall.

Later he entered the service of a firm of cement manufacturers at Nine Elms, where he worked in every branch of the business, and eventually secured an appointment in the office of the manager. Here he first became familiar with mathematical instruments, and, making the best use of his opportunities, he attended a night school for architectural drawing. He became so proficient in this direction that, on becoming a journeyman and marrying, he was able to supplement his income by giving instructions to young jotters.

At length he secured a good appointment as manager of a large cement factory in Kent, and it was while in this employment that he invented the world-famous Portland cement. Mr. Johnson had no secret rule of life, but he made a constant practice of taking plenty of exercise for mind and body. For nearly eighty-two years he abstained from intoxicating drinks, and he had always been frugal in eating. He always, too, had an object in life, and was never without some special branch of study, a language or some interesting scientific research. Almost up to the time of his death his favorite occupation was translation from the Greek, and at his last birthday he had translated half of the Gospel of St. John.

STARTS AT STOCKHOLM

Swedish Olympic Secretary Explains Rules—Best Men Divided in Heats

N. H. Crow, secretary of the Canadian Olympic Committee, received a letter from Krisjan Hellstrom, secretary of the Swedish Olympic Committee, explaining several of the rules which will govern the Olympic meet at Stockholm next summer.

Following are the rules as explained in the letter:

A competitor must personally ask permission from the judges in order to have an attendant accompany him in distance races.

The Marathon course will be a hilly one. No attendance will be allowed to accompany the competitors. Arrangements will be made all along the course for the purpose of giving the competitors any assistance or information they may require.

There will be no penalty for a false start.

The best man from each country will be kept apart in the different heats. The second men in the heats will compete in a race to qualify for the final.

Competitors will not be allowed to use any practice jumps, throws or puts.

In the high jump and pole vault the men will land on turned ground.

In the pole vault a bamboo pole will be used, but only poles with one spike will be allowed. The length of the spike will be eight centimetres maximum.

In the shot-put there will be no toe-hold.

Women and the Franchise

The greater portion of the Pastoral letter of Dr. O'Dwyer, Bishop of Limerick, was devoted to woman's influence at the head of the family, and states that there has been for some years a movement to draw women from their homes and to engage them in occupations which an older generation thought entirely unsuited to them.

KING IS FOND OF THE GLOVES

His Majesty is a Friend of Boxing—Two Princes Are Studing the Art

As a proof of the popularity the sport has always enjoyed with his Majesty, it is stated that King George has shown a keen interest in the attempts to deal a "death blow" to barbarous customs in England. While serving in the fleet nothing afforded him more pleasure than to put up a comparatively small purse—say thirty dollars or so—for a contest between two of the crew, and he often acted as referee in these bouts. Even today the King is very fond of a round with the gloves, and his admiration for the pugilistic art has prompted him to have the Prince of Wales and Prince Albert taught boxing. A short time ago the Prince of Wales was invited to attend a boxing contest at the National Sporting Club, where he appeared thoroughly to enjoy the evening's entertainment, and returned to the Palace to practise some of the tricks he had seen in the contest.

Boxing, as a sport, never had a warmer supporter than the late King Edward, and it is from his father that His Majesty inherits this inclination. The late King was once heard to say that he would not give a fiver of a battler for a boy who was not able to "put his hands up" when the occasion demanded it.

BANQUET OF MUTES

Three Kinds of Language Spoken but Silence Held Sway

One of the merriest and most convivial of London week-end gatherings was a banquet which was conducted in silence. The occasion was a dinner of the National Deaf Club held in the Connaught Rooms, when 110 deaf people sat down for an evening's enjoyment. In faultless evening dress they sat around the long tables and talked freely in "deaf and dumb" language, while on all sides were smiles and happy faces.

There were three kinds of conversation going on all the time—spoken conversation, in which a few could express themselves a little indistinctly, speech with the fingers, and speech by movements of the mouth, comonly known as lip-reading.

After dinner there were three speeches with two interpreters.

PRINCE OLAF

The little son of the King and Queen of Norway, has announced that his one ambition in life is to be an aviator. His grandmother, Queen Alexandra, of England, has promised to help him, and sent the young heir apparent a toy aeroplane, with which the Prince spends most of his time when not engaged by tutors and nurses.

MARRIAGE OF COUSINS

Evidence Against it Has Been Gathered by Lady Elderton.

Food for thought for cousins who contemplate marrying one another, is to be found in a little brochure just published entitled: "On the Marriage of First Cousins," by Miss Ethel Elderton, a co-worker with Professor Karl Pearson at the Galton Laboratory for National Eugenics, London University. The guiding principle in forbidding marriages between near kin, such as uncle and niece, aunt and nephew, or grandparent and grandchild, is their resemblance. Miss Elderton accordingly set herself to determine whether cousins are as much alike as any of these pairs of relatives. From nearly six thousand pairs of cousins she endeavors to measure the degree of resemblance in health, intellect, success, temper, and temperament. The likenesses are found to be greater in intelligence and health, and least in temper. Roughly speaking, the general resemblance between cousins is about half that between brother and sister, and practically the same as that shown by statistics of uncles and nieces and of aunts and nephews. "If the undesirability of marriage between certain degrees is founded on the closeness of resemblance between individuals," says Miss Elderton, "the law which forbids the marriage of uncle and aunt with niece and nephew should also restrict the marriage of first cousins." The offspring of cousin marriages appear to be particularly liable to be deaf mutes. There seems little doubt that if there is any deaf mutism in a stock, a cousin marriage, even when both parties are free from the disease, is most dangerous in the offspring."

BIT OF CANADA IN KENT, TRAIN BOYS FOR FARM

An Exact Replica of an Ontario Homestead Opened by the Fagan Homes

"A Bit of Canada in England" is the striking title chosen for the new training farm intended to receive 60 boys rescued from the perils of a street life through "Mr. Fagan's Homes" to test and prepare them for emigration to Canada.

This farm is to be an exact replica of an Ontario homestead. The houses, in which the boys will live in families of 12 or so, the barn, and other out buildings, will be constructed on Canadian plans, and the machinery, implements, harness, tools, etc., will be imported from Canada, and in every detail as far as possible the training farm will be worked on Canadian lines.

An ideal property for the purpose has been secured, extending to about 34 acres of varied character—arable, pasture, and woodland—at Goudhurst, overlooking the beautiful Weald of Kent. The cost of the land, with buildings, implements, stock, etc., is estimated at £7,000. Towards this £1,400 is still required to enable Mr. Fagan to claim conditional promises of £4,000 and start the training farm at once.

A very gratifying feature of the emigration work in connection with these homes during the last 26 years has been the gratitude of "old boys" in Canada. For the last 23 years they have sent back a New Year thank-offering, voluntarily contributed out of their savings, towards the support of their old Home. Last year the amount was no less than £664, making a total of £8,638 contributed in this way during the last 23 years towards the support of their old Home, and 600 "old boys" have now gained their place on the roll of honor through repaying the £10 laid out on their emigration so as to "help to give some other poor fellow the same good chance in life."

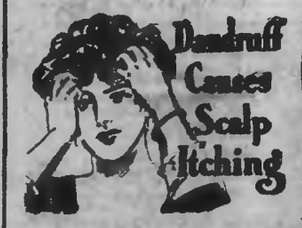
EMANCIPATION OF WAITERS

Those in London and Paris Wish to Keep Out the Germans.

A delegation of English waiters from the Royal British Waiters' Society, London, will shortly pay a visit to Paris as a sign of sympathy with the campaign being carried on by the French Hotel Employés Syndicate against the invasion of hotels and restaurants in France by foreign, notably German, waiters. After a number of noisy street manifestations the syndicate agitation is now taking more definite shape in the form of a Bill which will be introduced in the Chamber. The law, if passed will oblige hotel proprietors to employ eight Frenchmen out of every ten on their staff. A tax which will be practically prohibitive will be imposed on employer and employé for every foreigner engaged above that proportion. There are between six and seven hundred French waiters seeking employment in Paris today, says M. Giraud, secretary of the syndicate. "Many of them speak three languages, and quite a number have a knowledge of bookkeeping, shorthand and typewriting. But the first question asked on their applying for a situation is: 'Are you French?' Then they are told they are not wanted. The German hotel keepers will only take absolutely a free hand in France. He has no tax to pay, and in order to learn the language, he works for wages on which our men cannot live. Then he returns to Germany, and with his experience, builds up a big business, eventually to pay us another business, but this time to start an hotel of his own. The French waiter in Germany is heavily taxed. English waiters in London are even worse off. Recent statistics show that London contains no fewer than 100,000 German hotel employés."



Clogs the pores of the scalp, prevents the hair from obtaining proper nourishment—causes it to fade and eventually to fall out. And besides, it's irritating and annoying to have your scalp itching and burning all the time.

If you want to get rid of the Dandruff germ—to stop the annoying itching and burning—to have a really clean and healthy scalp, get a bottle of HAY'S HAIR HEALTH to-day—prove to yourself what a satisfaction it is to have hair health.

Danderine

Stops Falling Hair and Destroys Dandruff

Makes the Hair Grow Long, Heavy and Luxuriant and We Can Quickly Prove It

If You Wish to Double the Beauty of Your Hair at Once, Just Get a 25 Cent Bottle and Try This Simply try a Danderine Hair Cleanse if you wish to immediately double the beauty of your hair with little trouble and at a cost not worth mentioning—just moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and draw it carefully through your hair, taking one small strand at a time, this will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt or any excessive oil—In a few moments you will be amazed. Your hair will be wavy, fluffy and abundant and possess an incomparable softness, lustre and luxuriance, the beauty and shimmer of true hair health.

Besides beautifying the hair, one application of Danderine dissolves every particle of Dandruff; cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching and falling hair.

Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. It's exhilarating, stimulating and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow abundantly long, strong and beautiful. It at once imparts a sparkling brilliancy and velvety softness to the hair, and a few weeks' use will cause new hair to sprout all over the scalp. Use it every day for a short time, after which two or three times a week will be sufficient to complete whatever growth you desire.

You can surely have pretty, soft, lustrous hair, and lots of it, if you will just get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and try it as directed.

A DARING THIEF

But he was too confident of his own ability to deceive.

A German civil engineer, a man of forty, belonging to a very highly respected family, who lived an irreproachable life in a fashionable apartment house with his wife and children, has been found to be a Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde in real life. He very often left Berlin ostensibly on extended business trips, but in reality to exercise the fascinating profession of a railroad robber. A very prudent and skilful one he was, too, for, though reports tallying as to his appearance and methods came in from all parts of Prussia, he escaped detection for more than two years. A perfected spirit of pride or daring spurred his undoing. He relieved a traveller of jewelry worth $5,000, and promptly went to Nurnberg, where the victim lived, called on him, and offered to procure the return of the stolen property for a consideration. The victim communicated with the police and the robber was arrested in the bosom of his entirely unsuspecting wife and family. A search of the flat disclosed valuables worth between $25,000 and $30,000.

THE DUCHESS OF NORFOLK

A striking example of a wife's popularity aiding her husband can be seen in London in the persons of the Duke and Duchess of Norfolk. The former aversion of the Duke for attending big social functions is well known but the Duchess, who has always been a favorite, has finally taught him to enjoy society, so that he is now a regular and enthusiastic attendant at all important events. As a result, honors have recently been heaped upon his head in most unexpected manners, and he has discovered that he has the same qualities to incite popularity in society that his wife the Duchess possesses. He has been elected president of the Sussex Record Society, which is doing important work in copying and printing ancient church registers, and also has been appointed president of the Council of the Society of Yorkshiremen in London.

NASAL CATARRH

Responsible for Much Deafness, Hoarseness, Bronchitis and Stomach Trouble.

Medicated Air Will Cure

These are common diseases, but no less dangerous and difficult to cure on that account. In our climate the weather changes quickly. We are careless. Disease attacks us before we know it. A large majority of our people have nose, lung, or throat troubles, and find it hard to get cured. It's remarkable with what tenacity both the medical profession and the laity adhere to the old theory that these diseases can be reached and combated by dosing. And this despite the fact that failure to cure ninety-nine cases out of a hundred attends this mode of treatment.

STOMACH MEDICINE CAN'T CURE

At best it is a roundabout way of trying to reach the disease which is in the air passages of the throat, nose, bronchial tubes and lungs. Leave the stomach alone—use a remedy that will carry into the minutest air cell into the tiniest cavities of the affected organs.

LIQUID REMEDIES DANGEROUS

Doctors say only "Catarrhozone" can cure—you inhale it along with the air you breath—it goes where the living disease germs are gnawing in your system—it kills these germs—heals, soothes. It CURES.

CATARRHOZONE GUARANTEED

Wouldn't it be wise to use Catarrhozone now—to-day—and be cured permanently?

You can send the soothing vapor of the pine woods, the richest balsams and healing essences, right to the cause of your trouble by inhaling Catarrhozone.

Little drops of wonderful curative power are distributed through the whole breathing apparatus in two seconds.

Like a miracle, that's how Catarrhozone works in bronchitis, catarrh, colds, and irritable throat. You simply breath its oily, fragrant vapor and every trace of congestion and disease flees as before fire.

So safe, infants can use it; so sure to cure, doctors prescribe it, so beneficial in preventing winter ills, no person can afford to do without Catarrhozone. Used in thousands of cases without failure. Try it yourself! 25c 50c, $1.00 sizes. Sold by all dealers, or by mail from the Catarrhozone Company, Kingston, Ont.

WRITERS ATTEMPT TO DEFINE HUMOR

Much Learning and Ingenuity in the Replies--Some Declare Task Impossible

A writer in La Revue, Paris, inviting representative humorists in various countries to define "humor," and publishes the results of his inquiry in that periodical. Many of his correspondents declare the task to be an impossible one, while others bring much learning and ingenuity to bear on the required definition.

Eight well-known English writers contribute their ideas on the subject. Mr. G. B. Shaw, whose own humor M. Dekobra says is saturated with "ferocious irony," tersely dismisses the question in these words: "Humor cannot be defined. It is a primary substance which makes us laugh. You might as well try to prove a dogma."

Mr. Jerome K. Jerome writes: "I do not think humor can be explained. I would define it as that which strikes us by its drollery."

This M. Dekobra remarks is evidently "the idle fellow."

Mr. Owen Seaman, editor of Punch, takes the matter much more seriously, and devotes two and a half pages of print to his conceptions of humor, pointing out that it depends largely on contrast, incongruity, and a subjective sense of superiority. In North America one of its leading characteristics is exaggeration, while in England it finds expression in implications equivalent to the reserve strength of an athlete. It embraces irony in the largest sense, and the art of delicate suggestion.

The pun, Mr. Seaman reminds us, is now out of fashion in England, but humorously pedantic effects are often obtained by the employment of literally translated French words or words of Greek and Latin origin. An Englishman is more afraid of ridicule than a Frenchman yet he will turn the laugh against himself or against his national institutions, thus anticipating the ridicule he dreads. In English literature laughter and tears are more closely allied than in that of other countries.

Mr. Anstey suggests this definition: "A delicious conception of the incongruous," but he admits it is not complete. The particular humor appreciated by different races is, he thinks largely a matter of climate.

Mr. Zangwill says: "Humor is the smile in the look of wisdom."

Mr. Pett Ridge declares that the most modern tendency in England is to laugh at our heroes of romance, instead of laughing with them. A good story, he says, should have an unexpected ending. Every country has its own humor, and thinks it the best. Jokes which make an American laugh till he cries leave an Englishman unmoved, and some French comic papers do not even make him smile. The English have more affinity with the Germans.

Mr. R. C. Carton, the playwright, considers that humor is to our existence what oxygen is to the air we breathe. It is the best disinfectant that science has not discovered. A sense of humor is the real philosopher's stone, turning to gold all the little worries of life, especially those of others.

Mr. W. L. Courtenay, like Mr. Seaman, points out the close affinity between laughter and tears. He sums up humor as the minute observation of life, with its alternations of light and shade, and the power to drive away melancholy by an irony, now grave which shows the insignificant brevity that moves the human heart.

A REAL NEWSPAPER

Mayor Gaynor, of New York, Gives His Ideas.

To a series of questions propounded to him on the subject, Mayor Gaynor, New York, issued an extended statement, outlining his idea of an ideal newspaper. Frequently in his speeches the Mayor has criticised the press.

His Honor thinks that: A newspaper should show that there is a gentleman in control of it.

A newspaper should be true—its motives fair.

If the facts are not known an editorial should not be written.

He would confine expressions of opinion to the editorial columns.

Headlines should be accurate and introductions stripped of verbiage.

It would be a good thing if all articles were signed.

The news columns should give all political news without regard to party.

Readers do not want all the testimony in divorce trials and sensational criminal cases.

A decent, well-bred official should not be caricatured as a ruffian and a loafer.

No influence from advertisers should control news or editorial columns.

"HOW IT STRIKES ME."

Even the man with an iron will may discover that it gets rusty.

The corkscrew is a poor key to the situation.

THE KRUPP CELEBRATION

The Kaiser Will Probably Participate in the Centenary.

The Kaiser has announced his intention of going to Essen to participate in the centenary celebration of the Krupp works. He has always taken a deep interest in both the business and private affairs of the Krupp family. He recognizes the immense importance of the Essen works which, for the most part, supplies cannon and armorplate for the army and navy. The Emperor and his sons are frequent guests at Villa Hugel, the picturesque country seat of the Krupps just outside the town of Essen. Herr Friedrich Krupp, father of the present "cannon queen," Frau Bertha von Krupp Bohlen-Halbach, was a personal intimate of the Emperor's. His Majesty went to Essen for Herr Krupp's funeral in 1903, but there is still a myth in the town to the effect that the Kaiser followed an empty coffin to the grave, for thousands of good Essenors have never believed that Herr Friedrich Krupp is dead. They will assure you, with a wealth of persuasive detail, that he is a mysterious fugitive living in lonely solitude on some remote island in the sea, and that some day, in his own good time, he will turn up again.

ATTACKED FINE ARTS SECRETARY.

The discussion on the Fine Arts Estimates in the Chamber of Paris led to attacks on the venerable Under-Secretary for Fine Arts, M. Dujardin. M. Charles Benoist took him severely to task for the disappearance of La Gioconda, which has been stolen from the Louvre, he declared, not because the guardians were insufficient in quantity but because they were lacking in quality. Waste, anarchy, and indiscipline reigned in the Fine Arts Department.

WAS TROUBLED WITH Headache AND Constipation.

After Suffering For Two Years Was Cured By BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS.

Headache of whatever nature is nearly always symptomatic of other diseased conditions, rather than a disease itself, but in most cases a disordered stomach, constipation, or bad circulation is the chief source of the difficulty. Burdock Blood Bitters removes the cause of the trouble through its cleansing, strengthening and tonic action on the stomach, liver, bowels and blood. Mr. Wm. Redmond, Cardigan Bridge, P. E. I., writes:—"I have been troubled with headache and constipation for about two years. After trying every doctor I knew, a friend advised me to try Burdock Blood Bitters. I found myself, after using one bottle, getting much better, and after using three bottles I was completely cured.

"After then I was on a visit, and found my cousin very sick, and the doctor told her there was something wrong with her head. I told her to use Burdock Blood Bitters and she was cured in a short time. I can safely recommend it to all."

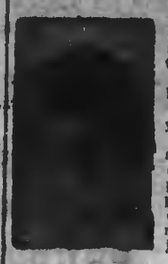
THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

"ISN'T she just the prettiest girl that ever happened?" enthused Molly, the little stenographer Miss, as she turned away from the window where she had been flattening her nose against the pane to watch the visiting lady depart down the street.

The lady-who-always-knows-somehow looked up quickly from her sewing. "Luckier than Ruth?" she asked.

"Why, how can you ask such a question, big sister?" cried Molly. "You know Ruth's husband isn't half so nice nor half so good to her, and that she has to work hard and do without things and just think what she used to have at home. And Gretchen—why, Gretchen has the nicest, kindest, best husband that ever was. He simply adores her and denies himself everything to give her what she wants. What do you mean by asking if I think she's as lucky as Ruth. You know you said yourself just the other day that you thought Gretchen's husband positively spoiled her."



"I know I did," said the lady, "and didn't you say you thought so, too?"

"Of course I did," acquiesced Molly. "Anybody can see that with half an eye. He waits on her by inches, and he makes such a fuss over every little ache and pain that she has that she's getting to be a perfect hypochondriac. She used to be so sympathetic and interested in other people, and now she isn't interested in much of anything but herself. And she's never half so jolly or happy as she used to be, either."

"I wonder if it's being married that makes people that way?" mused the lady-who-always-knows-somehow. "Has Ruth lost her interest in other people, too?"

"Goodness, no," from Molly. "Why, Ruth is as much changed as Gretchen, only the other way round. You know she was the only girl in the family and her father and mother and those four older brothers simply spoiled her. It was really horrid the way she let them wait on her. But since she married George I can tell you she waits on herself, and him, too. And she takes care of the baby and does almost all the work in that big house, and she gets along with his mother and sister splendidly, and they say they are tartars. Perhaps if Gretchen had a baby she'd be different. And Ruth seems so much happier than she used to, and so much less egotistical and more interested in other people. It's really quite wonderful the way she has changed."

The lady-who-always-knows-somehow folded up her sewing with a funny little smile on her face.

"Molly," she said, "you tell me that because Ruth doesn't have quite such an easy life as she used to she has developed in character and grown sweeter and more lovable and is much happier. And you say Gretchen has been spoiled by a too-adoring husband, and has grown egotistical and self centred, and that in spite of all he does for her, she doesn't seem as happy as Ruth. And yet you call Gretchen much luckier. I think, Molly——"

"Oh, I see, big sister," interrupted Molly laughing. "I think it isn't any fun to argue with you when you make a fellow convict himself right out of his own mouth. But, I tell you what, big sister, I'd rather have Gretchen's husband, just the same, and see if I wouldn't know enough to be lucky."

And the lady-who-always-knows-somehow laughed as we do at those we love.

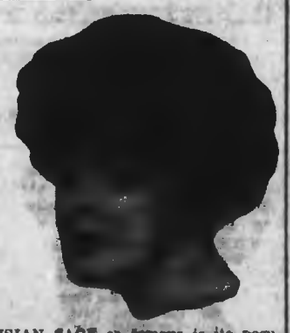
Glorious Hair For Women

Your Money Back Says Wm. Madill if PARISIAN SAGE isn't the Most Delightful Hair Dressing, Grower, Beautifier and Dandruff Remover You ever saw.



Try it ladies on that fair and square basis. Surely you don't want to experiment with common commercial tonics, when a large bottle of PARISIAN SAGE costs but 50 cents.

There is a reason for the phenomenal sale of PARISIAN SAGE since it was first introduced into America, and the sales this year are breaking all records.

And the reason is plain to all: PARISIAN SAGE does just what it is advertised to do.

There is no reason whatever why any man or woman should fail to take advantage of the above generous offer.

But one thing that has made PARISIAN SAGE so famous is its peculiar power to turn the harsh, unattractive hair that many women possess into luxuriant and radiant hair in a short time. Women of refinement the country over are using it and it never disappoints.

Sold by leading dealers everywhere and in Peterborough by Wm. Madill for 50 cents a large bottle. The girl with Auburn hair is on every carton.

Forty Miners Killed.

Fort Smith, Ark., March 21.—Forty miners are known to have been killed as the result of an explosion in mine No. 2 of the San Bois Coal Co. at McCurtain, Okla., thirty-seven miles west of here, yesterday and hope that forty-seven others entombed in the mine are alive has been practically abandoned. Thirteen of the miners escaped shortly after the explosion occurred. Several of these, however, are so badly injured that it is believed they will die.

Whether gas or coal dust caused the explosion has not been determined.

Government experts expressed the opinion last night that all of the men imprisoned are dead, and seventy-five coffins were ordered.

No Woman Suffrage In Massachusetts

Boston, March 21.—Woman suffrage and the election of U. S. Senators by direct vote were defeated in the Senate yesterday by close votes.

The Senate went on record against woman suffrage by a vote of 17 to 14, after a spirited debate. The galleries were crowded with women.

The resolution urging a Senatorial direct vote amendment was lost by a vote of 19 to 14.

ORANGEMEN MEET.

Ontario East Grand Lodge Finds No Flags to Greet It.

Kingston, March 21.—A big rumpus was raised at the opening of the grand lodge of Eastern Ontario yesterday afternoon, because the Union Jack was not raised over the city hall, where meetings of the order are being held. According to reports some of the members were quite hot under the collar, and at the meeting to-day the matter was again taken up and there promises to be something doing.

There are two flagstaffs on the city buildings, but they were bare yesterday, and the visiting Orangemen could not understand why the flags were not raised in their honor.

The grand lodge will remain in session until Friday morning. An official welcome was extended the visitors by Mayor Hoag.

Lt.-Col. John Hughes, grand master, and E. H. McLean of Newcastle replied.

A motion, of which notice was given, calls attention to the evidence produced by Orange lodges, showing "gross and widespread violation of school law," assertions which, it is claimed, are borne out in Dr. Merchant's report on bilingual schools.

The resolution concludes: "Therefore, we, the Right Worshipful Lodge of Ontario East, do protest in most solemn and emphatic manner, against special privileges which the French are granted by regulations of the Department of Education in the Province of Ontario, which are being used to drive English-speaking people out of Ontario, as they were driven out of eastern townships by the same agency; we respectfully request the Government of the Province of Ontario to the fact of such laws, and make such amendments to regulations of the Education Department as will make it illegal and impossible for the French language to be used in any of the public or separate schools of the Province of Ontario."

F. M. Clark, Belleville, grand secretary, submitted his report, which showed that the increase in membership has been the largest in many years. The increase will amount to 8 1-2 per cent. The report of Grand Treasurer Bro. Robert Gordon was also an encouraging one.

MURDERS HER BABES.

Toronto Woman Ends Their Lives and Her Own With Gas.

Toronto, March 21.—Four lives were wiped out some time yesterday by gas, through the insane act of Mrs. James Orr of 28 Sackville place. Driven to despondency as a result, it is believed, of visiting seances, she murdered her three children, committed suicide herself by twisting the cap off a "blind" gas tube and allowing the fumes to escape. As to the exact time the tragedy happened, the police cannot determine. When James Orr, the husband returned from work at six o'clock last night, he found his wife and three children, fully attired, lying in one bed. All were lifeless and the bedroom filled with gas poison.

The dead are: Mrs. Emily Orr, aged 43 years; Mable, aged eight years; Margaret, aged six years, and Willie, aged four years. These children were the entire offspring of a couple who had been married for about ten years.

MRS. EMILY ORR.

Once before, the woman in a fit of melancholy, tried to end her life by inhaling gas, but the husband intervened in time. This was two years ago. Since then, it is said, that she had been very despondent, and spiritualism drove it from bad to worse. Living with the Orr family was an old friend, Mrs. M. E. June, who had left the house early in the morning. She was known as "Grandma" to the household, and was a devotee, so it is said, of mediums. Mrs. June and the dead woman had had a little squabble before the former left the house, in which Mrs. Orr threatened to end her existence.

When the bodies were found, a letter was also discovered addressed to Mrs. June, in Mrs. Orr's handwriting. The writing, which was hardly legible, was scrawled and looked as though she was in a frantic condition, probably owing to the approach of death.

CONTRACTED HEAVY COLD

Was In Bed Two Months.

DOCTORS DID NOT SEEM TO DO HER ANY GOOD.

A cold, however slight, should never be neglected, for if it is not treated in time it will, in all possibility, lead to bronchitis, pneumonia, asthma, or some other serious throat or lung troubles.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup contains the lung healing virtues of the Norway Pine tree, which, combined with other absorbent, expectorant and soothing medicines, makes it without a doubt the best remedy for all coughs and colds.

Miss N. McCumber, St. Martin's N.B., writes:—"In January last I contracted a heavy cold which kept me in bed nearly two months, and the doctors didn't seem to be able to do me any good. I tried several proprietary medicines, but all in vain. One day a friend advised me to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and when I had taken three bottles I was completely cured, and I feel as well to-day as I ever did, and I am sure my lungs are once more sound, thanks to that wonderful remedy."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25 cents.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, March 20.—The foreign demand for Manitoba spring wheat was fairly good and bids in some cases from the continent were higher, while those from the United Kingdom were unchanged and a fair business could have been worked, but the new clause steamship agents now insert in the bill of lading, tends to restrict business very much. The local market for oats is steadier at a decline of 1c per bushel. Demand for flour continues good from all sources and the market is active. The millfeed situation is unchanged, supplies being scarce and prices firm. A fair trade is passing in butter. Cheese is quiet. Eggs active and firm under a good demand. Dressed hogs have scored an advance of 25c.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, March 20.—At the Canadian Pacific Live Stock Market the receipts of live stock for the week ending March 18 were 280 cattle, 125 sheep and lambs, 1685 hogs and 1503 calves, and the supply on the market to-day consisted of 600 cattle, 100 sheep and lambs, 1125 hogs and 1400 calves.

There was no important change in the condition of the market for cattle to-day, prices being firmly maintained at the advance noted on Monday, on account of the fact that the supply was small again and as buyers in most cases wanted some beef to carry them over for the balance of the week the demand was good and a fairly active trade was done.
